CHAT WITH KING AT REID DINNER

President's Daughter Given Seat Next Edward England, at His Request.

WIT CHARMS THE MONARCH

Special Attention Shown Mrs. Longworth Makes Her the Center of Attraction With the Members of the Inner Circle.

(Special Cable to the Central News and The Oregonian.) LONDON, June 30.—The triumphs of Mrs. Longworth, daughter of the President, in London Town have been multiplied, so I can add but little to her doings. What may be of interest, however, is part of the conversation between the King and Mrs. Longworth at the historic dinner given by Whitehall Reid. As you know, the King particularly asked that Mrs. Longworth, in whose honor the dinner was given, should sit next to him. The rules of precedence prevented his taking her in to the table. This conversation has been detailed to me by one of the back-benchers who were present, and understand it is the gist remembered by Mrs. Longworth and afterwards inscribed in her diary. The conversation was for a time general and largely dinner talk made of the moment. The King told one or two witty stories at his end of the table, but the first opportunity and when the dinner was in full swing he turned to Mrs. Longworth and engaged her in what might almost be termed a private conversation. Here it is as detailed to me.

King Opens With Compliment.

The King—I am really delighted to meet you, Mrs. Longworth. I so much admire the American woman. One of the charms of English society today lies in the presence of so many brilliant Americans. Mrs. Longworth—Thank you, sir. It is very good of you. The King—I shall esteem it an honor to meet you and your worthy father. We know much of him here. I have read his books and enjoyed them immensely. Mrs. Longworth—I know father is hopeful of meeting you soon. He has a great admiration for you. The King—Ah, we hope to meet him when your country can spare him a holiday. And this visit to England is still your honeymoon? We must do our utmost to make you enjoy it. How did you like your trip through the Southern States and in Cuba? Mrs. Longworth—Oh, it was all delightful, but England I think is just grand. I just adore it already. The King—I am glad to hear that. You have come during our best month of the year, the month of roses and sunshine. London is at its best now and so is the country. I confess to being a true Cockney. London is very dear to me. Perhaps you will change your opinion when you go to Paris. Mrs. Longworth—No, Paris beautiful as it may be, is not in any danger. The King—Ah, first loves' reign with you. Mr. Longworth, a very charming man. You must be very happy. Mrs. Longworth—We are. The King—Yes. Enjoy life. Life is a glorious thing. And too few there are who realize it until too late. And too few know how to enjoy it. You are quite a traveler. I understand you must have enjoyed your trip to the Far East. Mrs. Longworth—Oh, yes. That was just splendid. I fell in love with the Orient. The King—And also in the Orient, eh? But let us be thankful not with the many Sultans of the Philippines. Mrs. Longworth—Oh, that was the awful American report. They are generally nice boys, but they do invent some weird yarns. Visit of the Long Ago. The King—Yes, I have seen some of your mammoth papers and the Sunday ones. They are especially wonderful. I much regret that I cannot journey to America and see the wonderful country for myself. I was there once, but it is so long ago that a perfectly new and more wonderful country has grown up. Mrs. Longworth—We would be awfully glad if you would come over. I can promise you a good time. The King—It is good of you. I feel sure you would. But what are your plans? Will you be long in England? Mrs. Longworth—We expected to stay only a fortnight, but I feel sure we shall be here a month. We have so much to see and do. The King—You must spare me some of your precious time. I want you to meet the Queen. Then you should also grace Ascot and go to Windsor. It is very beautiful there. I will speak to Mr. Reid. Mrs. Longworth—Thank you, sir. I will consider these commands. So Charming, Says the King. The King—That is particularly charming of you. Do not forget to bring your husband. Mrs. Longworth—No, sir. I haven't had time to begin to forget him. The King—Never begin, then. But we are all envious of your husband. You might have visited us earlier and given some of my Englishmen a chance. America is first surely in enough other matters. Mrs. Longworth—But it is reported that America makes the best husbands. The King—I quite believe that. But could one be anything but "best" with such charming mates as you American women? Mrs. Longworth—Ah! When I go back I must tell our women what an admirer they have. The King—A good many of them know it already. I hope we shall have another chat very soon. You must tell me of some of your experiences in the Far East. I admire you very much, Mrs. Longworth, and am glad indeed of having had this opportunity of meeting you. Mrs. Longworth—Thank you very much, sir. I am delighted to have met you. I have looked forward to it for a long time. We hear so much of your charm in the States, and now I realize it. The King—Ah. That is very pretty, in-

STUDIO MURDER MYSTERY.

LONDON, June 30.—The "studio murder," as London's latest mystery is called, is still unsolved, so far as the public is concerned. The police claim to know the murderer, but are unable to arrest him, as the principal witness has placed them in a remarkably puzzling position. Archie Wakely, the murdered man, was a wealthy artist of considerable fame. He was the owner of a saloon and several houses. He was about 40 and unmarried. In fact, he was known as woman-hater and preferred the society of young men. He lived in a luxuriously equipped studio on Westbourne Grove, one of the principal West End shopping streets. He was the only person who slept in the building. He was murdered between midnight and 2 A. M., one night some weeks ago. The body was discovered next morning lying in a pool of blood, with the skull smashed in with a hammer. The body was dressed in the old Whitechapel "Jack the Ripper" style. There were marks of the jaws of a spur on the thighs and abdomen. There were no finger marks, clews or traces whatsoever excepting the spur marks. Nothing had been stolen from the studio. The police worked on the theory that the murderer was a soldier of a cavalry or artillery regiment. With the help of the War Department they ferreted out every soldier who had passed for that night from the London barracks or who was on furlough in London. A witness came forward, a very reliable man, who lived opposite the studio, and who, on pulling the blind at his window down at 11 o'clock on the night of the murder, saw Wakely and a soldier enter the studio building. An electric light was close by, and the witness is sure that he saw the soldier in every detail, including the spurs. Another witness was found who stated that Wakely was in the studio at 10 o'clock. He was a soldier in the Royal Horse Guards. He told of casually meeting the artist in the street, of an invitation to go to the studio for a smoke and a drink, of a peculiar proposition made to him there by the artist, and of his leaving the place disgusted. He is a fine, manly young soldier, and although he is not a member of the police, he is a very reliable man. He was satisfied that he was in barracks and asleep by 10 o'clock. Mrs. Longworth—How did you have your hands on the murderer? They describe him as a soldier of a vicious and neurotic temperament, one thoroughly capable of working himself into a state of ungodly passion and battering Wakely into a shapeless mass and also committing the "Jack the Ripper" atrocity. But they claim, if this man was arrested, that he would convict, as their principal witness has sworn to the exact uniform the soldier who entered the building wore, and it is not anything like the uniform worn by the regiment to which the suspect belongs. So, although the police are satisfied that they have solved the mystery, it is still unsolved so far as the public is concerned or the arrest and punishment of the murderer.

NO RED TIES IN GERMANY.

Red Socks Are Also Banned by Law Passed in 1849. (Special Cable to the Central News and The Oregonian.) BERLIN, June 30.—To those who may travel in Germany in the near future it will be well to remember that there is in existence a law, passed in 1849, against the wearing of red ties. This law covers all sorts of clothes of a red hue, including socks. A youth at a school in Leipzig wore a red tie when he answered his name at roll call, and the teacher ordered him to take it off instantly. He refused, for his little sweetheart had given it to him for a birthday present. A convulsion of teachers was held and the boy was again ordered to take off the tie. On again refusing a policeman was summoned and the boy was marched to jail. The tie was confiscated. The boy was indicted under the old law for wearing Republican colors calculated to offend loyal subjects and incite to a breach of the peace. The prosecution acquitted the boy, but ordered the red tie destroyed and cautioned the prisoner not to repeat the offense.

GOVERNMENT TAKES THE BETS

Only Pari-Mutuels Are Sold on French Race Courses. (Special Cable to the Central News and The Oregonian.) PARIS, June 30.—The system of cutting out all bookmakers at the racetracks and only allowing the government pari-mutuel betting has proved a huge success. The figures show this. At Longchamps, on the Sunday the Grand Prix was run, 5,157,725 francs were taken by the pari-mutuel, 2,000,000 francs more than last year. Each race day has shown a corresponding increase. This is the system for which a syndicate of American bookmakers made a big bid to the government. The proposition looked acceptable at one time, and a committee came here from the United States to complete the deal, but there was a hitch somewhere and the government called it off. Now it has become so profitable to the government, which takes a percentage of the gross, that the Americans will have to raise their offer if at any time in the future they think of taking up the matter again.

CONDEMNATION FROM POPE.

Intellectuals Are Making Too Great Concessions to Modern Thought. (Special Cable to the Central News and The Oregonian.) ROME, June 30.—The pope very soon will issue a document that will create a profound impression in the Catholic world. In this document his holiness will severely condemn the tendency of Catholic intellectuals, who he considers are going too far in their concessions to modern thought, thus departing from the traditional doctrines of the church.

Recurring Disaffection Among the Troops Convinces Emperor of Folly in Attempting to Force Recess of the Douma.

ST. PETERSBURG, June 30.

The downfall of the Goremykin Ministry, whose attempts to bridge the chasm between the government and Parliament have resulted only in widening the breach, is now virtually an accomplished fact, if the statement of a Grand Duke can be accepted. According to this personage, the final desperate effort of the faction headed by Minister of Agriculture Stichtsky, which wishes to disperse Parliament and again resort to repression, has failed. The recurring disaffection among the troops probably convinced His Majesty of the folly of trying further to temper the feeling of the country. At any rate, according to the Grand Duke, the decision has been taken to bow to Parliament, dismiss the Ministry and to make no attempt to impose a forced recess. Not an Abject Surrender. A frank surrender of power into the hands of the Constitutional Democrats, which would mean nothing less than the inauguration of a true constitutional monarchy, would find the leaders of that party ready to undertake the fight against the rising tide of revolution; but it is too much to expect the Emperor and the court to make such an abject capitulation. In spite of the domestic negotiations between conservative Constitutional Democratic leaders and Emperor Nicholas have been secretly in progress for several days. But there is no reason to believe that they have evinced anything definite towards superseding the Goremykin Cabinet with a mixed Ministry of Constitutional Democrats and Octoberists. From the Council of the Empire, with Finance Minister Kokovtsov as Premier. Would Only Defer Issue. Such a Cabinet, if it could be formed, might temporarily tide over the present crisis, but the diverging elements would probably be incapable of working in harmony, and thus it would only postpone and not solve the great issue. The difficulty of forming a new Cabinet is likely to delay the announcement of Premier Goremykin's resignation until the dawn of the decision at Peterhof. MIRSKY'S ESTATE IS BURNED. Cossacks Have Been Sent to Disperse the Peasants. ST. PETERSBURG, June 30.—The estate in Orel Province Sviatopolk-Mirsky, ex-Minister of the Interior, was burned by peasants last night. Cossacks have been dispatched to the scene. M. Anniken and Alladin, the peasant leaders in Parliament, have received a warning from the garrison for the Salvation of Russia, of Odessa, that they have been sentenced to death. A Sergeant belonging to the Onega Regiment, who is just returning from the Baltic provinces, where it participated in the suppression of the revolutionary disorders, was killed yesterday in front of his company at Krasnoe. The company was presumed to be a round of blank cartridges, but the Sergeant fell dead with a bullet through his body. There is no doubt that he was killed by design. Promise That Massacres Shall Cease. ST. PETERSBURG, June 30.—The resolution of the United States Congress with regard to the anti-Jewish excesses at Bialystok were presented to Foreign Minister Isvolsky today by Ambassador Meyer, and they were referred to M. Stolypin, Minister of the Interior, in whose department the matter properly belongs. Assurance was given to Mr. Meyer that all necessary steps had been taken to prevent a repetition of the excesses at Bialystok and elsewhere. The Russian government, the British Ambassador, who also made inquiries on the subject, was given similar assurances. Terrorists Rob City Paymaster. WARSAW, June 30.—Terrorists attacked the City Paymaster this afternoon, robbed him of $1500 and escaped. Another band robbed the gas works paymaster of $1500 and escaped. A third band robbed the office of Enuffeld's Bedstead Factory of $375. Organ for Jewish Interests. PARIS, June 30.—A new paper, largely to take the place of the defunct Petit Bleu, is shortly to appear. There has been a great deal of frankness in the announcements regarding the new paper. For instance, the Rothschilds are to finance it. It will have one particular object, and that is to protect the Jewish interests in France. The paper will devote itself to politics and finance, and its chief aim will be to oppose the railway purchase scheme or at any rate the purchase of the Northern railways which are owned by the Rothschilds. The proposals now are for the government to purchase all the railways. The new paper's progress will be watched with great interest. Brothers' Ashes to Be Mixed. PARIS, June 30.—The sensitive soul of Charles Frainne, a poet of some note, who absorbed the idea of a brutal operation and so he chose death by his own hand instead. The poet, who was wealthy, suffered from cancer. His doctors told him an operation was his only chance. One had been arranged for. The night before he bought a revolver and shot himself dead. Frainne left a strange will. In it he ordered that a dead brother's body should be exhumed and cremated, that his body should also be cremated. His doctors told him to be mixed and deposited in an urn in the family vault with this inscription: "They lived and sang for their country." The brother was also a poet.
