UNITY IN EXPLOITATION

Theme of Addresses at Banquet
Working Together for the Common Good of the Northwest, Indorsed by All.

With the visit of the delegation of representative members of the Spokane Chamber of Commerce to Portland, the executive committee of the Portland Commercial Club sees the dawn of the accomplishment of one of its chief ambitions and purposes. The executive committee of the Commercial Club, which handles the promotion work of that organization, has long fostered a desire to bring about complete and everlasting harmony among the commercial bodies of Washington, Idaho and Oregon, so that they could conduct together an immense, effective and well-organized campaign of exploitation to further the interests of the Northwest as a whole, and not as a part. Spokane has joined hands with Portland with this end in view, and it might be said that the great aim has been accomplished.

Portland has always been particularly friendly with Spokane, and that the sentiment of good-will is stronger at the present time than ever before was shown yesterday and last night when the representatives of the delegates from the Inland Empire were the guests of the Commercial Club. The Commercial Club upheld its reputation as the most gracious of hosts, and the delegates from the Spokane Chamber of Commerce proved to be the most appreciative of guests. The friendly feeling which exists between the commercial interests of the two cities was cemented to a solidly which promises to hold fast.

Eleven Members in Party.

There were 11 members in the party which arrived in Portland yesterday morning, and all of them are prominent business men of Spokane. They came upon the invitation of the Commercial Club to confer upon the methods of exploitation with the executive committee so that both could be mutually benefited. So successful was the visit and so harmonious was the sentiment that moved all that it is probable Portland will return the visit within the near future. There never has been any friction between the commercial bodies of Portland and Spokane, but from now they will work in greater union which it is believed will mean additional strength and effectiveness for both.

Guests at Informal Luncheon.

The delegation took quarters at the Hotel Portland, but at noon were guests at the Commercial Club at an informal luncheon. A few impromptu addresses were made. In the afternoon, under the guidance of Manager Tom Richardson, of the Commercial Club, the party visited the various sights of interest about the city. At night the delegates from Spokane were the guests of the executive committee of the Commercial Club at a banquet held in the quarters of the club.

In every respect the banquet was a success, and all who were present were delighted with it. Only the very best of feeling prevailed and the sentimentality dominated that Portland and Spokane must look hands across the chasm of distance that separated them and work as one unit for a greater Northwest.

Speaks for Union.

"We shall know no Inland Empire, no Washington, Oregon, Idaho, no Spokane, Seattle, Tacoma, Portland, but will work together united with the common purpose of furthering the interests of the great Northwest." When G. B. Dennis, chairman of the delegation, made this remark at the banquet he spoke for all. Theodore B. Wilcox, chairman of the executive committee, presided as toastmaster. He made the opening address. He said the methods employed by Portland in exploiting Oregon and the Northwest were open to all and that there were no secrets. He said that he felt certain that the hearts and minds of the citizens of the two cities were moved by the same impulse. He declared there was a new spirit of progress in Spokane and that, as there was unlimited energy behind it and based upon a rockribbed foundation, he predicted a great future for that city. He also paid Manager Richardson several splendid compliments.

Dennis Compliments Portland.

D. B. Dennis was the next speaker. He took occasion to throw many compliments to Portland, but he spoke with such apparent sincerity that his hearers believed they were prompted by something more than the instincts of politeness. He spoke of the commercial affiliation between the two cities and said that they of Spokane were there to carry forward wise and admirable purposes and to join hands in effective service to the great and varied commercial branches of the man industry, as it obtains in the Northwest country.

Many other addresses were made, but all were along the same line. The members of the executive committee praised Spokane and the guests praised Portland, but for the most part they spoke on the importance of the two cities working in harmony, which they said would spread until their lead was recognized by all the cities in the Northwest as a medium of inestimable value in upbuilding and populating this section of the country.

Speakers for Spokane.

Those who spoke on behalf of Spokane were G. B. Dennis, C. M. Fassett, Cyrus Heppy, E. F. C. Van Dassel and R. B. Patterson. The Portland speakers were Theodore B. Wilcox, Tom Richardson, A. L. Jerns, W. M. Ladd and Robert Livingston.

The last address was made by Mr. Dennis, who on behalf of Spokane and the Inland Empire invited a representation from the Commercial Club to return the visit. I. N. Fleischner proposed a toast to the commercial and promotion organizations of San Francisco and California, which was drunk standing.

Guests at the Banquet.

The others present at the banquet were W. S. McCrea, H. L. Bleeker, Alonzo M. Murphy, George J. Moeller, David Brown and L. McLean, of Spokane; I. Allen Lewis, J. C. Ainsworth, Edgar B. Piper, J. Frank Watson, C. E. Jackson and Walter F. Burrell, of Portland.

SMITH ELUDES ARMED POSSES

are stationed at several points along the railroad between Woodburn, Gervais and Brooks, for the leaders anticipate that the desperate outlaw will resume his previous tactics by again attempting to follow the railroad. Should Smith leave his hiding place tonight he will be met by determined men, gathered in three at points likely to be selected by the desperado in his attempt to go south.

Among the men under the supervision of Detective Frank Snow and Chief Burns are Patrolmen James Anderson, Robert Phillips and Fred Mallett, of the Portland police force, and Detective Andy Vaughn, all of whom were selected by Captain Bailey for their courage and ability to shoot and shoot straight when the occasion requires. Others along the route are the best deputies under Sheriff Culver of Marion County, who is indefatigable in his efforts to capture the fugitive. Smith is expected to put up a hard battle, for he is known to be desperate, and having already killed two men the sacrifice of other lives will have no terrors for him.

A careless member of the posse, who was engaged in testing the magazine of his rifle on Main street in Gervais, came near shooting a young lady passing at the time. As it was she was badly scared and was in great danger of being severely injured for his awkwardness.

HOPE FOR SHERIFF SHAVER

FRIENDS THINK HE MAY SURVIVE HIS WOUNDS.

Colored Man Shot by Posse Will Recover, It is Said, Without Doubt.

WOODBURN, Or., April 28.—(Staff Correspondence.)—At midnight physicians attending Sheriff Shaver reported him to be resting easily with a slight change for the better in his condition. His friends now feel reassured in hoping he may survive the fearful wound inflicted by Smith this morning. Mrs. Henderson, wife of the murdered Marshal, is reported to be in a serious condition as a result of the tragedy, and she is under the care of a physician.

It is now said there is no doubt as to the recovery of the colored man who was shot down by a posse at 4:35 A. M.

Smith's tactics in bringing down the two officers show plainly that he is a dangerous man, and one who is able to keep his head in the hour of trouble, which renders him doubly dangerous. All reports agree that he was seemingly cool when he opened fire on the officers this morning. He did not raise his weapon, but fired from his hip. Possibly he fired through his pocket, where he had his weapon concealed. The gun is of a caliber.

This method was employed by him in murdering Watchman George Hanson at Oregon City Tuesday morning. The shooting was done at a range of not more than eight feet. The two officers were following the man down the railroad track in the direction of Gervais.

Sheriff Shaver and Culver had just followed him in from McKee Station, where he had broken from cover after being partly surrounded, as was stated in the Oregonian. They had been watching for him, and seeing a form moving down the Southern Pacific track, went in pursuit. Sheriff Culver, with Joe Richards and Chester Henderson, of Woodburn, kept to the road, while Shaver and Captain Henderson followed on the track directly behind the fellow. The night was so dark they were not sure enough of their man to shoot him down. At a point 100

The FOREMOST DESIGNS IN FURNITURE OF QUALITY

Such are the pieces which comprise our showing of fine furniture for the parlor, the living-room, the library, the dining-room, the bedroom and the hall. In its extensiveness, the various famous period designs are well represented. Among these may be mentioned the elegant French styles of Louis XV and Louis XVI, the stately Empire designs; the English designs of Hepplewhite, Chippendale and Sheraton, and the ever-popular Colonial. All high-grade furniture pieces are designed and classified under these splendid period designs.

Our gathering of fine furniture embraces selections from the world's foremost designers and builders of classic furniture. Such designs as these are the most desirable—ever stylish and up-to-date.

We have recently added to our display of "quality furniture" many new and exclusive pieces. We particularly call attention to our new and handsome line of davenports, also the English upholstered arm chairs and rockers. These pieces are of the very best double-spring construction and filled with the best quality hair. Other pieces here also in great variety. Parlor, living-room, dining-room, library and bedroom suites in the carved or plain designs. Arm chairs, arm rockers, divans, settees, parlor tables, yards south of the Woodburn station there is an are light over the railroad. The officers had nearly overtaken the fellow when this point was reached. Without making any effort to evade them, Smith turned suddenly and walked back toward the officers. He seemed to have his hands in his pockets. He walked directly past the two officers, who recognized him as he passed. "Throw up your hands!" ordered Sheriff Shaver. A volley of shots was the result. Marshal Henderson dropped in his tracks without returning the fire, although he leveled his rifle. Afterward it was found the safety catch on the weapon had not been released. The Sheriff fell an instant later, but not until he had fired twice at the outlaw. The three men on the road then opened fire. While Smith did not drop, he is said to have cried in agony and to have thrown his hands above his head. Shaver stated afterward that he was sure he hit the fellow. If so, the wound is undoubtedly little more than a flesh wound. Smith then ran down the railroad embankment to the west, whence he disappeared in the darkness. He was not pursued for the time being, full attention being given to the wounded officers. The shooting of the colored man occurred in the depot grounds, and was done by a group of men who had just searched an outgoing train in hopes of finding Smith. J. J. St. Angel saw a suspicious appearing individual running towards the train and ordered him to halt. The darkness still being thick, so that the features of the running man could not be seen, it was thought to be Smith. A volley was at once fired, three shots taking effect in his shoulder and right arm. The error was quickly discovered, and the wounded man taken to a hospital. Many people have reached Woodburn tonight for the funeral of Marshal Henderson. State and militia officers are among those to appear, and the dead man will be interred with full military honors. The rewards held out for the capture of the murderer now aggregate $1500, of which $500 is offered by Clackamas County, $500 by Marion County, and $500 by Sheriff Culver.

Has Many Relatives in Portland. Sheriff Shaver has three brothers who live in Portland, all of whom are interested in the Shaver Transportation Company. They are J. W. Lincoln and Delmer Shaver. His mother is also a resident of the city. Mrs. Herman Wittenberg, Mrs. George Hoyt and Mrs. Albert S. Heitz are his sisters. He has also another brother, George, now in Alaska. In the Oregon City home are his wife, two sons and three daughters. The eldest son, Earl, is employed by the Pacific Biscuit Company, in Portland. Miss Zelma Shaver was for some time school-teacher in Portland. Sheriff Shaver is 53 years old and is serving his second term as Sheriff of Clackamas County.

SEATTLE WINS THE TROPHY

Athletic Club Takes the Des Chappelles for First Time in History.

SEATTLE, Wash., April 28.—Ralph Metcalf, of Tacoma, was elected president of the Pacific Northwest Whist Association, and the following officers were chosen today:

H. F. Holmes, Portland, vice-president; G. R. Eastman, Tacoma, secretary; E. F. Walte, Portland, treasurer; W. F. Zerwick, Seattle, and O. V. Linn, Olympia, directors.

For the first time since the association was organized, Seattle won the whist championship and captured the Des Chappelles trophy. This was taken tonight by the Seattle Athletic Club No. 2 team. It has been held several times on challenges by Seattle teams, but never heretofore won in a tournament. In the semi-finals the Seattle Athletic Club team No. 1 won from Olympia, and Seattle Athletic Club No. 2 took place from the Des Chappelles, of Tacoma. In the finals the second S. A. C. team won out. Tonight the tournament ended with a banquet tendered by Mrs. Wisner in the Stander Hotel.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mrs. C. H. Prescott and Miss Atwood leave tonight on the N. P. railroad for New York.
