This Is "The Plaid House"

This is a year for plaids and Lipman-Wolfe's is "The Plaid House" in Portland. The mills of England, France, Germany and the United States have woven the most beautiful and exquisite plaids—literally thousands of patterns and scores of color combinations—in harmony with every complexion, individual need and taste.

To such an extent have these artistic lines been carried, that many women who could not heretofore wear plaids, find patterns very becoming to them—which accentuates the fact that Plaids will reach the extreme height of popularity this season.

DUKE IN SEARCH OF HIS CHARMER

Came to America Incognito to Find Dashing Mrs. Atherton.

WOMAN ENRAGES EDWARD

Exchanges Handkerchiefs With the King and Is Put on Royal Blacklist—Severest Punishment for Society Woman.

BY THE COUNTERS OF BLANKSHIRE

LONDON, Sept. 8.—Very few people in the United States will know that a recent visitor there was His Grace, the Duke of Westminster, said to be the wealthiest nobleman in the world, and certainly one of the youngest and most interesting. But the Duke did not stay very long, and he did not go outside New York.

Glaid the Colonel Slighted Her.

It will be remembered that a short time ago it was announced that the beautiful Mrs. Atherton had started for a tour of the world via the United States under an assumed name. This was immediately after the sensational divorce case. The Duke was very much impressed with the lady during and after the tour.

WELCHER KICKED TO DEATH

Australian Sports Take Summary Vengeance on Bookmaker.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—It was only the other day that a welching bookmaker just escaped a bullet at the English race course, and from Australia today comes the story of a welcher who was kicked to death by an infuriated mob at the Flemington race course.

Fair One Picks King's Pocket.

There has been quite a stir in royal circles over an accident which began at the Duke of Devonshire's party on the Scottish grouse moor rented by the Westminster family from the Duke of Sutherland. The Duchess, who is very young, was formerly Shelia Cornwallis West. She apparently has not taken the Duke's sudden and prolonged absence very much to heart.

Put on Edward's Blacklist.

This caused quite a flutter. And the flutter was enhanced when an equestrian from the King's circle, with a small packet. The lady opened it in the presence of a score of friends and took from it her own handkerchief. It was a royal monogram and the lady made the most of it. The fairy tales she invented were so marvelous that when they reached the ears of Edward through his real and loyal friends, he was a wild man. It has been intimated to the lady that her wealth is not everything and that the presence of Edward through his real and loyal friends, he was a wild man.

Stale Joke Told Again.

The papers persist in poking fun at the nouveau riche American. The latest is from the Eystader and tells the tale of the Chicago millionaire who imported from abroad a replica of the Venus of Milo. When the statue arrived and the case opened the Chicago man of course discovered that there were no arms. He threatened to bring an action against the railroad company for damage. The railway sent an official to inquire, and he reported that the arms were missing, and so the company paid a round sum to the millionaire.

DOES NOT BELIEVE IN WASHING

Italian Chemist Abhors Soap, Sponges and Brushes as Useless.

ROME, Sept. 8.—Frederic Cerboni, a chemist of Gelsomino, near Florence, is the most cheerful and remarkable philosopher in Italy. He has never had a bath and never washes. Soap and water he thinks are so much poison and washing destroys health and shortens life. He is an old man and yet of splendid health. La Nazione, of Florence, sent a reporter to interview him. The old man wrote out the following statement and signed it for publication:

"I am 75 years old and in the best of health and spirits. Yet I never wash, not even my face in the morning. Five years ago a towel was placed in my room, but it has not yet been changed, and there is no need of changing it. I have never taken a bath, and I have never been ill. I hold that baths, washing basins, looking glasses, brushes, soaps, sponges and all those sort of things are so much useless lumber. I have never lost a day's sleep nor a night's sleep for being without them. Can anybody say the same who wastes his time and money at watering places and hydropathic establishments? I go to bed in my boots and wear the same clothes all the year round.

"Being a chemist by profession, I know something about hygiene. Hygiene is a myth, a superstition. Microbes are killed by other microbes. That's the long and short of it."

PREACHER ACTS HIS SUBJECT

Sensational Methods of Salvationist Attract Great Crowds.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—Weird and strange have been the freaks of the Salvation Army from its inception. This has been necessary to attract attention. The latest freak in this city, however, is something previously attempted. It has its origin with Captain Robert Brodie of Chiswick. Each week Brodie will represent some character on which he will preach. Last week he preached on "Death," and walked through the streets of his locality wrapped in a shroud and with men carrying an empty coffin with all its trimmings behind him.

BRIDAL PARTY ALL ASLEEP

Strange Effect of Heat in Germany, Pin Stuck in Groom.

BERLIN, Sept. 8.—Some amusing tales are told of the effects of the recent heat wave throughout Germany. The Anzeiger mentions that at a wedding in the village church of Stippen in Saxony, the bride, groom and entire wedding party fell asleep during the wedding ceremony. The heat in the church was oppressive, and the droning voice of the minister preaching the wedding address sent the whole party off to slumber. The minister preacher took in the situation and made some personal remarks in such a loud voice that the bride woke up.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—It was only the other day that a welching bookmaker just escaped a bullet at the English race course, and from Australia today comes the story of a welcher who was kicked to death by an infuriated mob at the Flemington race course. The man was a well-known bookmaker and had a big bunch of angry men with him. At Lubeck an old woman of 70 was on the witness stand, but was so affected by the heat that she could not remember her maiden name, and finally on being further pressed could not remember her present name.

MONK FALLS OVER PRECIPICE

Ghastly Sequel to Expulsion of French Religious Orders.

MADRID, Sept. 8.—The body of a monk expelled from France under the new laws has been found at the foot of a precipice near the village of Hengul in the Pyrenees. The monk belonged to a monastery near Toulouse, which had been closed by the French government, scattering its inmates in all directions. The dead monk tramped across the frontier and was seen on the night begging for a shelter for the night. He was refused admission as several houses, and although evidently fatigued, continued on his way through the mountains. It was supposed that he missed his road in the dark and went over the precipice.

SCOTTY ON THE RAMPAGE

Takes Offense in Owl Car and Makes All Passengers Hold Up Hands.

FRESNO, Cal., Sept. 8.—Death Valley Scotty jumped off the South-bound owl here last night in high dudgeon, after giving 28 men in the Pullman a realistic touch of the old-time woolly W. Their hands stretched high above their heads, the thoroughly frightened passengers were compelled to hear a long tirade from the half-drunken mystery from the Nevada gold fields.

Twelve Men Make 1200 Idle.

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—Owing to the attitude taken by the State of Illinois toward the Iron & Steel Mills at East Chicago toward the organization of the engineers, 12 engineers have walked out. The officials objected to the presence of representatives of Chicago unions in the plant, which is an open shop. When the 12 engineers struck the machinery was tied up and 1200 men thrown out of work. Union men are picketing the mills and the officials are employing private detectives from Chicago to prevent possible destruction of property. The strike may spread to other industries in the Cabinet region unless an armistice is reached shortly.
