

BIG DOORS CLOSE

Government Exhibit Building
Will Open No More.

FLAG IS HAULED DOWN

National Salute of Twenty-One Guns
Fired to Show That So Far as Government Is Concerned
Exposition Is Ended.

There was no more pathetic incident connected with the passing of the Lewis and Clark Exposition than the closing of the beautiful building which the United States Government erected in commemoration of this great centennial. The Government building has been one of the centers around which the deepest Exposition interest centered this summer. It was the one exhibit which interested the poor man and the rich man alike, the one in which every mother's son of us felt a like proprietary interest. And when it was forever closed yesterday evening at 5 o'clock there was scarcely a dry eye in the great multitude which gathered on the island to witness the closing ceremonies.

The programme arranged and carried out for these exercises was simple and brief, but there was a note of pathos in the proceedings which touched all hearts and made every man, woman and child realize the bold patriotism has upon the American public. E. L. Springmann, transportation clerk of the Government building, arranged the ceremonies for Mr. Geddes, and is to be highly congratulated upon their effectiveness.

Fire National Salute.

The Portland Hunt Club was in the midst of a hurdlings exhibition on the island in front of the big white building on the island when the first gun of the National salute of 21 guns was fired. There was a hush—and a second report boomed out on the evening air. Then a third, and the large crowd began to count, while the riders curbed their restless thoroughbreds. On the roof of the building a soldier stood beneath each waving flag, rope in hand. On the steps the Artillery Band was arranged, waiting for the last gun. When it finally pealed forth a bugler's clear, round notes sounded the death-knell and immediately the strains of the "Star Spangled Banner" told all that the United States Government building was forever closed to the visitors of the Lewis and Clark Exposition. As it played the soldiers pulled down each floating flag, and in a silence wherein none of the vast crowd spoke, every man uncovered his head. The presence of death seemed near-actual death, and the more closing of a building here and there a woman nervously wiped her eyes, and men cleared their throats and looked hard in front of them.

Tears in Eyes of Many.

Up the in big building sentiment was more unrestrained, and many friends wrung each other by the hand. They all stood it pretty well until taps sounded—the soldiers stood at attention and then broke down entirely. "Seems just like it was a family breaking up," explained Mr. Springmann as he swallowed a big lump in his throat and cleared his voice. "We have been here all summer together, and many of us were in St. Louis, too. Now that it is all over—well, we couldn't feel worse if we were all sick."

Big Doors Close.

Then the big doors closed and the guards began to clear the building of the stragglers who were still in the big crowd had been outside during the ceremonies, but immediately it was realized by the closing of the doors that all opportunity to see the magnificent Government display had passed. There was a general rush for the entrance and the public seemed possessed of a mad desire to get just one last glimpse. But it was too late, and a brave guard stood at each door to keep any one from entering. All afternoon there has been unusual crowds thronging the building, and requests were heard on every side, "more time had not been given to studying the interesting exhibits."

When the crowd finally turned away to watch the hurdlings again, there were many touching farewells and good-byes which Uncle Sam has employed to serve the Exposition public. Some parted never to meet again—others with the expectation of seeing dear friends soon. "But how we hate to leave Portland," was the universal regret.

DISPLAY OF FIREWORKS

THREE BRILLIANT PYROTECHNIC
EXHIBITS GIVEN.

Prove the Finest Ever Shown Upon the Pacific Coast and Delight
Everybody.

Three exhibits of fireworks for the closing day were given by W. H. Wilson, who has had charge of this display since the Exposition was opened, and each was a surpassing success, occasion, sufficiently grand to satisfy all beholders.

The daylight fireworks display in the center of the lake began at 12 o'clock noon. Fifty aerial Japanese shells, displaying fishes, serpents, figures of sicians, birds and animals were displayed.

An incident of the Last Night that will ever stand out in my memory occurred as we came up on the boat to Portland for the last sight of the glory which was the Dream City.

As soon as might be, however, I was inside the gates with thousands of others to see the final act of the beautiful pageant which we have been watching all through an ever memorable summer.

A. A. G. WRITES A VIEW OF THE FAIR'S FINALITY

BY ARTHUR A. GREENE.

I was not one of the patriots who spent all day yesterday saying farewell to the Fair. I just had to get down the river as far as Astoria for a few long breaths of the Pacific, so it was night when the boat brought me back. As soon as might be, however, I was inside the gates with thousands of others to see the final act of the beautiful pageant which we have been watching all through an ever memorable summer.

WRECK OF THE MISSOURI BUILDING AS SEEN FROM THE REAR.

The ruins of the Missouri building was a star attraction at the Lewis and Clark Exposition yesterday, thousands of visitors viewing it during the morning and afternoon. A thorough examination of the ruins yesterday failed to disclose anything that had escaped from the flames or water. Some of the exhibits, packed in boxes, were found untouched by the fire, but they were water-soaked, which utterly ruined them.

After delving in the pile of blackened boards, above which once stood the art gallery, the searchers found probably half a dozen small paintings, but they were scorched and of little or no value. None of the larger paintings could be located, and a couple of the statues found were broken and charred beyond recognition.

Commissioners E. S. Garver and E. E. McInnesy will remain in Portland several days before returning to St. Louis. About all they have to do is to settle the $3000 insurance which was carried on the art gallery. The commissioners do not place much reliance in the report that the fire originated from incendiaries. Chief of Detectives Donahue, at the Exposition, believes the fire started from defective wiring, or from a careless smoker. He says it is not at all improbable that some one might have thrown a lighted cigar or cigarette into the pile of rubbish at the back of the building, thus starting the fire.

charged. The concluding piece showed the American flag suspended to a parachute.

The initial night fireworks started at 10:00 o'clock with an elaborate display of aerial works fired in volleys. Following came the portrait in fire of President Goode emblazoned with electric fountains. The heavens were ablaze with volleys of huge rockets and shells, and the displays concluded with heavy cannonading.

The closing spectacle began at the midnight hour. The words "Goode Night" flashed out in the darkness, surrounded by a golden haze. This was closely followed by volleys of Roman candles, rockets, shells and aerial bouquets. The final salute was terrific and shook every building on the grounds.

May Lose an Eye.

While the crowd was inspecting the exhibits in the Government building yesterday afternoon, Norman Esbey, a

HOW THEY VISITED FAIR

THOUSANDS CROWD THE CARS FOR A LAST TRIP.

Thronged Linger at the Grounds for a
Last Farewell to the Exposition.

All cars to the Exposition grounds in the early evening were crowded with people anxious to see the Dream City before its lights should fade forever. At the main entrance there was a constant stream of men, women and children through the admission stiles that the attendants busier than they have been upon any other evening with the exception of July 4 and Portland day.

Once inside, the crowd scattered to all parts of the grounds and mingled with the thousands who were already there. The walks were everywhere covered with mud but they did not seem to mind it. One thought was uppermost with all—the last opportunity to see the great Exposition, and they were alike regardless of mud and rain.

Sightseers rushed from one display to another and from one building to another. For the first time, perhaps, many realized what a small part of the Fair they had really seen and sought to crowd into the last few hours the many things they had left undone during the four months of a halcyon summer. The charred remains of what had been but a day before the beautiful Missouri building was a source of interest and was viewed by thousands during the evening. They gazed upon it in silence and with perhaps a feeling of sadness as if its faded splendor were an omen of the destruction and desolation that is to follow.

There was none of the noise and little of the laughter which have been in evidence on other days of large attendance. Portlanders have shown a high sense of appreciation of their Fair from the day that it opened, but probably they have not felt its worth at any time more keenly than last night. As passing things always seem more precious, so it was with the Fair, and the usual noise of the grounds was hushed as if the people were thinking of the close of the Fair as of the last farewell to a friend whom they had learned to love.

While Ellery's Band played in the auditorium, the large crowd was parked as it has been but few times since the Exposition opened. So great was the crowd that it was difficult to maintain order. The Exposition guards were called to the scene to maintain order. For the most part, though, there was very little trouble in handling the throng, even in the crowded exhibit buildings.

A favorite point during the evening was the balcony at the rear of the Washington building where a splendid view could be had of the Trail and the Bridge of Nations. Standing room was at a premium with those who wished to take a farewell look at the beautiful electric display before leaving the grounds.

toward in our festival of a hundred days. There can be not a single aftermath to taint our recollection of what has been. Not even the cruel, ugly task of demolition; the sordid task of adjusting money and the unsavory whispers that always follow great achievement can mar that blessed retrospect that must always hark back to the time when the Dream City was a capital of chaste delights. The heritage which it bequeaths to the comprehending mind, ever remain unsold. It will remain always an inspiration, an incentive and a benediction. And now at last, as must come to all, portality, has arrived the end. Every great and good pleasure remains forever unlinked with sweet sorrow, so this morning, when the city of dreams has vanished, as the vision of the night must vanish, there will for always remain in the taste of the lotus a tang in the pleasure of that remembrance of pleasures and palaces in which a great and mortal beauty has died.

As for me, if there shall be a Dream City of Immortality and I shall see it, until then will I treasure in my mind's eye the sublimity which shone through the sorrow of the skies when the boat rounded the turn in the sympathizing river and the woman at the rail sobbed.

HUNT CLUB SPORTS

Hurdling, High Jumping and Push Ball Are Features.

THORNG SEES CONTESTS

Last Afternoon of Fair Memorable for Horsemanship Exhibition on Plaza of Government Peninsula.

Of the many interesting features of the closing day programme, the exhibition of high jumping and hurdling by the Portland Hunt Club was pronounced one of the most interesting and enjoyable. It took place on the broad plaza in front of the Government building, and the crowd which gathered at this point on the island at 4:30 o'clock was so dense that it was with difficulty the guards kept the lines defined. A short circular course was laid off, which included six good jumps, and over this the riders put their mounts while the crowd pushed dangerously near to watch the exciting sport. The high jumping exhibition took place immediately in front of the building, and the performance of each contestant was loudly cheered.

It was cold and wet, but the crowd cared not for bad elements. The horses were all on their mettle, and pranced about in picturesque fashion, and as each animal took the jump it seemed to be with a consciousness of being watched and criticised, and therefore did its best.

There were but three entries in the high-jumping contest—John Latta, on Dennis, T. S. McRath on Jerry, and William Walters on Frank. At first height all took the jump in good style, but as the bars were gradually raised, Mr. Walters' mount showed that he could take them better than the other two. The rider got good work out of Frank, and carried off the silver cup which was offered for this event.

Horses Took Hurdles Splendidly.

The hurdles were next on the programme, with the following entries: James Nicol on Will Wehrung, T. T. Strain on Bedad, H. H. Hendman on Nigger, A. D. Scoble on Tom Green, R. H. Jenkins on Jane, E. B. Stirling on Tom, J. D. Alexander on Breta, A. R. Cronin on Granger, Emmet Brown on Budget, and T. S. McRath on Jerry. Great interest centered in this number, and some pretty leaps were made. Will Wehrung, Mrs. F. Buffum's handsome thoroughbred, did some beautiful work under Mr. Nicol's masterful hand, but T. S. McRath brought Jerry up in better form than any of the other entries, and carried off the trophy—a handsome silver cup. In the double hurdle the decision was reserved, and will be announced later. This was an event over which the crowd went wild with enthusiasm.

Novel Sport Well Received.

Push ball was the final number of the Hunt Club's exhibition, and many saw it for the first time. The push ball owned by this hunt club is one of the finest in the United States, and proves a great novelty to many. Two teams, three on each side, played. William Walters, captain of one side, had E. B. Stirling and J. D. Alexander, while T. T. Strain headed A. R. Cronin and Emmet Brown. The contest was a close one, and was won on a narrow margin by Walters' team. The manner in which these riders have trained their horses to enter into the spirit of the contest is worthy of greatest praise, for they seem to take as much pride and interest in the game as their riders. As soon as the contest ended, the small boys flocked around the huge leather ball, and had the time of their lives with it. One woman who arrived late on the scene and saw the top of the ball above the sea of heads wildly puffing to her companions that the ship had grounded.

Children Separated From Mother.

"I want to go with my mother. She has always been good to me," wailed little Thomas Barrett, in the Juvenile Court yesterday, as he and his three younger brothers and sister were taken in charge by Officer Hawley, of the Boys' and Girls' Aid Society. He was comforted by Mrs. M. L. Trumbull, of the Children's Aid Society, who assisted in Juvenile Court work, and he very reluctantly consented to the separation.

The mother, Mrs. Mary Barrett, residing at 81 Union avenue, and she was placed under arrest for contributory delinquency in the care of her offspring. The names of the children are Thomas, Edward, Ann May and William. The eldest is 12, and the youngest years old. Their father, whose name was not given, was sentenced to the drink habit. Father Daly, a priest of the Catholic church, will try to help Mrs. Barrett to reform, and if his report for the next year is favorable, the children will be returned to the mother.

Died of Heart Disease.

James Connolly, aged about 52 years, died suddenly of heart disease yesterday, at the Home for the Aged, whither he had been sent a week before by Father Block. Mrs. John Robert Connolly, of Sunnyside, near which place the home is situated, arrived too late to render any aid. But little is known of Connolly's antecedents, although it is presumed he has been a resident of the city for some time. Coroner Finley has charge of the remains, although no inquest will be held.

A MOTHER'S LOVE.

What is More Beautiful than a Mother's Love?

"Who ran to help me when I fell
And would some pretty story tell
Of the place to make it well,
My mother."

A mother's worries are many. She sometimes forgets her own bodily discomforts because of her overpowering love for the child. She becomes broken down, sleepless, nervous, irritable and feels tired from morning until night. Many mothers of experience can tell you that at such a time they have been relieved, benefited and strengthened and put into proper health by taking a prescription which their mothers had told them was the best woman's tonic and nerve to be taken at such times. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has enjoyed an enviable reputation for over a third of a century. In all that time it has sold more largely in the United States than any other tonic for woman's needs, and to-day its sales are greater than ever. Dr. Pierce made up this prescription from native medicinal roots without the use of a particle of alcohol and for the single purpose of curing those diseases peculiar to women and when there is a lack of womanly strength to bear the burdens of maternal duty. How few women come to this critical time with adequate strength. The reason why so many women sink under the strain of a brief few hours because they are unprepared. Is preparation then required for motherhood? asks the young woman. And every experienced mother answers—"Yes."

"I unhesitatingly advise expectant mothers to use Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription," writes Mrs. J. W. G. Stephens, of Mila, Va. The reason for this advice is that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best preparative for the maternal function. No matter how healthy and strong a woman may be, she cannot use "Favorite Prescription" as a preparative for maternity without gaining a brief few hours of comfort. But it is the women who are not strong who best appreciate the great benefits received from the use of "Favorite Prescription." For one thing it makes the baby's advent practically painless. It has in many cases reduced the amount of suffering to a brief few hours. It has changed the period of anxiety and struggle into a time of ease and comfort.
