Municipal Ownership Gets Setback From Glasgow Expert—Opinion in Chicago Turning Against Mayor's Policy Already.

CHICAGO, June 17.—(Special.)—James Dairymple, chief of the municipally-owned traction system of Glasgow, for whom Mayor Dunne sent for advice shortly after he was elected on a municipal ownership platform, has ended his 12-day visit in Chicago in the belief that the Mayor's scheme to municipalize the Chicago traction system is not practicable under existing conditions. The part politics plays in the administration of the city's affairs is, in the opinion of the Scotch expert, the rock on which municipal ownership and operation, as outlined in present plans, will go down to destruction.

The Scotch expert has convinced Mr. Dunne that his conclusions are right in part, and the executive and radical municipal ownership men are in consequence considerably disconcerted. In fact, the fervor with which the enthusiasts welcomed the Scotchman to Chicago completely disappeared at the time of his departure, and in its place there was a pronounced chilliness. Mr. Dairymple has not as yet submitted a formal report, but his views have been given in confidence to the Mayor and his associates on two or three occasions in a fragmentary way, and they were reiterated at the final meeting just prior to the departure of the visitor.

Things Which Will Not Mix.

Meanwhile the traction interests are jubilant. The conclusions of the expert are in line with the arguments they have made all of the time. Mr. Dairymple said, just previous to his leaving:

"Politics and street railways, or any other kind of public utility, will not mix. I have noticed in this country that public ownership does not appear to be anywhere as widely extended or as thoroughly developed as in Europe. We run public markets, we own and operate public halls, which range from big ones capable of holding 4000 people, to small halls in the different districts. Gas, water, electric light, the telephone and all other kind of public utilities, as well as the tramways, are under municipal ownership. "We could not undertake to operate these institutions for a minute if the managers and workers in charge of them had to be politicians and expected to be ousted whenever another party came into power. We have the best kind of civil service managers, with common sense, and minor employes who know they can keep their positions as long as they behave themselves."

Dunne Wants to Mix Them.

As the Mayor has taken a decided stand in the matter of bringing about a divorce of politics and the operation of the car systems, this decision of the Mayor being against a divorce, the radical ownership men see a very stormy time ahead when the ownership plan is put into effect. The Mayor has taken the stand that all employes of the traction lines, when they are under municipal control, will be placed in the unclassified list of the civil service. Under this ruling the motormen and conductors will be classed with the laborers who dig the trenches in the water-pipe department. No mental examination is required of this class of employes. They go through a physical examination, their names are put into a box and the men who are put to work are drawn by lot by a "political pull." With this class there is no guaranty of retention in the service or protection against discharge. In fact, these men may be discharged at will by the head of the department, just as is done with ordinary street employes.

Traction Men Against the Scheme.

Unless the Mayor reverses himself in this stand, there is strong probability that when the matter of municipal ownership is put to a final test at an election, as must be done under the enabling act passed by the last General Assembly, it will be defeated. Already the traction employes are lining up against the proposition, and, if the wave grows as it is threatening to grow, there is strong probability that it will go down to defeat at the polls; that there will be just as big a vote against it as there was at the election which landed Judge Dunne in the executive chair. That at the last election there was great misapprehension as to the real meaning of municipal ownership, many men who voted for the project have said that they did not know what they were doing when they cast their ballot. They had simply accepted the statements of some of the campaigners as gospel truth, without investigating for themselves—which is one of the peculiarities of our political system.

WILL BUILD MUNICIPAL LINES

Dunne Will Ask Council to Construct One Hundred Miles.

CHICAGO, June 17.—Mayor Dunne, on Monday, will ask the City Council to authorize the Commissioner of Public Works to advertise for bids to construct and fully equip 100 miles of street railway, to be operated for and by the City of Chicago. The Democratic members of the local transportation committee have pronounced the Mayor that they will support his recommendation on the floor of the Council chamber.

The Mayor desires that the construction of municipal street railways shall be commenced just as soon as the validity of the certificates issued under the Mueller law, from the sale of which the money to finance the street railways is to come, has been determined by the State Supreme Court. It is also his intention to have the voters of the city pass upon the question of municipal operation at the election next November.

West Side lines, during which it was found that over 100 miles of tracks will be available for a municipal system in the lines where franchise have expired, or will expire in the near future, the Mayor expressed himself as satisfied that city ownership may be made successful, and that it is possible to operate at a profit a system in rivalry with the companies now in control of the surface lines.

"This injection of party politics at this time is unfortunate. It would be treason to a holy cause to involve it in partisan politics. It makes no difference what parties or what organizations fall as the result of their participation in municipal wrongs and crimes of the past. Let them fall.

"They must fall and be detroned before the work in hand can be completed impartially and honestly, and the affairs of the people placed on a firm and secure foundation for the future. ## Missouri Law Against This Decoration Goes Into Effect.

ST. LOUIS, June 17.—(Special.)—The law prohibiting the wearing of feathers taken from birds, except those of domestic fowls, goes into effect at midnight, and will not only prove a serious affliction to women, but of great pecuniary loss to the millinery houses. Wholesale milliners of this city estimate that the enforcement of this law will mean a loss to the trade of not less than $200,000 in the next two years. The milliners generally say they will abide by the law.

"We will be forced to create new millinery designs out of other material, in view of the possibility that we will be unable to use certain plumage and feathers," said the head of the largest wholesale house in the city tonight. Section 13 of the law says:

"All Sheriffs, Deputy Sheriffs, Marshals and other peace officers are hereby declared to be ex-officio game wardens, and are empowered to enforce the law. Any woman who appears on the street wearing a hat decorated with the plumage of game birds will be liable to arrest and imprisonment."

Four weeks ago Captain H. H. Merz, of Gettysburg, caught a turtle which had on its back a flag, a castle and Lee's name together with the year. ### Mazamas Prepare for Outing.

The final announcement of the outing committee of the Mazamas has been issued and states that as it is desirable to have members of the club and interested friends meet before the outing at Mount Rainier in July, a picnic will be held at Will G. Steel's camp Friday afternoon and evening, June 16. In order to reach this camp Mazamas and their friends are directed to take the Fulton car on First street to the corner of Nebraska and Wisconsin, then walk south on a trail to the camp, which is in a grove about half a mile up the hill to the left where the trail strikes the Southern Pacific. Coffee and ice cream will be provided, but each member should bring a lunch, together with a plate, tin cup, spoon, Chinese lantern and candle. After supper there will be a camp fire and a general discussion of the Summer's outing.

The trip to Rainier will be especially enjoyable and attractive and an unusually large number will take advantage of the row rates offered. Although it will be a camping trip, every arrangement has been made for the convenience and comfort of those who are inexperienced in mountaineering. Most of the two weeks' time before the outing will consist of a camp trip, every arrangement has been made for the convenience and comfort of those who are inexperienced in mountaineering.

Government Wins Point in Paper Trust Case.

MAY LEARN INNER SECRETS

Judge Seaman Decides That Books Must Be Shown in Court and, Officials Must Reveal All Affairs of Trust.

MILWAUKEE, June 17.—The General Paper Company, sued by the Government to determine whether it is a trust in restraint of trade, has lost its contention before the United States Circuit Court that it should not be compelled to produce its books to supply testimony in response to the prosecution's search for evidence. United States Circuit Judge Seaman rendered the decision. Attorney James D. Flanders, representing the paper company, says he will carry the matter to the Circuit Court of Appeals without delay, and the company will probably continue to resist the attempts of the Government's attorneys.

Victory for Government.

The Government is completely victorious in its contention, except that the books which are to be produced under the court's order shall not pass out of the possession of the defendant, save in case of pressing the power to examine the books of any corporation to learn its innermost secrets and compel answers from officials to all relevant questions which will be all-important in future prosecutions of trusts as well as in the case at hand. The objection of irrelevancy was raised so frequently that the examination almost ceased to make progress, save for information which the prosecution had succeeded in getting from other sources, and the court was finally asked to make the defendants answer and produce books showing the profits made, the expenses of the corporation, the manner of its operation and the like. In his ruling, Judge Seaman said:

Judge Seaman's Reasons.

While the inquiry whether the matter sought is in any sense relevant to the controversy may arise in applications of this nature, the imperative of justice must be very plain to justify refusal to answer before the examiner and the ordinary tests of materiality are not applicable. Objections are to be preserved, however, the materiality is for consideration by the trial court and not the examiner; and the court from which the subpoena is issued has no power to entertain objections by way of supervision—certainly not when fairly debatable. The objections which are thus brought do not impress me as entitled to consideration in detail on the present application and will be treated as overruled upon the grounds stated.
