CONVENTION OF LETTER-CARRIERS

Delegates Are Constantly Arriving for the Big Gathering.

WORK TO BE ACCOMPLISHED

Auditing Committee Is Busy With Books and Will Be Ready to Report at Opening of Session Tuesday.

The men who deliver the mail are now ready to meet in national convention, and already many of the advance delegates are in the city, while today and tomorrow many more will make their appearance.

The auditing committee, which reached Portland on Thursday last, has been steadily at work since that time on the books of the secretary, and finished its task last night. The books of the treasurer will be the next set taken up for consideration and examination, and it is the expectation of the committee to be ready to make its report by the time the convention is called at 9 o'clock on Tuesday morning.

The credentials committee has gone over all of the credential cards which have been submitted, verifying them from the membership rolls of the different branches in good standing to be represented at the convention. Their work is also practically completed and they will be able to make their report at the opening of the convention.

Minnesota Expected Tonight.

The Minnesota delegation to the convention is expected to reach the city this evening, while many other delegates are due to arrive who have been making the journey alone, or who have taken different routes than the one chosen by their comrades.

Today the advance guard of the Eastern delegation will make its appearance in the Pennsylvania delegation of 65 members, 40 of whom are from Philadelphia, headed by Richard F. Quinn, the president of the Philadelphia branch of the association.

The two special trains carrying the large body of the delegates will reach Portland tomorrow morning. One train comes from Chicago and the other from St. Louis, the two having aboard more than 400 of the delegates from the East. These special trains are in charge of several of the officers of the National Association. Many of the delegates are accompanied by their wives and families or invited guests. It is expected that by Monday evening all of the 600 men who have been sent as delegates to the convention will have arrived in the city.

Officers Reach Portland.

President James C. Keller, of Cleveland, and Secretary E. J. Cantwell, who is also the editor of the Postal Record, at Washington, D. C., reached the city some days ago, and are now at their headquarters at the Portland.

The local committees which have been given the task of providing entertainment for the visitors during their stay in the city have been hard at work and are fast completing the details of a good programme for the week. The work that has been done reflects credit on them and covers all of the principal points of interest in the vicinity of the city in the way of sightseeing trips.

Howard, of Salem, presided at the meeting, which was composed of delegates from the branch associations at Astoria, Salem, Baker City, Eugene and Portland.

James C. Keller, of Cleveland, president of the National Association, was in attendance upon the meeting, and gave a very interesting address, in which he dealt with the affairs of the National Association.

Salem was selected as the place for holding the state convention next year. The officers were elected for the ensuing year, the list being as follows:

PURE WINE BILL

That Is the Object of the Manufacturers.

EAST AND WEST AGREED

Committee From the Atlantic Seaboard Meets With a Committee Representing California Growers to Formulate Plan.

The Eastern wine representatives of the American Winegrowers' Association, who have been visiting the vineyards and wineries of California, arrived in the city today. The membership of this association includes practically all of the largest and leading wine companies of the United States.

The purpose of the visit of the Eastern men, who formed a committee, was to confer with a committee from the California Viticultural Club about a National pure wine bill, and about the ways and means for promoting the increased consumption of pure American wines. The association sent its leading members on the committee, which consisted of the following representatives: Edward R. Emerson, president of the association, and president of the Brotherhood Wine Co., of New York; F. N. Randall, president of the Chautauqua Wine Co.; Jules Crance, of the Urbana Wine Co., and Lee J. Vance, secretary of the association, and publisher of the American Wine Press, New York.

The California committee consisted of Percy T. Morgan, president of the California Wine Association; P. C. Rossi, president of the Italian-Swiss Colony, and Professor E. H. Twight, of the University of California.

Work of Committee.

Speaking of the meeting of the two committees, Secretary Vance said:

"We believe that we have accomplished an important work for the whole American wine industry. For the first time all of the different elements in the wine trade have come together, and from now on have agreed to put new life into the business.

"At our last meeting in San Francisco a few days ago our committee approved of the rough draft of a pure wine bill. The public will be quick to respond to our efforts to put on the market and to sell to consumers pure wines only. Of course the people who will oppose us will be the adulterators and makers of imitation and spurious wines.

"Another important thing will be our propaganda and campaign of publicity for introducing pure wines. The members of our association have agreed upon plans to support such a campaign, which will not be for one year, but during a series of years. All that we need is to get the American people to try our good wines in order to make them more of a wine-drinking people, all of which would be conducive to temperance and sobriety."

Praise for California.

In conclusion Mr. Vance said:

"Speaking for the other members of the committee, we have only words of praise for the splendid reception we received while in California. From the day we arrived in Los Angeles to our meeting in San Francisco, aside from our business, we were shown that open-hearted hospitality for which our friends are noted. The fine wines which were served at the banquets were striking proof of the high quality which California wines have now attained. The makers of such fine wines may well be proud of their success in producing vintages which in every respect rival the foreign brand of wines. This, however, was no surprise to me, for as a member of the international jury at Paris in 1900, and again at St. Louis in 1904, I had occasion to see how favorably our American wines and champagnes compared with European wines. The consumption of American wines has been increasing at a rapid rate of late years, and we look to see even greater increase in the near future."

WANT STARS AS SPECIALS

DEMOCRATS ARE APPLYING FOR THE POSITIONS.

Old Men Declare That They Will Not Obey Mayor Lane's Latest Order.

Hordes of men want commissions as special policemen from the Lane administration, and from present appearances practically all of the former members of the force will be "let out." This will be done, it is thought, in order that places may be made for others, preferably Democrats, it is said.

Members of the "special" force as now comprised, declare that they will put up a hot fight for their present positions, and that they will refuse to comply with a set of rules and regulations, now being drawn, which are said to be so drastic that they would destroy the relations existing between the special policeman and his customers, as under them written reports of the moneys collected from each man or firm in the various districts are required from the officers.

"The business we are engaged in simply will not permit of any such a report," said one of the oldest of the special policemen, and a man against whom there has never been a charge. "To furnish any one with a report of moneys paid us by firms who employ us would destroy the privacy between us and our employers and ruin our business. This is a rule that we shall not obey, and Mayor Lane can take away our stars if he chooses."

"Specials" declare that they can hold the majority of their business without the stars furnished by the city, although they admit that they prefer to work wearing the official decoration. This gives them power of arrest, but they claim they can make all necessary arrests shorn of the police emblem.

Should the "specials" refuse to sign the agreement now being drafted by Mayor Lane and his lieutenants, without doubt new men will be appointed. If this occurs, the present members of the force, a few of whom are working merely by grace of the powers that be until rules and regulations are ready for signature, declare they will remain on their beats and perform the same duties as now. The new men, under such conditions, would have to "work up" business, and in direct opposition to the displaced watchmen.

Under the Williams administration, several questionable men were discharged as special policemen, but were immediately given stars as special Deputy Sheriffs. This will not occur now, however, as Mayor Lane and Sheriff Word are both Democrats, and have a brotherly feeling that would preclude such a procedure.

First Government of Alberta.

WINNIPEG, Man., Sept. 2.—A. C. Rutherford, Liberal leader in the new Province of Alberta, was called upon today by Governor Bulyea to organize the first government for Alberta. It is expected that the election will be held soon.

M. W. A. GATHER AT EXPOSITION

Programme of Speeches Is Followed by Competitive Drill.

PRIZES AWARDED TO CAMPS

Fremont of Seattle Is First, Elliott Bay of Seattle Second, Tacoma Third, Oregon Grape of Portland Fourth.

The Modern Woodmen of America held forth at the Lewis and Clark Exposition yesterday, and their exercises consisted of a programme of speeches at the Auditorium early in the afternoon, which was followed by a competitive drill in which several of the degree teams of the order participated. This fraternal organization is one of the largest in the country and was well represented in yesterday's exercises. Among the prominent personages to speak at the Auditorium gathering were: Governor George E. Chamberlain, Mayor Harry Lane, and Director of Exhibits H. E. Dosch, all of whom gave addresses of welcome. Senator M. A. Miller, of Lebanon, state lecturer of the Modern Woodmen of America, delivered the responding speech, in which he told briefly of the work of the order and their intentions as to the future. State Deputy Organizer J. O. Davis, of California, delivered an address on woodcraft in general and the Modern Woodmen of America in particular. Mr. Davis claims that the M. W. of A. is the original Woodman organization and is growing with giant strides. The order is practically new in this part of the country, for it is only in the past decade that they have taken in the Western territory, having previous to 1896 practically confined themselves to the Eastern States.

Strong Fraternal Order.

According to the representatives of this organization it is the strongest fraternal insurance society in the United States, for on August 1 they had a membership of 753,000. The Modern Woodmen of America take great pride in their uniform rank and the fact that they had more uniformed men in line at their exercises than any other fraternal organization at the Fair. Over 150 uniformed Modern Woodmen of America passed through the Exposition gates yesterday. The largest delegation of this organization from out-of-town points came from Seattle and other Puget Sound cities, which occupied 12 cars.

For almost two hours yesterday afternoon the broad plaza in front of the Oregon building at the Lewis and Clark Exposition was the scene of many intricate military maneuvers, performed by five drill teams of the Modern Woodmen of America. The teams who competed were: Oregon Grape Camp, of Portland, 12 men under command of Chief Forester C. P. Smith; Elliot Bay Camp, of Seattle, 16 men, commanded by Chief Forester Fred Smith; Tacoma Camp, Tacoma, 16 men, John Wilson, chief forester; Fremont Camp, Seattle, 16 men, Chief Forester J. W. Lough, and Evergreen Camp, Portland, Chief Forester W. F. Sleepy. Spruce Camp, of Portland, under command of Chief Forester C. B. Vermehren, was on the grounds, but did not enter into the competitive drill.

Judges of Drill.

The judges were: Captain J. B. Gowen, of the Tenth Infantry, U. S. A., Lieutenant John Randolph, Tenth Infantry; Captain C. T. Smith, Third Infantry, Oregon National Guard, and F. D. Rennison, colonel of Foresters, of Portland. The points in competition were inspection, drill and movements, general appearance, uniforms, manual of arms, distance, foot motion and cadence, and the action and execution of the commanders. The drill was most rigid, and the men without exception entered into the spirit of the moment with splendid accord.

Each team was allowed about 20 minutes in which to go through the drills. As Evergreen Camp lined up before the judges and were dismissed by Captain Gowen, the crowds became almost unmanageable and a rush was made for the judges' stand, each one eager to learn what camp had been adjudged the winner.

With but little deliberation the judges awarded the first prize of $100 to Fremont Camp, of Seattle; the second prize of $75 to Elliott Bay Camp, of Seattle; the third prize of $50 to Tacoma Camp, of Tacoma, and the fourth prize, $25, to Oregon Grape Camp, of Portland. Fremont Camp made a general average of 95.7, Elliott Bay Camp 94.5, Tacoma Camp 90.5, Oregon Grape Camp 88.8 and Evergreen Camp 81.1.

The drill was promoted entirely by Portland members of the Order. The promotion committee was composed of J. W. Simmons, state deputy consul; R. W. Foster, chairman; J. W. Shears, J. J. Goddard, J. M. Davis, H. E. Manning, O. J. Groce, C. W. Meadows, A. J. Collins, Fred Graap, W. R. Gradon, W. H. Culpin, F. A. Knight, T. E. Edwards, John Reeb, J. F. Neltzel and others.

Woodmen in Parade.

Shoulder to shoulder, with the vim and vigor of seasoned veterans, cheering lustily and proudly waving their banners in the air, 3000 Modern Woodmen of America marched through the downtown streets at 8:30 o'clock last night, and received the ovations of the immense crowds which lined the streets on the line of march.

Promptly at 7:30 o'clock the Woodmen gathered at the Armory, Tenth and Couch streets, and awaited the order to "fall in." The main hall was packed with members of the order, and the smaller halls and corridors were filled to the walls with shouting, jubilant masters of woodcraft.

With but little delay, the members of the order were formed into marching line in Tenth street, and with flying colors and to the inspiring music of St. John's Camp Band, the column of Woodmen began their triumphant march through the downtown thoroughfares.

Take Up the March.

With Major W. T. Vaughn at their head, sitting proudly on his prancing charger, and Assistant Marshals F. D. Rennison, A. E. McMonnies and H. E. Manning dashing bravely along the lines, the Woodmen, to the cheering of the crowds, took up their march.

From the Armory down Tenth street to Morrison, the lusty Woodmen trudged, cheering, singing and otherwise making known to the world that they were glad they were members of the order.

"Column left," came the order at Tenth and Morrison streets, and the column filed into the latter thoroughfare and began its march into the heart of the city. Down Morrison street to Fourth, and then "column left" again, and the marchers swung springily into the latter street, and wended their way to Taylor street.

With the martial strains of the band lending a snap to their movements and a military stiffness to their spines, the Woodmen turned into Third streets, and to the plaudits of the crowds stepped down the street at a lively pace. At Stark street the column turned again and marched to Sixth street, and then with a right swing marched to Burnside street, where the men countermarched to Washington street, out that thoroughfare to Tenth street, where the Woodmen again turned their faces toward the Armory, and arriving there, disbanded.

Although the streets along the line of march were not so brilliantly lighted as usual, because of the failure of electric power, the marchers made a brave showing as they swung along to the clapping and shouting of hundreds of men, women and children. The usual Saturday night crowds were augmented by thousands, because of the Woodmen celebration, and owing to the good work of the police along the line of march, the people were exceptionally well handled.

Those drill teams which competed at the Exposition grounds yesterday afternoon led the procession, with Fremont Camp, of Seattle, the winner of the first prize, in the place of honor, and commanded by Chief Forester J. W. Lough. Following them came Elliott Bay Camp, of Seattle, winner of the second prize, under Chief Forester Fred Smith. Then came Tacoma Camp, of Tacoma, the men, with their white duck trousers and the white corded "frogs" on their blouses, flashing in and out of the crowds. Chief Forester John Wilson was in command of the team from the "growing" city. Then in brave array marched past the members of the Oregon Grape Camp drill team, of Portland, winners of the fourth prize, and commanded by Chief Forester C. P. Smith. Then with a martial tread the "pony" team of Evergreen Camp, of Portland, filed by, their banner proudly proclaiming that they had won the first prize for "pony" teams during the drills at the Fair.

Many Other Camps.

Then, although they were not uniformed, came other members of Portland camps, including Fir, Spruce, Grape, St. Johns, Woodmere, Mount Scott and Evergreen camps. And after them came members of the order from almost every city and town in the state, including Oregon City, Damascus, Reedville, Hillsboro, Forest Grove, Newberg, Clatskanie, Astoria, Salem, Eugene, Albany, Hood River, The Dalles, McMinnville, Cedar Mills and Prineville, whose members rode 92 miles in stage-coaches in order to take part in the monster parade. Many towns in Washington and California were also represented in the parade.

After the men on foot came the speakers and notable members of the order in carriages. The first carriage, contained J. O. Davis, M. A. Miller, Dr. J. B. Roth and C. D. Elliott; the second, J. E. Shears, A. Culpin and A. J. Collins; the third, W. R. Gradon, F. D. Rennison and John M. Davis; the fourth, F. J. Darkipton, J. J. Gotthardt and Fred Graap; and the fifth, Edward Manning, C. D. Elliott and J. W. Simmons.

Every man proudly bore miniature banners with "M. W. A." inscribed on them, on the lapels of their coats, and many men carried the silver ax, the emblem of the order. There were many banners flung to the breeze during the parade, which brought forth cheering and laughter from the crowds. "We adopted 12,000 members last month"; "Teddy caught the bear, but we caught him"; "We're not so slow, either, we caught a piece of it"; "Prineville—We came from the cow country, and brought our own money," were some of the inscriptions which caught the eyes of the people. An enormous silvered ax, borne by eight Woodmen, and a banner almost a block long, carried by probably 200 men, were features of the parade.

Initiate Class of Seventy-Five.

Upon the return to the Armory, the marchers disbanded and took part in the initiation of a class of more than 75 candidates, who were enlightened in the ways of woodcraft, and who also did a few funny stunts with the "goat." Fremont Camp, the prize-winning team at the competitive drills at the Exposition, yesterday afternoon, performed a number of intricate evolutions in the main hall, to the thunderous applause of thousands of "neighbors."

After the initiation, many prominent Woodmen adjourned to the Hotel Scott, where a banquet was served to about 300 of them. The feasters made the building ring with their speaking and cheering and laughing.

Speeches at Banquet.

R. W. Foster, of this city, was toastmaster. J. W. Simmons, state deputy for the order in Oregon, spoke upon the "Interests of the Order in Oregon"; J. O. Davis, of Los Angeles, state deputy for California, told about "Tropical California"; C. D. Elliott, of Seattle, state deputy for Washington, told about the work of Modern Woodmen in the state to the north; Head State Physician J. B. Roth, of Portland, spoke upon the work of his department; M. A. Miller, state lecturer, gave an interesting resume of the political aspects of the order in Oregon; and there were many other impromptu speeches, some of a humorous character, and some giving an insight into the workings of the organization.

When it was all over, the Woodmen knew that their work had been well done, and with this knowledge shouldered their axes, and by various paths through forest glades, made their way to their camps at home.

Gentlemen: Five of your No. 4 machines have been in constant use in our typewriting department for the past six months. Not one of them has given us the slightest trouble, and they are all in perfect condition today.

We find that "visible writing" results in more work in a given time, with less fatigue to the operator, and have decided to add to our equipment accordingly. Please "blind" the keys for the "touch" method, and deliver at once 10 additional machines of your latest No. 4 make. We shall soon be able to meet all your many calls for stenographers who are skilled in the use of the Underwood Typewriter.

Very truly yours,

September Promises to Eclipse August as Record-Breaker at the Fair.

The attendance at the Lewis and Clark Exposition still continues to increase, and the month of September promises to break all records for previous admissions. This large number is due to the tremendous attendance on the Fourth of July. The week ending August 23 is the third on the list, the admissions being 135,436.
