SUCCESSFUL FARMERS' INSTITUTE—A successful farmers' institute closed yesterday at Fairview, held in Artisan hall under the auspices of the Oregon Agricultural College. It opened Thursday evening, N. H. Hall presiding. Napoleon Davis gave the address of welcome, 185 which he strongly commended the Oregon Agricultural College for its work for the farmers of Oregon. Dr. James Withycombe, of the Experimental Station, responded with appropriate words. The speakers were Professors L. F. Kent, A. B. Cordley, A. S. Kinsley, J. W. Bailey and others. The subjects discussed all pertained to scientific farming, and were thoroughly illustrated and practical. At the conclusion of the institute the professors from the Agricultural College received the thanks of the farmers and citizens attending the sessions.

TO IMPROVE EAST STARK STREET—The outlook for the improvement and reopening of East Stark street, between Union avenue and East Twentieth street, is considered promising. G. R. Matthews, who owns property on the street, said yesterday that all the owners of property along the elevated roadway between Grand avenue and East Seventh had signed for replanking. Between East Ninth and Twentieth street proceedings for improvement are under way. East Stark is one of the most important streets on the East Side, connecting as it does with the Base Line road. In this connection also it announced that the rebuilding of the elevated roadway on Grand avenue, between East Twentieth and East Twelfth streets, is practically insured, as all the property owners have signed an agreement for the improvement.

EXCITING SPORT WITH A TROUT—Dr. E. A. Hocking had an exciting experience in landing a six and a half pound trout in Eagle Creek a few days ago. He and Dr. Motter went out to Etacada on the electric car, and then, accompanied by Dr. S. Smith, made a fishing trip to Eagle Creek. Among the many trout caught, Dr. Hocking hooked one of six and a half pounds, which showed fight and threatened to get away. Dr. Hocking with his 120 feet of line was plucky, and after 15 minutes hard tussle, with the aid of Dr. Smith, succeeded in landing the beauty. At one time Dr. Hocking slipped, and was saved from falling into the river by the timely assistance of Dr. Motter.

DEATH OF LORENS FOARD—Lorens Foard, a pioneer ship chandler of the Pacific Coast and widely known among maritime people, died at his home in Astoria, Saturday. He came to California in 1856 and at once commenced in ship chandlery work. In 1872 he went into the general wrecking and ship chandlery business for himself and a few years later he established a branch business at Astoria, Portland and Seattle. He also became interested in a number of coasting vessels. He is survived by six children, one of whom is Mrs. W. C. Logan, of Astoria. Martin Foard, a brother, lives at Astoria.

PLANS OF NEW HILL—In this issue of the Oregonian will appear an illustration of a number of modern flats, which are now in course of construction at Nineteenth and Davis streets. Mr. John D. Coleman, who is responsible for the invasion of this exclusive district with flats, has a reputation amongst property owners of being one of the best judges of values in Portland. Mr. Coleman has made several profitable investments in property during the past ten years, and real estate men believe that his last venture of Mr. Coleman's will prove equally as profitable as his other investments in Portland.

COMPLETES SAWMILL PLANT—Du Bois Lumber Company's plant, one and one-half miles west of Astoria, has just been completed. It has a 100-horsepower engine and can turn out from 10,000 to 25,000 feet of lumber per day. It has a lumber burner nearly one mile in length to the county road. The company has a contract to supply the Southern Pacific Railway Company with 10,000 railway ties. Contract has been let for 2,000,000 feet of logs. Around Etacada, even timber is getting scarcer and mills are getting further back into the mountains, where it is more plentiful.

WORK OF MISS TINGLE WOMAN MARKET INSPECTOR TELLS EXPERIENCE. She Gives Suggestions as to the Method of Displaying Fruits in Stores.

Miss Lillian E. Tingle, who was recently appointed Deputy Health Officer and Inspector of Markets, has been making a special effort, as the fruit season is coming on, to have the strawberries and other small fruits protected from the dust of the street, an effort in which the marketmen express willingness to co-operate, as they concede that dust and light injure the fruit. They say, however, that they fear that if the berries are not placed where they will attract attention people will pass by without ordering. The inspector's idea, which is very sensible, is that a few berries be placed under glass in front, with neat placards giving the price of the stock inside the shop.

Miss Tingle was asked yesterday whether the marketmen received her graciously when they saw her inspector's star, and she replied that they usually seemed rather embarrassed, but told her that they had been busy cleaning up the results of which cleaning she expects to see upon future visits. She has had some interesting talks with butchers and grocers, and has heard some protests against the street hawkers, and also some blame of housewives, for lack of discrimination, as the dealers can certainly not be expected to be as careful in their care and delivery of goods if the purchaser is indifferent.

Miss Tingle received a letter yesterday from Charles W. Stubbs, an East Side grocer, who presented the grocer's side of the market question in a way which may set some housekeepers thinking. Mr. Stubbs' letter follows: Portland, May 4.—Miss Lillian E. Tingle, City—Dear Madam: I want to inform you of the movement started by the ladies of Portland in insisting upon having clean markets and grocery stores. It has seemed to me that some movement was not started before, as I have observed existing conditions for some time. I also heartily endorse the "rules" laid down for the conduct of grocery stores, as I am especially interested in that business. Please permit me to suggest that it would be well for your inspector, as she goes about her work, to give a word of encouragement or praise, where such praise is due, as it will stimulate us all along the line of cleanliness in our stores and markets.

While we are making rules for the grocer, please permit me to suggest a few rules or "don'ts" for some of our lady customers: Don't ask your grocer to give you a word of encouragement or praise, where such praise is due, as it will stimulate us all along the line of cleanliness in our stores and markets. Don't exercise your dogs by taking them with you to the corner grocery. Exercise them in some other place. The grocerman has troubles of his own without having to keep one eye on your dog or dog.

Don't handle fresh fruit roughly, as every bruise will cause the fruit to decay; then you would not buy it, and damaged fruit is a loss to the grocerman. Don't test the grocerman's butter with your thumbnail. It doesn't look well, and then there might be microbes on your thumb.

Don't expect your grocer to deliver your goods after business hours, as his days are long and filled with trials. Don't ask your grocer to do your dragging. He has no right to do it, as there are licensed draymen in the city. Some of the above don'ts may seem strange to your committee, but the writer has had experience along these several lines.

Thanking you again for your interest in clean stores and markets, and hoping that I may be honored with a call from your inspector, I am, yours truly, CHARLES W. STUBBS.

YES OPTICS Is Our Business We Fit Your Eyes Scientifically A great many quacks in the optical business are now beginning to come here, only to remain during the Fair, and after that will have to look for new fields. Their reputation, as well as experience, doesn't amount to a great deal, and they care very little whether the glasses help your eyes so long as they can get your money. You can't afford to risk your vision. We are here to stay, and if we fit your eyes with glasses they will surely benefit you. If they don't we are here to make them. We examine your eyes free of charge. All work done by a member of the firm who is a graduate of one of the best colleges in the East.
