Out at the Exposition entrance yesterday morning two little children, a boy and a girl, stood hand in hand at the parting of the ways. One was laboriously clean with a white collar, painfully polished shoes, and an oddly assumed air of unconcerned worldliness; the other demurely quiet and bubbling with hardly suppressed excitement. Both had come, in common with hundreds, perhaps thousands of others, to accept the hospitality of the Exposition management as members of the public schools of the City of Portland.

On the one hand, the road stretched off to the right, on the other to the left, both promising much in explorations and delight. The two youthful tourists stood in silence a moment, deciding, and then the boy spoke. "Let's go see the big engine," he said, starting towards the Transportation building on the right.

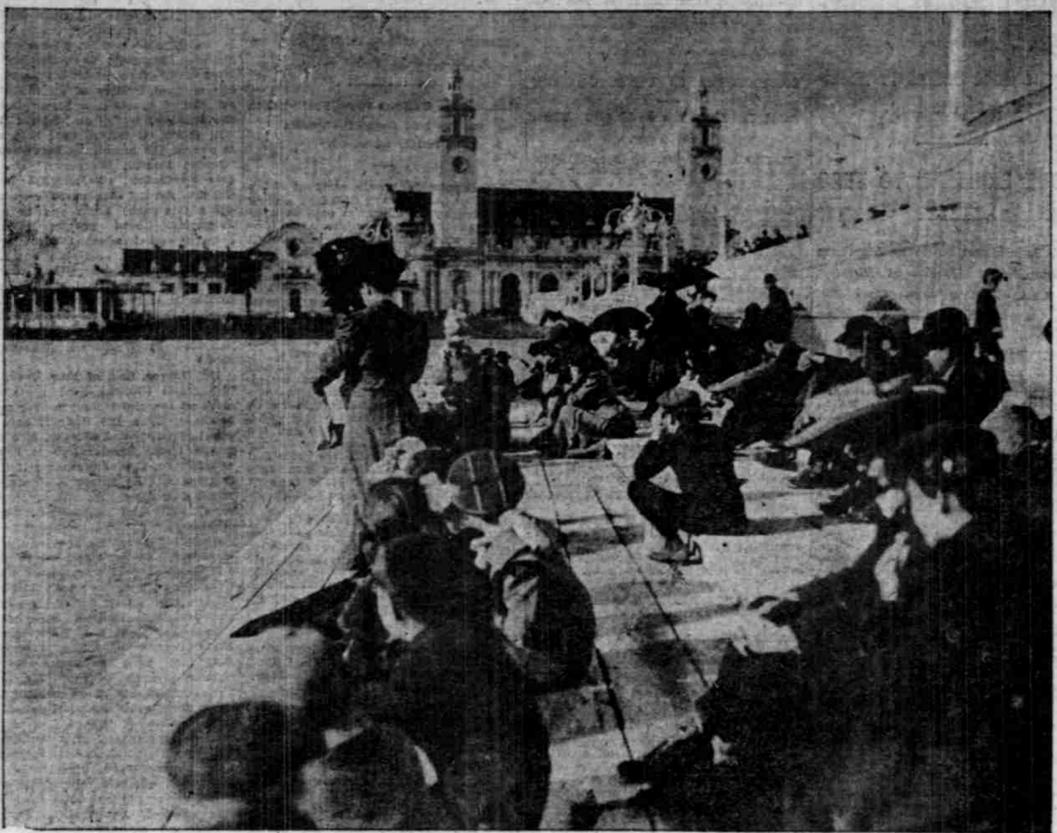

The girl held back. "I'd rather see the pictures and the pretty things," she said. "Now," said the other, "we'll see the engine and ride in the crane up in the roof." The man had his say, as used to be right.

Thousands of "Kids."
 Yesterday 14,000 tickets were distributed to the school children of the city, and a large part of them were used. Neither wind, nor sun, nor rain, could still the chatter of the girls or quell the wild whoops of the boys as they swarmed over the grounds and through the buildings, in groups or accompanied by parents or older friends. It was the day when the young were there to enjoy the Fair, and they did that to the full in their own original ways. The marvels of the buildings, the music of the bands and the shrill-voiced pipelers of the Trail all came under their critical inspection and criticism. They poked sly fingers at the exhibits, picked off an occasional grape which happened to be hanging low far out in some of the county displays, drank lemonade through the longest straws, and in general had the best time ever. Before the gates were opened in the morning they had begun to gather, and after the lights were shining at night they reluctantly, sadly, took their leave. The grounds yesterday entertained the most appreciative gathering, perhaps of the whole course of the Exposition.

At first the sun shone out in promise, and the grounds were thronged with the pleasure-seeking youngsters; then the rain came down in torrents, and the buildings filled as by magic.

In the Manufacturers' building two bedraggled eight-year-olds, just escaped from the rain, in front of the big yellow cone of butter. The girl looked admiringly at the edible animal, but the boy gazed raptly at his limp and clinging collar and short-lived shine. "I told mama it wouldn't do any good to do all that," he said.

Sympathy for Exposed Beauty.
 Down on the Trail later in the day they stood again in front of a piece alleged to be representative of the French capital, tal, and gazed at the obese beauty with the straight front eyes. "Gee!" said the boy, "I bet them ladies catch cold and have the grip."

In the Auditorium those children who had grown old in years gathered to pay tribute to Jefferson, and with them in the ebb of the crowd came those who had yet to grow. Some man who was supposed to know was telling of the honor and fame of the father of Democracy.

"Jefferson" queried the boy, reflectively; "he's the fellow that said 'Millions for defense, ain't he?'"

"No," was his companion's correction; "he said 'United we stand.'"

"That ain't right," said the boy, with superior wisdom; "he wrote something. That man up there just now said he did. He was the fellow that saw the sun and tree. For the past six weeks this valley has been represented at the Exposition by a special Commissioner, F. J. Chapman, who has distributed to visitors about 15 boxes of apples and 12 chests of strawberries. Watsonville ships about 2000 cars of apples annually and 1000 cars of berries, the last-named crop extending over eight to nine months.

Women Thank Mrs. Cartwright.
 The success of Abigail Scott Duniway day at the Exposition was due in great measure to the untiring efforts of Mrs. C. M. Cartwright, chairman of the general committee, who named all subcommittees. Mrs. Cartwright is intensely interested in all matters pertaining to the pioneers of the Northwest, and in Mrs. Duniway she had not only a pioneer, but a lifelong friend to serve. She has known Mrs. Duniway since the latter came to Oregon and deeply appreciates the value of the latter's work in the Northwest, especially to women. As chairman of the Women's Auxiliary of the Pioneer Association, Mrs. Cartwright's services have come to be much depended upon in Portland in the management of such matters, and the arrangements for the day in question, were deferred to her. Many expressions are heard of deep appreciation for the active part she took in making the day a success.

FORGER AT YOUTHFUL AGE
"Blossom" Carpenter, of Oakland, Found It Easy to Get Money.
 SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 7.—(Special)—Four crimes constitute the known record of "D. R. Blossom," the youthful bank forger, who was arrested by Detectives Gibson and Riordan, yesterday afternoon, and whose true name is Ambrose Carpenter. The young man comes of good family, and his first forgery, committed June 28, which was for $100, was settled by his parents, who are well-to-do residents of Oakland. He was arrested on that occasion, but there was no prosecution, and, like any other favored prisoner, his photograph was never taken for the rogues' gallery.

"Blossom" Carpenter seemed to experience little or no difficulty in getting money on his forgeries from the various banking institutions with which he did business. The matter of identification, evidently, was completely overlooked, and it was only necessary for the young criminal to present his forged paper, take his money and go his way.

Carpenter's first forgery was committed when he was employed by Mr. Rodgers, the husband of the woman whose name he forged. He had often gone to the bank for his employer, and it was easy for him to get a check cashed. It was only by a comparison of signatures that this crime was discovered and the forger taken into custody. For a time Carpenter refrained from felonious pen work, but of late he has taken up the game again, and seems to have played no favorites in the matter of selecting victims.

When he was arraigned in the Police Court today, Carpenter said he needed no lawyer, as he intended to plead guilty. Judge Morgan then committed him to the Superior Court, and set his examination for next Wednesday.

ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND SURPLUS
 With the Lewis and Clark Exposition entering on the last week of its existence, President H. W. Goode was able yesterday afternoon to state the final outcome of the enterprise from a financial standpoint. He stated that despite the heavy rains of the past week, which affected the attendance seriously, the surplus when the Fair ends will amount to more than $100,000.

The inclement weather of the past week cost the Exposition $25,000. Should the final week be attended by equally bad weather it is doubtful if the attendance would be so strongly affected. Many people there are who will desire to take a last look at the Exposition and the attendance on the last day is sure to be one of the heaviest of the Fair, probably heavier than on opening day.

But regardless of what may happen, the surplus will reach above the $100,000 mark that much has been set aside and will not be touched pending action of the stockholders. Should a distribution to those who invested in stock be made, from 25 to 40 per cent will be paid back on their investments. A deficit in the preceding other Expositions has established.

As to the number of paid admissions, it is known that the million mark has long since been passed. Before the Fair conservative estimates of the probable number of paid admissions ranged from 600,000 to 1,000,000. The figure most generally accepted was 800,000 of in that neighborhood.

With any kind of showing during the final week the total attendance will reach 2,300,000. Last night it had passed 2,345,000. Of this amount between 60 and 45 per cent are paid admissions. The total of free admissions represents between 35 and 40 per cent. The total paid admissions are known to have reached the immediate vicinity of 1,500,000.

Mining Building Open Today.
 Owing to the large number of awards received by the State of Colorado for its mineral exhibit at the Lewis and Clark Exposition, and consequent interest evinced in that exhibit by the public, J. C. Langley, Inspector of Mines, in charge for the commonwealth, announces that the Mining building will be kept open today during the hours that the grounds are open to visitors. This is the first Sunday on which the Mining building has been open.

SHOCK AT THE CLUBHOUSE
Electric Apparatus at Multnomah Club Blows Out.
 Two little girls, bathing in the tank at the Multnomah Amateur Athletic Club, got a shock, the lights in the house were blown out, and the entire police patrol reporting system rendered useless at 11 A. M. yesterday by crossed wires.

A pole belonging to the Automatic Telephone Company, which was being set up near the club building, at the head of Morrison street, fell across wires that were heavily charged with electricity, and on the back of the chair at Bunker Hill. And so the identity of the great President was established.

Children's day in solid enjoyment, proportionate to numbers was one of the great successes of the Exposition, and will remain longer in the memory of thousands than any other day of the whole year.

Pajaro Valley Sends Strawberries.
 Portland people have this week been favored with a taste of choice strawberries from the Pajaro Valley, California, of which Watsonville is the principal center, famed for fruit of both vine

Seven Golden Recommendations

Could you want any better indorsement of our materials and workmanship? Just think, we took FIRST PRIZE in every class. All this means that our exhibits were subjected to the most critical examination by expert judges. And remember that we used no better furs nor workmanship than we put into the garments furnished our customers every day in the week. Wouldn't it pay you to see us when you want furs?

DIABETES
 Complete Recovery of a Well-Known San Franciscan.

ADOLPH WEAKE, the capitalist, of 920 Green street, is one of San Francisco's pioneer business men. He was the founder of the Original California Compound, the corner of Battery and Broadway, in that city. Hearing that he had recovered from Diabetes (a disease that is believed to be incurable) Charles Stewart, a business man of Algonia, Ia., wrote him asking if it was true. We are permitted to copy his personal reply:

San Francisco, July 22, 1904.
 CHAR. STEWART, ESQ., Algonia, Iowa.—
 Dear Sir: Would have answered your letter sooner, but was out of the city in Pleasant county. Will now say that if you have Diabetes, nothing in the world will cure you but the J. J. Fulton Compound. You want to make up your mind in the first place to stay with it—don't take a few bottles and then stop either through impatience or imagination. You are all right. It will take time, but it will cure you. I took the medicine (a bottle a week) for a whole year and am now as well as I ever was in my life, and this was all of four years ago. I am much of the time in my mine, 500 feet underground, and with my bad effects. Of course, one has to live rightly. The sooner you commence taking this Compound, the sooner you will commence to get out of your misery. If you cannot get it once, and live rightly, in one year's time I guarantee you will be entirely rid of the disease and as well a man as ever.

Yours very truly,
 AD. WEAKE,
