Millionaire Will Wed Ghetto Girl

J. G. PHELPS STOKES ANNOUNCES HIS ENGAGEMENT TO RUSSIAN JEWESS REARED IN DIREST POVERTY

New York World, April 6. J. G. Phelps Stokes, son of Anson Phelps Stokes, the banker, of 229 Madison avenue, and a descendant of four Colonial Governors of Massachusetts, will be married on July 16 to Rose Harriet Pastor, a child of Although born to the purple, Mr. Stokes is by choice a worker on the East Side, and it was there he met his bride-to-be. Seated on an Iron bedstead in a hall bedroom of the University Settlement, on Eldridge street, the young millionaire member of New York's most exclusive clubs told last night with infinite pride of his forthcoming marriage to the talented girl whom he described as "a child reared in the direst poverty."

She Works in a Cigar Factory.

In order that she may live over again the days of her childhood in Petticoat lane and Frying Pan alley, London, where she was many times saved from literal starva-tion and death from cold, the girl who will soon, by right of her husband's name. be entitled to a place among the bluest blooded matrons of this country, is working in a cigar factory on the East Side. Her fingers are skilled to the trade, and none of the girls in the dark workroom accomplished more yesterday than she. Mothers and fathers, whose highest ambition is to choose for their sons brides who will at least swing level in the balance of birth and social qualifications, will be interested in the cablegrams received by the young couple from Mr. and Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes, parents of the bride-groom. They are abroad at present, and forwarded the following message from Tunis, Algiers:

"We most sincerely congratulate you, and wish you all joy and happiness. Give our love to Rose."

From Mr. Stokes' brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Phelps Stokes, came the following message:

"Loving congratulations." By word of mouth over the telephone, Mr. Stokes listened to his uncle's greeting last night: "Good for you, old fellow. I wish you all the happiness in the world."

Mr. Stokes and Miss Pastor are now planning with all the joy and hope and fear of young lovers for their first home in a three-room tenement on the East

"Light and as much freedom from dirt as circumstances permit are the only re-quisites on which we will insist," Mr. Stokes said last night.

There was one who received with mingled feelings news of the betrothal. He is J. I. Zevin, literary editor of the Jewish Daily News, who has been sponsor for Miss Pastor since her arrival in this tor sales l'astor since her arrival in this city two years ago. They were seen much together before Mr. Stokes met the girl to a request from subscribers for outside Mr. Zevin's coworkers warm much together for outside the second subscribers for outside the sec Mr. Zevin's coworkers were wont to ask a letter from Miss Pastor. He said yeshim in friendly raillery if he intended to terday it was the most remarkable letter marry his young ward. At these questions his face would light up with a ten-derness accentuated in those who are afflicted with a physical infirmity.

How Zevin Received the News.

Zevin made his home with the Pastors. The family consists of the mother and six children. Miss Rose is the eldest, and has her progress with the keenest satisfaction. His friends noticed a change in his manner a year ago.

They were with him in his office when the betrothal of Mr. Stokes and Miss Pastor was announced late yesterday afternoon. They urged him to speak. With flushed face and a feverish glow in his eyes, he snatched his hat and hurriedhome in Lenox.

"From one viewpoint it is not accurate unity of souls, Miss Paster and myself have been married since just October. Our ideals, our tastes, our lives were biended when we discovered that our souls were as one. I wish it distinctly understood that my family shares with we the hap-piness which is mine. My mother has never seen Miss Pastor, but my sister Helen and Miss Pastor have known each other for more than a year. Our match, if you call it such, is based on worth, regardless of accidents of birth and environ-

Self-Taught Poetess.

"Miss Pastor was reared in direct pov-erty. She worked for 11 years in a cigar factory, rolling tobacco and thus earning sufficient at times to keep bodies and souls of her family together. While thus engaged the noblity of her mind developed. The only education she ever had, except that self-taught, was obtained during brief genzions in the public schools of London. She has been without food for days. Here are some verses which she wrote one day when bread had not passed her lips for 48 hours."

Mr. Stokes took a leather case from his pocket, and, with all the tenderness of a young lover dwelling on a treasured token from his sweetheart, displayed the follow-

And I cannot keep the crumb From such little creatures dumb. So now pick them off my sill-Little sparrows, take your fill.

Take your fill then, chirp your prayer; Thank the One who gives His care. Gives His care, and gives His love, Pours it from His heart above.

My last crumb I feed to you; I pray the Lord to feed me, too. For I'm so hungry, birdles sweet, And no one gives me bread to eat,

So, little sparrows, take your fill Of crumbs from off my window-sill. The beginning of Mr. Stokes' romance was laid on the East Side, as was that of his slater. Miss Caroline Phelps Stokes, who was wed in June, 1962, to Robert Hunter, head worker of the University Settlement, where Mr. Stokes now makes his

About a year ago a young Jewess of no ticeably rare attainment called on Mr. Stokes to obtain an interview for the Jewish Daily News. He was instantly attracted by her beauty of intellect, and sev-eral days later sent for her. He had eral days later sent for her. He had learned her history from her employer.

Miss Pastor was born in Augustovo, Suwalk, Russia, in 1878. Her exernts, Russian Jews of the lewliest station in life, moved to London when she was 7 years old. The father died and the family came to America, settling in Cleveland, O.

There, when Rose became old enough to pany, the Woodbridge Company, the Haywork, she got employment rolling "sto-gles" in a tobacco factory. She was an Wyllis Company, He is also a member of assiduous reader, and at the age of 15 the governing boards of several of the Stokes, Miss Pastor was invited to dine at the University Settlement. She be-came interested in the work, and therebeen the bread-winner since she was old came interested in the work, and there-enough to work. Zevin was devoted to the education of Miss Pastor. He observed Mr. Stokes. Their courting was done while engaged in missions of mercy among the East Side's poor. She held views which were not indorsed by orthodox Jews, and among these was included ker bellef that intermarriage between persons of different race and religion was not in-

It was not intended that the announceleft the office.

"It will all be known in time." he said.

Miss Paster convinced Mr. Stokes of the advisability of making the announcement as he passed out of the door with halting advisability of making the amouncement step. Instant silence fell on the little last night. He requested that the present residence of Miss Pastor be withheld in residence of Miss Pastor be withheld in Definite plans have not yet been made order that she may continue her work in for the wedding. It will probably take the cigar factory without annoyance.

Miss Pastor knows full well the meaning on Madison avenue, or at their country of the changing of her lot from that of a home in Lenox. "From one viewpoint it is not accurate to speak of an engagement taking place or of a marriage to come." Mr. Stokes said last night. "According to a theory of unity of souls, Miss Paster and myself have been married since last October. Our two weeks ago to work in the cigar fac-tory. Unless there is a change in her present plans, she will continue the work until a short time of her wedding day.

To Marry Probably on July 16. This has been set tentatively for July 16, her birthday, when she will be 27 years

"It will be her rebirth," Mr. Stokes said last night. "It will also mark a new epoch in my life. I will then retire from the University Settlement, and after our honeymoon will return to the East Side to live. We will devote our time to mis-sions among the poor. Our honeymoon will be spent abroad. First, we will go to London, and the district where Miss Pastor spent the terrible season of her childhood. I will visit there her relatives, especially an uncle, who several times took her to his home, although he was bitterly poor, and saved her from starving. Later we will go to Switzerland, more for the absolute quiet which will enable us to live for a time our simple lives than to view mountain scenery."

> SCHOOL GROUNDS BEAUTIFIED Pupils Attending the Holladay Building Do All the Work.

The efforts of the principal and pupils of the Holladay School have resulted in the grounds being beautified. About 500 choice rose bushes have been set out in would have cost about $250 had it been paid for in cash. A month ago Principal Hadley started this work by asking the pupils of the higher grades if they would give an hour's time in spading up the grounds in the court on the south side of the building. Sixty pairs of hands went up, and in accordance with this plan 60 boys, with spades over their shoulders, marched single file up to the building on a fixed day and turned loose on the ground. In an hour the work was com-the big 19-room building took hold. Each room was given a certain amount of work to do. One set a row of roses in front. Another took the side, and so on, until the court was fringed. Along the sides next to the sidewalks the same thing was done. Here each room set out so many feet in choice roses, until the en-tire building is now surrounded with roses, all the work being done by the pupils and the janitor. Professor Hadley is highly pleased with the result. He regards the work accomplished an excellen object lesson to the pupils, besides beau-tifying the school ground. Now each classroom watches its particular row of roses with jealous care, and woe to the youngster that steps on the beds.

Pleads Not Guilty to Forgery. When arraigned before Municipal Judge Hogue yesterday on a charge of forgery. W. F. Hallowell entered a plea of not gullty, and his case was set for hearing Tuesday. He is said to have passed six forged checks here. He was brought back from Stockton, Cal., for trial. At the request of Deputy District Attorney Haney the defendant was placed under $2000 bail, and in default was sent to the County Jail.
