Society Gay at the National Capital

Continual Round of Luncheons, Teas, Dinners and Dances Occupy the Smart Set.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 23.—(Special Correspondence.)—With the weather as an incompensable ally to every hostess, life at the Capital this week has been exceedingly gay. In fact, there has been a continual round of luncheons, teas, dinners and dances, and many have been tempted to open air pleasures by the sudden change from wintry blasts with knee-deep snow to balmy air and clear streets. With so many people out, one is inclined to wonder who is left to keep open house, until reminded of the way society does its calling at the Capital.

The city is divided into four sections, and each section has its day when the up-to-date hostess may be at home to her friends. On that day, the resident streets in her vicinity are open to well-dressed women and handsome equipages. The next day the scene is changed, and another series of streets is in gala dress as though all the world had a holiday. This may have been tempted to open air pleasures by the sudden change from wintry blasts with knee-deep snow to balmy air and clear streets. With so many people out, one is inclined to wonder who is left to keep open house, until reminded of the way society does its calling at the Capital.

Another instance of Franco-American ties was the demonstration of the Mulot method for the education of the blind, given on Saturday morning in the reading-room for the sightless at the Library of Congress. Mile. Mulot, the inventor of the system, was present, as were also her assistant, Miss Kloss, the English teacher whom she brought to this country from her school in Angers; Andre, the little blind boy who was with her recently in St. Louis; Dr. Edward Gallaudet, president of the Columbia College for the Deaf and Dumb; Representative George A. Loud, Viscount de Chambrun, the French Embassy; Mr. J. des Garennes, Professor Collins, Dr. Thomas O. Shields, Dr. George M. Savage, Miss Anne Hitchcock, Mrs. Collier, Mrs. Belva Lockwood, Miss Eliza Griffin, superintendent of the reading-room for the blind.

The Mulot method is based upon the psychology of the blind, and places the sightless in communication with the seeing by means of a marvelous system of crotchography, the importance of which can hardly be estimated. From 10,000 photographic prints submitted by the leading camerists of the world, John L. Fargie, Kenyon Cox, Child Haseman, William Chase, W. A. Coffin, D. W. Tryon, Douglas Volk and other distinguished painters, selected the 26 prints for the first American Photographic Salon, which opened in this city with a brilliant reception in the Coronado gallery of art. After a two weeks' exhibition here the display will be shown in Chicago, Boston, Toronto, San Francisco and Portland, Or. This great showing of pictorial photographs of National and international importance, is being held under the auspices of the Capital Camera Club. He is directly in charge of the American Federation of Photographic Societies, of which Mr. Louis Fleckenstein, of Minnesota, is director, and the Misses Parish, of St. Louis, secretaries.

Among the contributors is Mr. John T. Diebis, of San Francisco, who is represented by two attractive seashore studios, and Miss Laura Adams Arason, of Oakland, who has "The Laurels," a dainty picture in which there is a majesty of simplicity, poetry and art. Miss Nellie Constantine, Indiana, has several good things. Where "Rufus Sleeps," showing the interior of the Winchester Cathedral, is sent by W. A. Clark, of England. The at-homes of the week have assumed the proportion of large and delightful teas, beginning with Mrs. Dewey's second afternoon reception and ending with a dozen smart companies around Dupont circle and Upper Connecticut avenue.

The II Congressional ladies of the Dewey received together, as in former years, and the assistance of their group of attractive daughters added a pleasant feature to the afternoon. Mrs. and the Misses Daniels are at the Hamilton this season, and are, therefore, observing Wednesday. This week they were assisted in receiving by Mesdames Bowersock, of Kansas; Brown and Jenkins, of Wisconsin; Conner, of Iowa; Littlefield, of Maine; Shall of Pennsylvania, and Southard, of Ohio. Mrs. Claude A. Swanson's home on Sixteenth street was charmingly decorated with cut flowers and Southern smilax on the occasion of her second large at-home held on Tuesday. In the dining-room a bevy of girls dispensed the generous hospitality for which the hostess' state is famous. Mrs. Swanson was further assisted by her sister, Mrs. Henry Bohmer, of Philadelphia. The Woman's Army and Navy League gave a tea at the soldier's Sailors' Marines' Club on Saturday afternoon, from 3 to 6. The reception committee consisted of Mrs. Stenberg, president of the league; Mrs. Taft, Mrs. Morton, Mrs. Chaffee, Mrs. G. F. Elliott, Mrs. Buckingham, Mrs. Higginson, Mrs. Kelton, Mrs. Aulick Palmer, Mrs. Alexander and Miss Freeman.

Crusade Begun Against Divorce

San Francisco Churches Will All Work Together—Metropolitan Opera Company Will Arrive in April.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Jan. 25.—(Special Correspondence.)—A new crusade against divorce has been inaugurated by the ministers of the San Francisco churches. The fight is not to be carried on single-handed by any one denomination, but all will join in the common cause. The movement was inaugurated on Monday when Rev. Frederick W. Clampett, of Trinity Episcopal Church, appeared before a meeting of Methodist ministers, outlined his plans and asked their aid. Dr. Clampett cited the case of Mrs. Tevis and Hart McKee, and used it as his theme. He declared both to be a menace to society. The preacher then roundly scolded his brethren who act for such couples for the sake of the handsome fee which is generally forthcoming. Dr. Clampett secured the cooperation of the Methodist body, and later was able to announce that the Congregationalists and Presbyterians had offered to join forces with him.

The new Nevada-Wells-Fargo National Bank, which is the name taken by the combination of the Nevada and the Wells-Fargo Bank in this city, has drawn to itself two of the best-known financiers of the country—E. H. Harriman and John D. Rockefeller. It is said that Harriman will take a place on the directorate, while Rockefeller will use the institution as his Pacific Coast financial agent. This arrangement is the result of the trip of I. W. Hellman, who is at present in the East seeking to enlarge the scope of his Pacific Coast interests. Although the season of Italian opera is little more than half over, the enthusiasts are eagerly looking forward to the Corsican season. The Metropolitan Opera-house troupe is scheduled to open in San Francisco on April 5 and to continue for eleven days. According to the present plans, but four different operas will be presented here, "Parsifal," "Lucia Di Lammermoor," "Les Huguenots" and "La Gioconda." Among the singers who will travel with the company are: Mesdames Nordica,
