

REPUBLICAN IN RURAL SCHOOLS

J. H. Ackerman Tells Grange of Necessity of Such Instruction.

HOW TO ACCOMPLISH IT

Superintendent of Public Instruction Would Train Children to Save the Soil and Respect the Dignity of Work.

BEST NOT TOO GOOD FOR FARMER.

My friends, I wish to insist that the country is entitled to a special teacher to fit him for his chosen profession as in the city, and why not? Just as I firmly believe that the farmer's wife and daughter are entitled to a special teacher to fit them for their chosen profession as in the city, and why not? Just as I firmly believe that the farmer's wife and daughter are entitled to a special teacher to fit them for their chosen profession as in the city, and why not?

emphasize the commercial and literary and should lead to the State University. In both courses, due attention must be given to the fundamentals, viz., reading, writing, arithmetic and language, for without these, nothing can be accomplished. We are pleading for elementary agriculture in our schools for several reasons. First, for the purpose of instilling into the minds of the country boy and girl, love and respect for the land in general and for the occupation of agriculture in particular. We contend that in this day of advancement and scientific methods, the farmer cannot pursue his occupation by the aliphah, unscientific methods as of yore, consequently, he should receive systematic instruction, and that such instruction must be systematically given in our schools by teachers who have made special preparation for giving it. That is to say, the farmer of the future in this day of advanced industrial conditions, cannot hope to be successful with no other training than that picked up in a haphazard fashion on the farm, and must look to the public school for this training, as this is the only organization regularly established for his education.

Should Be Taught to Respect Industry.

"Second, unless the youth is taught to respect industry in general, and appreciate the material side of civil life, he will look upon all labor as mere drudgery and feel that culture is the only thing worth striving for, and that anything materialistic, material as it is for citizenship, is beneath his respect. To illustrate, I do not long since I stood in a schoolroom in which hung a picture of 'The Man With the Hoe,' and underneath it was written the words, 'Labor is the source of all wealth.' It seemed to me that any child looking at that picture from day to day would become so imbued with the thought that labor was beneath his respect, that he would shrink from the very thought of it, and especially all work connected with agriculture. I would banish all such pictures and thoughts from the schoolroom and place in their stead teachers who love industry for its own sake; teachers who are in full sympathy with rural life; teachers who can see the beauty of Nature as well as its material advantages. Then, and only then, will farm life be lifted beyond 'The Man With the Hoe' idea. May this come speedily, for the sake of the children who have the best interests of society at heart, and we verily believe that elementary agriculture, rightly taught, will be a most beneficial and inspiring education in our present school work nearly always exercises the reflective and receptive instincts in contrast to the other subjects. The active and creative instincts should be more fully cultivated. For this purpose no one thing affords such an abundance of material as does the growing plant. With the school garden, which will become, eventually, a part of every well-regulated school, the pupil will be brought into contact with the most interesting and profitable life under wise direction and instruction.

"Fourth—Every person, sooner or later, experiences an education and is accustomed to failures and successes. By means of the school garden he is taught to do a definite thing early in life and to make an intelligent choice of what he will do or why he succeeds, a lesson that cannot be too early learned.

Sources of Knowledge.

"Fifth—Our knowledge is derived from the sources—that which is acquired directly from objects, and the other, which we receive second-hand, so to speak. One of the benefits to be derived from the study of elementary agriculture is that it trains the pupil in ways and methods of acquiring knowledge for himself, and incidentally acquaints him with the manner in which the world is organized. It acquires and how the world's stock of knowledge has been accumulated. There are really two worlds—the school world and the world—and it should be the duty of the school to connect the school world with the real world as nearly as possible, and thus make the value and meaning of school work more apparent. One of the most valuable studies with which to accomplish this is elementary agriculture.

Critiques Dr. Snell.

Professor N. W. Bowland criticized Miss Snell, professor of the sciences in the Oregon Agricultural College, in his remarks on 'The Relations of the Grange to Education.' He contended that if the Grange were to take the education of children were carried out, they would disrupt the public school system. He also contended for better pay for teachers.

Manual Training Illustrated.

W. A. Law, of the South Mount Tabor school, demonstrated the practicality of the training department in the rural school, by showing the work that was being done in the Mount Tabor school, where a manual training department is maintained. Professor Standley, of the Portland Training school, could not attend on account of the illness of his wife.

SEEKS A REAPPOINTMENT

Alex Sweek Would Like to Remain as Referee in Bankruptcy.

Alex Sweek, in spite of the fact that he is a Democrat, would like to be again appointed as referee in bankruptcy in the United States District Court. Mr. Sweek has held the office since the passage of the bankruptcy law in 1898, by successive reappointments by the judges of the late Judge C. B. Bellinger, Judge Wolverton, the new incumbent, will now have the disposal of the office in his hands, and it is expected that he will appoint a Republican.

Look Upon as Prey.

"When I am in Seattle I never wear my Alaska button, because if I do I am looked upon as legitimate prey," said Dan Kala, at the Perkins Hotel, recently. "That is the truth of the so-called Seattle spirit you hear talked about so much. I can buy goods in Portland cheaper than in Seattle, and have done it. But I have always had trouble in getting the Portland supplies transferred from the wharves to the ships. Of course, those who buy in Seattle are shown preference. I always have advocated a steamship line being established between Portland and Alaska, and I am sure that it would be a great success."

ALASKA ASKS PORTLAND'S BID

Wants the City to Bid for Immense Trade of the Northwest.

IS GOUGED BY SEATTLE

Business Men of the Great Territory Desire to Make Purchases From the Merchants of This City.

A. M. Green, of the Behring River coast, says: "A line of steamers plying between Portland and Alaska would be the most profitable investment of its kind I know of." L. C. Dillman, who has been identified with some of the biggest projects in Alaska, says: "The man who is interested in Alaska look with favor upon Portland and it only remains for the business men of this city to make an effort to secure that which they are entitled to."

Seattle in Disfavor.

That Seattle is now in disfavor with the majority of the Alaskans is generally admitted, but the Alaskans have been anxiously awaiting a move on Portland's part to rectify the matter. There is a charming manner at their new home on East Thirty-ninth and Caruthers streets, on Thursday evening, December 7. The first prize was won by S. B. Cobb, the Alaskan, sister of the bride, who was charmingly entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Philip Buebe on November 22. On this occasion S. B. Cobb won first prize and Mrs. Annie Buebe second.

Portland's Opportunity.

"The Northwest is the bread-basket of Alaska, but there is only one opening of importance that is apparent," said Mr. Green at the Perkins Hotel yesterday afternoon. "That is to say, there is another opening, just as easy for the Alaskans to reach, though, as the one they are now obliged to use, and that is Portland. You must also remember that either or everything they take over they have something behind, and the people of the Northwest are the ones who profit off them."

Coal Fields of North.

"The Behring River coal fields produce the finest grade of coal of any found on the Pacific coast, and extend about eight miles in width and about 30 miles in length. The veins are from three to 40 feet in width and there are millions and millions of tons of coal already discovered. It is in this respect, unless the Alaskans in our direction, and we will have adequate transportation facilities within a year at the latest."

WEDDINGS.

Breck-Hendershott. BAKER CITY, Ore., Dec. 9.—The prettiest wedding of the season, in Baker City, was celebrated yesterday night. The bride, Mary Elizabeth Hendershott, of Union, was united in marriage to Mr. Charles H. Breck, of the wholesale firm of Breck & Block, of this city. The wedding took place at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, in the presence of about 80 invited friends and guests. While a choir, consisting of Miss Gertrude Tice, Miss Belle Kellogg, Mr. F. Daly and Mr. F. M. Saxton, sang "O Perfect Love," the bride, on the arm of Judge Samuel White, entered, preceded by her bridesmaid, Miss Lillian Union. They were met at the church by the groom and his best man, Mr. Ned Parker. While the choir sang "The Blessing," the Rev. E. E. Edson, Rev. B. Taylor Griffith pronounced the Episcopal marriage service. As the bride and groom left the church, Miss Anna McKay played the wedding march, a recorder was rendered them at the home of Mrs. Anna McKay, and they were the recipients of
