FLAGS IN THE NORTH PACIFIC SANGERBUND PARADE.

The brotherhood of man, and the brotherhood of Nations, first an American and then a subject of Der Kaiser. This is the slogan and the viewpoint of the stinging visitors who were the guests of Portland and the Exposition yesterday and who are today to furnish melody in praise of sacred things. German Day at the Exposition has come and gone leaving in its passage added friendliness and good-fellowship and increased desire on the part of all to weld in closer comradeship the great mass of Germans who are each year joining themselves to the ranks of the American people.

The parade of yesterday in which several thousand former subjects of the German Empire marched through the blistering sun in loyalty to the societies which held them as members and to the day that they were celebrating, brought most forcibly to the notice of all the great number of German citizens resident in Portland and throughout the Northwest.

German Day a Success.

German Day at the Exposition was a success and the parade prior to the exercises at the grounds was one of the most important and beautiful features of the occasion. Starting with the first float, in which was represented General Washington, the father of the Nation, seated side by side with Baron Steuben, that German patriot and American hero who fought with the soldiers of the Revolution to create American freedom, the entire representation of the parade in its floats taught the story of German friendliness and love for America and exemplified the brotherhood that joins the two nations and will continue so to do. The parade was a long one and a hard strain upon those of the participants who were old. Before the Exposition grounds had been reached many of the men in line had given up the struggle with the weight and the distance and had taken the street cars for their destination. So intense was the heat and wearying the march that six of the members of De Caprio's band were overcome and had to be taken out of the line of march. The men have been working hard for the past few days and the long march, together with the weight of the instruments and the sun, was more than they could stand.

Programme is Curtailed.

The programme as it was intended originally was shortened and altered on account of the heat, and much that had been prepared was not produced. The societies from Seattle and Tacoma had intended to have a part in the programme, but this was not possible on account of the entertainment cut short after a few addresses and some music.

A platform had been built for the exercises at the base of the main auditorium, but unprotected from the sun. Here the singers gathered upon arrival at the Fair grounds for the exercises of the day.

Led by Louis Dammach and accompanied by De Caprio's Band, the assembled representatives of the Portland, Seattle and Tacoma German societies joined in singing that song so dear to the German heart, "Die Wacht am Rhein." It was also his pleasure to bid the Portland Germans welcome to the Exposition. The Governor gloried in the German citizenship of the country, he said, and thought much of its effect in the past as well as what it would influence in the future for the upbuilding and good of the country.

Cares and Worries Thrown Aside.

"When the German plays he plays," said the speaker; "when you work you work; when you throw aside for a time the cares and worries of sober things you turn your mind to good fellowship and kindness. This is the day when your thoughts are those of recreation, and it gives me great pleasure to welcome you all to the Exposition in that spirit of brotherhood which does and should prevail between the American citizen and the adopted brother from Germany."

At the conclusion of the address by the Governor, the master of the day introduced John Reischger, of Portland, who spoke to the audience in German for a few minutes.

Mr. Reischger said in opening his address that the societies had invited Carl Schurz to be present and make the address of the day, but that, owing to his age, he had not been able to come, and for that reason the people of the Northwest had been cheated of an opportunity to extend to the great German thinker the welcome that would have been given him had he accepted the invitation. In the absence of Mr. Schurz, the honor of presenting the address had fallen upon the present speaker.

Value of German Immigration.

Continuing Mr. Reischger stated that he wanted to call attention to the saying of Mr. Schurz that the soil of the United States was saturated with the blood and the sweat of the German people, who had contended and died for the welfare and continuance of the nation. For this reason no prejudice should stand between the American born and the German who wished this to be his adopted country. The value of the German immigration coming to America lay in the education of the youth of that country in frugality and obedience. The greater number of those seeking this country as their future home were those of educated mind who left their Fatherland through political dissatisfaction, coming here for the freedom of America and the congenial soil.

The great wars of 1870 and 1871 had created a spirit of unity and patriotism in Germany which bound the nation for the safety of the peace of the world. The highest mission then of the German citizen of the United States was to increase the spirit of National friendliness existing between the two nations through the medium of good citizenship in their adopted country, until the bonds of common fellowship between Germany and America would dictate the peace of the world.

Americans First in All Things.

The Germans of the United States were Americans first in all things, the speaker contended, though cherishing a memory of their fatherland with reverence and love. Roosevelt had expressed the sentiment that the German citizens were the best of all those of foreign extraction.

In concluding, the speaker thanked the singers for having made the opportunity for Portland of having been the meeting place for the first time of the German associations of the Northwest. He hoped that the result of the meeting would be still further to cement the bonds of brotherhood and friendship between the Germans and the American-born citizens of the West.

"The Star-Spangled Banner" was sung at the conclusion of Mr. Reischger's address, the words being in German. At the conclusion of the song President Goode of the Exposition welcomed the visitors in the name of the Exposition management and expressed pleasure at being able to be in part their host.

The exercises of the day were concluded by a drill given by the senior class of boys and girls of the Portland Turn Verein, which exercises exemplified the physical culture taught the young people of Germany.

The following is the programme for today:

BOOMS FAIR IN SOUTH

ELI P. SMITH, OF BIRMINGHAM NEWS, ON EXPOSITION.

Declares That Centennial is Well Advertised and Many Alabamans Will Visit It.

Eli P. Smith, associate editor of the Birmingham News, reached the city yesterday on a visit to the Lewis and Clark Exposition, and will remain several days. Mr. Smith has been a staunch friend of the Fair, and was instrumental when the appropriation bill was before Congress in lining up a number of Southern Congressmen in support of the measure. He is here now to give the country an extensive write-up. Regarding the Exposition he said that much interest had been manifested in the Southern states in the enterprise, due in a measure to the fact that both Lewis and Clark were Southern men, and were sent out on their famous expedition to the Far Northwest by a Southern President—Thomas Jefferson. An additional interest which has drawn attention to the Exposition has been the number of Southern people who have settled in the Oregon country, and who have prospered.

Mr. Smith stated that quite a number of Alabama citizens had already made the journey all the way across the continent to see the sights of the Far West and to take in the Exposition, Portland always being the ultimate point of these visitors. At this time there is a party of upwards of 40 Alabama travelers in California who will be in Portland the latter part of the coming week to visit the Exposition. This party includes some of the most prominent ladies and gentlemen in and around Birmingham. They will come from San Francisco to Portland by boat, and will arrive here about Friday. Other parties of a similar character will follow, and the next six weeks will witness the influx of a large number of Southern visitors to Portland.

Speaking of the Exposition itself, Mr. Smith, who has visited every exposition of importance held in the United States during the past two decades, said that the Lewis and Clark Fair was the most compact and comprehensive of any he had yet seen. He added that it had already proved a most valuable advertiser of the Oregon country, due largely to the intelligent manner in which it has been exploited by Secretary Henry E. Reed and his able corps of assistants.

"The press matter sent out by the bureau of publicity," said he, "has been the most attractive and comprehensive I have ever seen. Every news letter has contained news elements which cannot fail to attract interest to this section and draw attention to its marvelous resources and vast possibilities. As an advertiser of this section the Exposition, due to the good work of Secretary Reed and his co-workers, will prove of lasting benefit."

Referring to politics, Mr. Smith said that the South and President Roosevelt were now good friends. He added that Birmingham at this time was preparing the last National election President Roosevelt, according to Mr. Smith, has manifested a most cordial feeling towards the South, and the Southern people and the Executive have come to a clearer understanding of each other.

to give President Roosevelt a great reception on the occasion of his visit to that city on October 2. The President will visit Booker Washington's great negro school, at Tuskegee, Ala., and will then go to Birmingham, Montgomery and Mobile. In each of these places he will be accorded a most cordial reception. Since

Forestry Expert Arrives.
Special Agent G. B. Lull, of the United States Department of Agriculture, arrived in the city yesterday morning from Washington to take charge of the forestry exhibit of the Government. Mr. Lull will be here until the close of the Fair. He is an expert in matters pertaining to forestry, and for that reason was assigned to work in connection with the Lewis and Clark Exposition. Mr. Lull has had much experience in this line and has been connected with some of the Government's most important forestry projects.

Burbank's Latest Plum.

A dozen fine-looking hybrid plums, just placed on exhibition by the California Commission at the Exposition, show another of the strange pranks which Luther Burbank is playing with nature. The plums are nearly the size of an apple, golden red in color and full and round in shape. Its flavor is said to be excellent and the new fruit promises to become a popular food article.

In a letter on the subject, Mr. Burbank states his belief that the plum is the best which he has yet produced.

Mystic Fluid Preserves Flowers.

For ages florists have been searching for some preservative method whereby flowers could be kept with all their natural coloring, dainty tinge, curl and fur of leaves and petals. W. B. Nichols, a Sacramento man, believes he has solved the problem and a glass case of preserved flowers in the California exhibit gives color to his belief. Flowers of remarkable beauty and as true to life as if they were still in bloom are contained in the exhibit case. They are brought to this condition by a mystic fluid, the composition of which the inventor refuses to divulge.

Will Give Piano Recital.

Miss Carrie Sheerman, of Pendleton, will give a piano recital in the Exposition Auditorium tomorrow evening from 8 o'clock to 10. The recital will be a pleasant event for music-lovers, as an attractive programme has been arranged covering the best and most difficult pieces of the best composers. Miss Sheerman is a pupil of Hugo Mannes, and is an accomplished pianist. No charge of admission will be made.

Resolutions Passed Praising Exposition and City for Entertainment Provided Visitors.

The California Press Association, which paid Portland and the Exposition a visit recently, is greatly pleased with the reception accorded them and with their treatment throughout while they were in Oregon. They also regard the Exposition as an unequalled success. Bearing on this subject, a resolution has just been issued by the committee which had charge of the journey. It provides in part as follows:

"Resolved, That the members of the California Press Association who participated in the excursion to the Lewis and Clark Centennial Exposition at Portland, Or., June 28 to 30, 1905, have had one of the most successful and enjoyable trips in the history of the association, and desire to acknowledge their obligations to those who contributed to this auspicious result.

"Resolved, That the thanks of the California Press Association be hereby tendered to the management of the Lewis and Clark Exposition for their cordial reception and many attentions, and for setting apart Monday June 28, 1905, as California Press Association day; to the Portland Board of Trade for the delightful steamer excursion up the Columbia River and the banquet at Collins Springs; to the Commercial Club for the sightseeing tour of Portland and for extending to our members the privileges of their dining hall; to the California Commission for invitations to the reception by Governor Fardoe and for the freedom of our splendid state buildings; to the representatives of the United States for the special opening of the Government exhibit for our inspection; to the newspapers of Portland for their kindly notices and fraternal greetings; to the Board of Trade of Astland, Or., for their generous refreshment of fine cherries, and to all others not specially mentioned above, to whom our thanks are due.

"Resolved, That it is the sense of this association that the Exposition is a great success, reflecting credit upon the enterprising people of the State of Oregon, and that it sets forth in the most convincing manner the untold resources and the brilliant prospects of the Great Northwest.

"Resolved, That the association appreciates the untiring labor and unselfish devotion of its president, F. W. Richardson, and its secretary, R. H. Jurg, in advancing its interests and in looking out for the comforts and enjoyment of its members."

Tom Richardson, manager of the Commercial Club, is in receipt of a communication from the Colorado Commission at the Exposition, conveying the information that a special train party of 300 Coloradans will come for the special exercises Colorado day, August 18, and to attend the sessions of the Trans-Mississippi Commercial and Irrigation Congresses.

READY FOR SESSION

Authorities on Irrigation to Be Speakers at Congress.

PROGRAMME IS ARRANGED

Detailed Reports of Engineers Engaged in Reclamation Projects in Northwest Will Be Presented at Gathering.

Preparations for the National Irrigation Congress are rapidly being completed by the local members of the committee on arrangement and executive committee. The programme of the section on engineering and mechanics has been practically completed, and is of especial interest, because it will include presentation of detailed reports by engineers in charge of the important projects under direction of the reclamation service in Oregon and Washington. While there will be some changes in personnel of speakers and subjects added, the proceeding will be about as now scheduled. The tentative programme follows:

Monday, August 21, 9 A. M.
Conference of engineers. Address of chief engineer and organization. General discussions.

Tuesday, August 22, 9 A. M.
F. H. Newell, chairman, address to section.
J. B. Lippincott, supervising engineer for California, "The Kalamath Project."
D. C. Harty, supervising engineer for Oregon and Washington, "Irrigation Problems in the Northwest."
A. J. Wiley, consulting engineer, "Construction of Masonry Dams."
John T. Whistler, "Engineering Features of the Malheur Project."
T. A. Noble, "Irrigation in the Yakima Valley."
Gilford Finchot, "Tree-Planting About Reservoirs and Along Canals."

Wednesday, August 23, 9 A. M.
C. J. Blanchard, "Public Interest in Irrigation."
E. T. Perkins, "The Irrigation Exhibit at Portland."
One of Nobis' men, "The Okanogan Project."
One of Whistler's men, "The John-Day Unmasonry Project."
L. H. Taylor, "The Truckee-Carson Project."
John H. Lewis, State Engineer of Oregon, "The Water Supply for Irrigation."
James Stevenson, Jr., State Engineer of Idaho, "Development of Irrigation in Idaho."

Thursday, August 24, 9 A. M.
Conference of engineers. Executive session.

The following persons besides those named above have been invited to prepare brief papers or deliver addresses:
Thomas W. Jaycox, State Engineer of Colorado, Denver, Colo.; James Stevenson, Jr., State Engineer of Idaho, Boise, Idaho; John W. Wade, State Engineer of Montana, Helena, Mont.; Adna Dobson, State Engineer of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb.; Henry Thurlert, State Engineer of Nevada, Carson, Nev.; L. E. Follansbee, State Engineer of North Dakota, Bismarck, N. D.; John H. Lewis, State Engineer of Oregon, Salem, Or.; J. B. Thoburn, secretary Board of Agriculture and Acting State Engineer of Oklahoma, Guthrie, Okla.; Caleb Tanner, State Engineer of Utah, Salt Lake City, Utah; Clarence T. Johnston, State Engineer of Wyoming, Cheyenne, Wyo.; Professor G. V. F. Stout, Lincoln, Neb.; Professor L. G. Carpenter, Fort Collins, Colo.; Professor Elwood Mead, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.; F. C. Finkle, Los Angeles, Cal.
