From then on till the eighth it was still water. Neither side could meet the ball in bunches enough to arouse any enthusiasm. In the next to the any enthusiasm. In the next to the last Sweeney singled, Mitchell attempted to sacrifice, but Devercaux feit generous and threw the leather away, Bill and Mike going to third and second. Smith laid his bat on for two bases, just as of yore he laid the forceps on refractory molars. This cleaned the bags. Hackett jet the throw-in get away and Jud took third on this bungle. Big Hackett then took a shot at third to scare Jud, but the nearest he came to the mark was the left field fence. This enabled the well-known member of the Smith tribe to register also. Oakland never got dangerous. Whenever Gum got a little erratic his support tightened up and ate 'em alive. Jimmy McHale duplicated his pretty work of yesterday and stole a hit from Buck Francks. He speared the drive on the dead run and got a rousing land for his performance.

Ely Cates, ex from Beaverdom, Obleago ... Officiated in left field for Van Halt-ren's huskles. His work was good to Polladelphia look upon. He made several hard catches, the king pin of all being a running bare-handed one of a fierce smash from Sweeney's bat. Ely, being somewhat lazy, started on a jog after the fly and finally was compelled to resort to drastic measures. He brought his doughty right into play and crossed over the lucky punch just in time to make the out. He was kept busy the rest of the game taking off his hat. Big McLean was back at work and although he could not drive work and although he could not drive out any safettes he demonstrated his ability as a catcher by cutting off all the daring ones from the cultured city who tried to steal second.

Ed Rankin watched the balls and strikes, while Buck Keith had his eye on the base runners, Rankin got away with his job well and to the satisfaction of everybody, except a few ball players, which is natural, and several old fogles in the grandstand, who never did believe in home industry.

A double-header is on the books today. Both will be played this afternoon for one admission. The first will be called at 2:30 and the second immediately afterward. The batterles will be Henderson and Donahue in the first against Cates and Bliss, and Estimated.
