of distinguished guests. By this time all were standing and nothing could be heard above the roar of thunderous welcome. Immediately following came, in arm in arm, the members of the committee of arrangements...

At a sign from Chief Justice Fuller the clerk of the Supreme Court stepped forward, holding a Bible. A hush fell over the crowd. The President raised his right hand and the oath to support the laws and Constitution of the United States was reverently taken amid deep silence.

Secretary Hay's Gift.

On the third finger of President Roosevelt's left hand during the inaugural ceremonies was a heavily embossed gold seal ring. The ring was a present this morning from Secretary of State John Hay...

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

He Speaks on Our Duty as a Nation and Problems of Greatness.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—President Roosevelt, in his inaugural address, spoke as follows:

My Fellow Citizens: No people on earth have more cause to be thankful than ours and this is said reverently, in no spirit of boastfulness in our own strength, but with gratitude to the Giver of Good who has blessed us with the conditions which have enabled us to achieve so large a measure of well-being and happiness.

Act in Spirit of Nation's Makers.

Yet, after all, though the problems are new, though the tasks set before us differ from the tasks set before our fathers who founded and preserved this Republic, the spirit in which these tasks must be undertaken and these problems faced, in our duty to be well done, remains essentially unchanged.

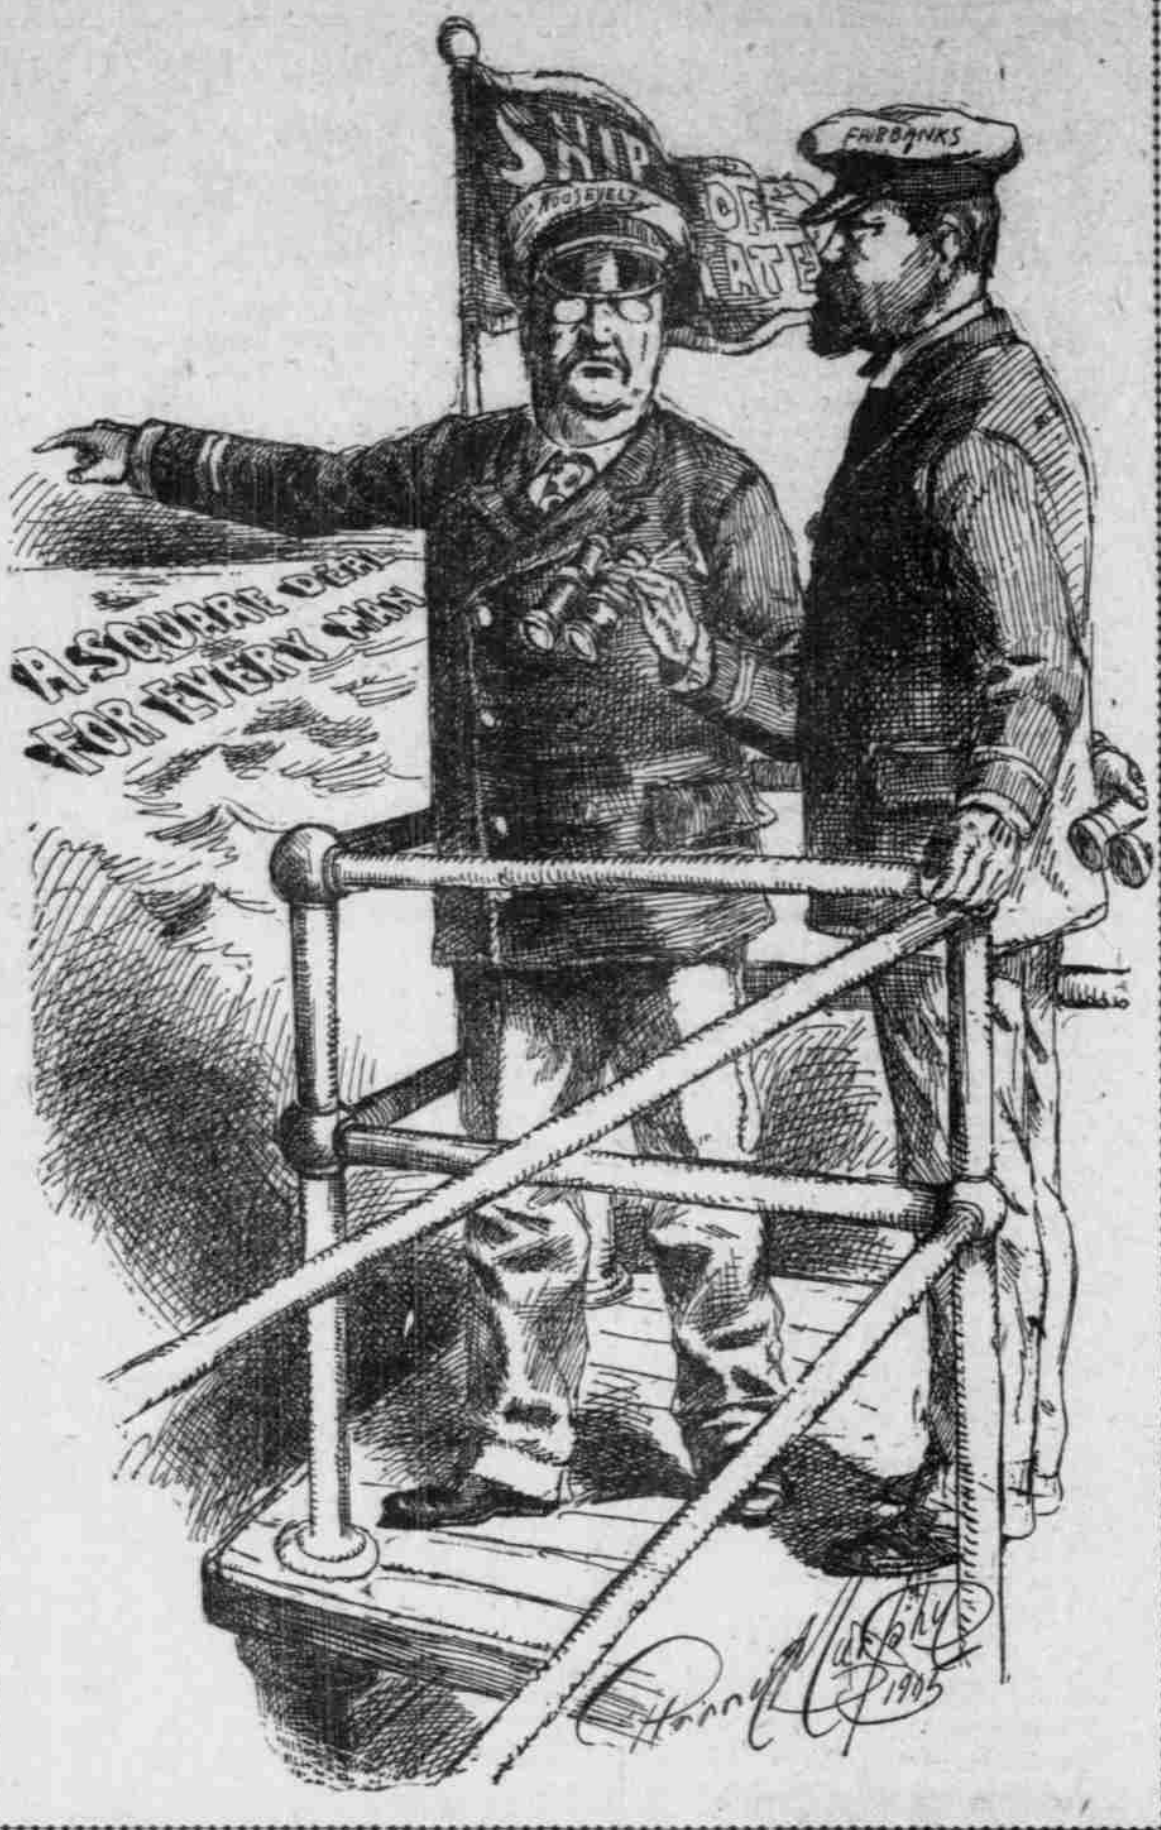

Our Duty as a Great Nation.

Much has been given to us, and much will rightfully be expected from us. We have duties to others and duties to ourselves. Toward all other nations we have become a great nation, forced by the force of its greatness into relations with the other nations of the earth.

Problems of Internal Growth.

Our relations with the other powers of the world are important; but still more important are our relations among ourselves. Such growth in wealth, in population and in power as this nation has seen during the century and a quarter of its national life is inseparably accompanied by a like growth in the problems which are ever before every nation that rises to greatness.

ROOSEVELT—"THAT SHALL BE OUR COURSE" government throughout the world will look to its foundations; and therefore our responsibility is heavy, to ourselves, to the world as it is today, and to the generations yet unborn. There is no good reason why we should fear the future, but there is every reason why we should face it bravely, neither hiding from ourselves the gravity of the problems before us nor fearing to approach these problems with the unflinching, unfinching purpose to solve them aright.

Act in Spirit of Nation's Makers.

Yet, after all, though the problems are new, though the tasks set before us differ from the tasks set before our fathers who founded and preserved this Republic, the spirit in which these tasks must be undertaken and these problems faced, in our duty to be well done, remains essentially unchanged.

FROM WHITE HOUSE TO CAPITOL

Procession to Scene of Inauguration With Military Escort.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The White House was astir earlier than usual this morning, and after a hurried breakfast the President's household began active preparations for the day's important events.

Rough Riders Form Escort.

The Rough Riders, in service khaki, as they spurred their horses to positions at the sides of the President's carriage as it passed out the east gate, showed by their bronzed faces, sinewy figures and their careless grace and ease in the saddle the free life they had led on the Western plains.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

Born in New York, October 27, 1858. Son of Theodore and Martha (Holt) Roosevelt. Graduated from Harvard, 1880. Married in 1883 Alice Lee, who died in 1884. Married in 1896 Edith Kermit Carow. Member of New York Legislature, 1882-84. Delegate to National Republican Convention, 1884. Resided on ranch near Medora, N. D., 1884-85. Republican candidate for Mayor of New York (defeated), 1894. National Civil Service Commissioner, 1895-97. President of New York Police Board, 1897-98. Assistant Secretary of the Navy, 1897-98. Lieutenant-Colonel of First United States Cavalry Volunteers (Rough Riders), in Spanish-American War, 1898. Promoted Colonel for gallantry at battle of San Juan. Mustered out September, 1898. Governor of New York, January 1, 1899, to December 31, 1900. Elected Vice-President of United States, November 4, 1900. Succeeded to Presidency on death of William McKinley, September 14, 1901. Elected President, November 8, 1904. Inaugurated President, March 4, 1905.

FINAL BUSINESS AT CAPITOL

President Signs Last Bills—Great Gathering of the Roosevelts.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—As President Roosevelt entered the Capitol building by the long flight of marble steps to the eastward, he paused several times to turn and raise his hat to the cheering throng which reached far back across the fine asphalt driveway.

Veterans of Civil and Spanish Wars.

Behind the Rough Riders were the carriages of the Vice-President and of the Cabinet, and then came a reminder of the grim past—a detachment of picked veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic, whose gallant past belied the gray locks and spare forms of the old soldiers.

and the crowd, the densest that ever lined historic Pennsylvania avenue and its debouching side streets, waved welcome with flags and banners.

Galaxy of Generals.

The magnificent boulevard was cleared from curb to curb by its full width, and the President and his escort were seen at their best. Lieutenant-General Chaffee, the hero of Pekin, the grand marshal of the day, accompanied by Brigadier-General John Johnson, headed the general staff of the Army, the first time this splendid body of military genius has participated in an inaugural ceremony.

self directed the secret service men to clear the space beside the carriage as it proceeded up Capitol Hill.

The carriage which bore Vice-President-elect Fairbanks closely followed that of President Roosevelt, and he, too, was cheered. Mr. Fairbanks was as gracious as the President in acknowledging these enthusiastic salutes as he proceeded to the Capitol.

The family of the President and his relatives and a few intimate friends appeared at the Capitol soon after 11 o'clock to witness the ceremony.

Although many people remained after the President left, and dancing extended over a considerable portion of the hall, the larger crowd followed the President's party out. The festivities stopped about midnight.

NEW YORK, March 4.—In his anxiety to swallow alleged incriminating evidence during a raid in Brooklyn, Hugh Winster, the reputed proprietor of a poolroom, nearly choked to death. His life was saved by the prompt action of an ambulance surgeon.

When the raiders broke in, about 50 men finished about 11 o'clock, the President and Mrs. Roosevelt with the Vice-President and Mrs. Fairbanks again entered their box. As soon as they were sighted by the throngs below, a mighty shout went up and the President responded four times to the prolonged cheering. Finally he turned and escorted Mrs. Roosevelt to the railing of his box, and they stood for several minutes bowing to the crowd.

Following a ten minutes' conversation with the members of his party, the President again went to the edge of his box and, motioning to the band at the opposite end of the hall, clapped his hands, indicating the pleasure the music had given him. This again called forth tremendous applause.

Little business awaited the President. The Mills which were passed yesterday and at the evening session were presented to him by the House officers and he signed them quickly. He had considerable time to devote to Senators and members who called on their respects.

When the raiders broke in, about 50 men bolted through the doors and windows before they could be halted.

Winster was found in a corner of the room coughing and choking and in convulsions. In his hands he held part of a torn racing card. He was purple in the face and frothing at the mouth. An ambulance was quickly summoned, with the result noted. The scrap removed from the prisoner's throat was carefully preserved as evidence by the police.

French Antarctic Expedition Makes Important Discoveries.

BUENOS AIRES, March 4.—The Charcot Antarctic expedition, on board the steamer Franca, has arrived at Puerto Madrin, Argentina. A telegram received here from Dr. Charcot is as follows: "We landed at Wandel Island and carried out all of our scientific work under favorable conditions. The question of Bismarck Strait was solved, our party passing through it. We reached Alexander First Land, though ice prevented our landing. Notwithstanding the fact that our vessel grounded, sustaining a serious leak, we were able to continue the voyage and determine the contour of the extraneous coast line of the Palmer Archipelago. All are well."

Germany Will Seek Reciprocity.

BERLIN, March 4.—The German government, it is believed, has inquired, or is about to inquire, through Baron von Bernberg, the German Ambassador to the United States, if a proposal to discuss a reciprocal trade arrangement would be favorably received in Washington.

Mrs. Porter Married in Church, Too.

PARIS, March 4.—The church marriage of Miss Elsie Porter, daughter of the American Ambassador, to Dr. Edwin Winde, of Zurich, Switzerland, took place today in the Church of the Holy Trinity and was followed by a reception at the American Embassy.

AYER'S PECTORAL Do not undervalue the services of a skillful physician. Even the best medicine cannot take the place of the family doctor. Therefore we say: Consult your physician freely about your case and ask him what he thinks about your taking Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for your cough. If he says take it, then take it. If he says not take it, then follow his advice.
