Portland, Sunday, September 24. ELEMENTARY TARIFF DOCTRINE. A letter from Mr. P. B. Johnson, of Walla Walla, which is printed elsewhere in The Oregonian, is worthy of serious comment.

On the other hand, a tariff, like the Dingley tariff, is exclusive, two results may logically be expected to follow and actually have followed.

But from a tariff which, like the Dingley tariff, is exclusive, two results may logically be expected to follow and actually have followed.

It is obvious, and a man who writes as intelligently as Mr. Johnson will doubtless admit the impossibility of discriminating this point, that a tariff which excludes foreign goods from our markets can draw no revenue from such goods.

makes an interesting reference to the tariff in 1821, and remarks that protection was then complained of because it produced an excess of revenue, while the Dingley tariff is now complained of because it causes a deficit.

One point more must be made. The average tariff rate in 1821 was about 41 per cent. The tariff of 1823, favored by Webster, was then for the most part still in force.

Somebody who knows what a awful thirst a Summer spent in Washington excites the President six bottles of beer. All the true facts of the incident have not yet transpired, but it is a case of foreign goods.

The C. T. U. remembers that there have been occupants of the White House who would look upon the action of the Allegheny Brewing Company as a great piece of impertinence.

These interesting facts are all recalled by the determined stand of the Allegheny W. C. T. U. to address the Chief Magistrate of the Nation.

THE HOME OF HUMAN ANTAGONISMS. "Nowhere else in the world," says the Philadelphia Ledger, "is there so great a confusion of languages, peoples and religions as in the mountains and steppes of Caucasia."

The tendency of isolation to preserve types, to institute new ones and to intensify peculiarities in human beings is well known.

These conditions here, however, are merely stepping-stones to those that prevail in the Caucasus. There, according to a careful estimate, sixty-eight distinct dialects are spoken.

maligancy of which is barely kept in check by the vigilance of civilization in its most advanced centers. There are very few communities that have not been touched by it, very few churches that have not through it been called to purge themselves of heretics and others who dare to speak the plain truth in voicing their convictions.

It was members under 40, of course, who had taken the affirmative. The outcome of this debate accounts for the fact that no minister now wears a mustache.

Itself to dominate the society, and if successful a period of war, strife and retrogression has been encountered. Then have followed times of reorganization, when the masses got together to secure their rights and set the community moving forward once more.

From every period of strife, after oscillations of success and failure, the mutual aid principle has justified itself. So that, by processes of experiment, the universal incidence of that law is demonstrated.
