

LOVE FEAST FOR THE REPUBLICANS

Delegates Will Gather From All the Districts in the State of Oregon.

PLANS OF THE MEETING

It is Hoped to Unite All Factions of the Party So That Bickerings of the Past May Be Forgotten.

That big things are in store for the Republican love-feast to be held in Portland one week from next Thursday, in the Empire Theater, is the assurance received from stalwarts all over the state by Frank C. Baker, chairman of the State Central Committee, who issued the call.

Representative Republicans.

The gathering primarily will be one of the State Central Committee, to discuss party policies, but affiliated with it in counsel will be representative Republicans from all counties in Oregon, including candidates for office—the whole to be a reunion of the hosts, summoned together to obliterate old party feuds if possible, and to bring together the warring elements into a harmonious Republican family.

The Text of the Invitation.

The invitation then sent by Mr. Baker reads: "You are cordially invited to attend the reunion and conference of Republicans in this city the 12th of next month in connection with a meeting of the Republican State Committee. The primary purpose of the event is to take the initiative in maintaining a public sentiment that will influence Republicans to support our principles, to discuss proposed amendments to the State Constitution and other public questions if deemed advisable."

Will Captain the Ushers.

Major Frank S. Baker, of the Oregon National Guard, will serve as captain of the ushers. The Major has had experience of this sort before in connection with the Vice-President Fairbanks and the Secretary Shaw meetings in this city during the last Presidential campaign.

ALVIN BROWN, OF FOREST GROVE.

Alvin Brown, one of the oldest of the living Oregon pioneers, came to Portland from his home in Forest Grove Friday to participate in the exercises in honor of Joe Meek at the Exposition. Mr. Brown was an associate of Meek in the early days. When the latter started East to Washington in 1847 Brown was one of a party that accompanied him as far as the summit of the Rocky Mountains.

Did Not Wait for Special Rates.

"People did not wait for the special rates," said an official at the Union Depot last night. "The heavy movement started with the first day of the week and continued right through, while the travel out of Portland has not been nearly so heavy for several days as previously. Trains for the next few days will be packed for interior points, as the visitors finish sight-seeing at the Exposition and shopping and start homeward."

carried, was small when taken into consideration with the business of the Portland Consolidated Railway Company. Conductors said yesterday evening that travel to the Exposition had been more evenly distributed throughout the day than the movement of large crowds on any previous occasion. Early in the forenoon the tide set in from all sections of the city toward the grounds skirting Guild's Lake. Throughout the day the flow of traffic continued, with only a brief intermission in volume at the noon hour. Cars were supplied in abundance by the management of the street railway company, and at the main entrance to the grounds the cars arrived less than a half-minute apart through the greater portion of the day.

Every Car Is Used.

In the afternoon every available car was pressed into service, and 150 cars were banked on sidings and double tracks distributed throughout the city and of the Willamette Heights line. When the visitors began departing in great numbers about 5 o'clock last night, these extra cars were brought into requisition and relieved the congestion that otherwise must have occurred. As speedily as the passengers could be discharged down town and along the various lines radiating from the central portion of the city, the equipment was hurried back to the Exposition to return with other passengers.

Late in the evening there was some congestion and managers poured out the main entrance gates, the American Inn gate and the exits from the Forestry building to the Thurman-street cars, filling them long before the main gates were in view. These loaded cars were hastened by with as little delay as possible. General Manager Fuller personally looked after movement of the traffic, assisted by division superintendents and the attorney-in-chief, and without special regard for schedules the cars moved in almost continuous unbroken lines as closely together as safe running permitted.

FEW ACCIDENTS REPORTED

Several Children Become Lost in the Crowds.

Considering the enormous throng gathered inside the Exposition gates all day yesterday, it is remarkable that no serious accidents marred the day's program. The ambulance answered several calls, which were sent in for persons who had become exhausted, but they soon recovered and it was not necessary to take these loaded cars were hastened by with as little delay as possible. Old People Visit the Fair.

The Sisters of Mercy return their sincere thanks to Mr. Ben Selling for his generous act of charity in sending tickets for over 40 old men and women to attend the Lewis and Clark Exposition on Portland day; also to the superintendent of the Portland Consolidated Railway for their free transportation to and from the Fair.

Pioneers Urged to Attend.

Friday, October 6, at the Exposition will be in honor of Dr. John McLaughlin and Abigail Scott Duniway. The name of Dr. John McLaughlin will typify the spirit of the pioneer fathers and Abigail Scott Duniway the pioneer mothers. All pioneer men and women are urged to attend, as well as women who wish to honor Mrs. Duniway as a leader of their sex.

A GREAT MATTER.

That Is, It Seems Important, and Doubtless It Is.

(NORTH YAKIMA, Wash., Sept. 25.—(To the Editor.)—I read the "She-Pope of Milliners" Madame Hunt's tirade on "Bare Heads on the Streets," in the Oregonian of recent date, which she chooses to call indecent. Who, forsooth, is this president of the National Milliners' Convention, who declares war on a great army of women who choose to appear on the streets, to walk or ride with unadorned heads? I admit that any person has the right to improve and protect his business, but he has no right to wage war on the community, or a part of the community, by so doing. The madame may "sigh" and "shudder" be "horrified" and perhaps suffer an attack of hysteria, by coming in contact with a bare-headed woman on the street or in the store. "War and no compromise" is a declaration that will be resented by the average American woman, who is fast becoming mistress of her own ideas. The woman that charms the world today is a woman of courage, of original and independent character, not a bundle of dry goods and millinery. She can select a hat to her taste, and she can and will go bare-headed if she

H. Liebes & Co.'s $45,000 Exhibit

MANUFACTURES BUILDING, LEWIS AND CLARK FAIR

This exhibit is one of the most unique, original and valuable collections of furs that has ever been shown at any exposition. We have asked the jury of awards to judge our exhibit under the following divisions:

- First—For the best and most original exhibit.
- Second—For the best general display of fine skins.
- Third—For the best display of seal skins.
- Fourth—For the best manufactured seal skin garments.
- Fifth—For the best display of manufactured furs.
- Sixth—For the most original and stylish garments.
- Seventh—For the best display of mounted rugs.

Watch the daily papers for the decisions of the judges and see how many prizes we receive. The interior of the booth is paneled with the choicest skins, including leopard, seal, arctic hare, chinchilla, Siberian squirrel, ermine, sable, llama, etc. etc. The lettering is made from selected furs. One of the original novelties shown in this exhibit is a leopard kitten auto coat trimmed with land otter. The other garments are of the richest description and include Russian sable scarfs valued at $1800; seal skin jackets, neck pieces of chinchilla, ermine and mink. Mounted rugs include Bengal tigers, lion, bear and other wild animals. Every country in the world is represented in this exhibit, which is made by H. Liebes & Co., 288 Morrison street, the largest fur house in the world. This original booth and the lovely garments it contains were planned and executed by J. P. Plagemann, the resident manager.

TO BURN NEGRO MURDERER

Father of Victim Wants to Take Brute From Officers.

HOUSTON, Texas, Sept. 30.—Monk Gibson, a negro arrested yesterday in connection with the murder of Mrs. A. J. Condit and her children at Edna, Texas, Thursday, escaped last night from the police and hid him in charge of H. Sealley, father of Mrs. Condit, issued an appeal to the people of Edna and community today, in which he declared that the Sheriff was criminally negligent in allowing Gibson to escape, and said he would take the negro from the authorities who recaptured him and "burn him for a week," if the people would stand by him. The people of Jackson County are in a high state of excitement. The officers say they will protect the negro, and serious trouble may result.
