TRIESTO EMIGRATE IN PACKING CASE

Tragi-Comio Experience * of Adventurous Stout Dutch Tailor.

NOT PERISHABLE FREIGHT

Packed in Case With Bread and Water and Marked "Glass, With Care," He Vainly Endeavors to Reach America.

(Special Cable to the Central News and Gregorian.) Sept. 22.—When Jan ROTTERDAM, Sept. 22 —When Jan Haak and his wife had a more violent quarrel than usual, Jan, who is a tailor, left his home in Amsterdam and journeyed to Rotterdam. He intended to get a steamer there for the United States and carve out a new career for himself in the golden west. But, alas, when he arrived in Rotterdam with just enough to the ray for a steerage passage to money to pay for a steerage passage to New York, Jan found that none of the steamship agents would sell him a ticket unless he showed them enough money or an indorsement from friends in the United States sufficient to pass the immigrant officials.

So Jan had to give up the idea of travel for awhile and seek employment. He did not find it. Rotterdam had all the tallors it wanted. Jan's money was soon spent. He became stranded and signed for the good things his wife cooked. In his plight he went to a friend, who suggested that Jan should go home as freight, packed in a box marked fragile. So the friend procured a packing case, bored holes in it, marked it with the Haak address in Amsterdam and also "glass, this side up with care," and then wedged Jan in it with a hunk of bread, a sausage and a bottle of water. Jan being a very fat men and the packing case not roomy, he was not comfortable. case not roomy, he was not comfortable, but for the sake of cheapness the case was delivered on the wharf to go via an

was delivered on the wharf to go via an old cargo boat.
Unluckily this boat was so old that before she took on her freight she partially sunk at the dock. Her sailing date was postponed for a few days, and as Jan in the box was not marked as perishable freight he was left on the dock with other boxes and bales. Jan began to grown, and a night watchman hearing the noise raised the adarm. Investigated. There were all sorts of weird theories.
Finally the case was thrown on a wagon and taken to police headquarters. There it was carefully opened. The startled officials had to chop the box to pieces to get Jan out. His condition was pitiable. Much publicity has been given the case, and philanthropists donated money to the tailor. He has gone to Amsterdam with full pockets and has to Amsterdam with full pockets and has been reunited to his wife, who deems him a great hero.

RED TAPE AND WOODEN LEG

Lame French Soldier Has Trouble to Escape Service.

PARIS, Sept. 23.—Jules Forget, a stone-mason of Essones, has had an amusing experience with the military authorities. Soon after finishing his military service in 1903 he met with an accident and had to replace his amputated leg with a wooden one. He received last month an intimation that he would have to do a further short period of mixtary training and was told to report at a Paris bar-racks last week. Forget naturally figured he would not have to serve on account of the wooden leg. So he went to the police station at Essones and showed the leg to the chief of police. But that officer was not satisfied with the evidence of his eyes. "You have a wooden leg," he said. "I believe you, but I have nothing to do with it. There is nothing In the rules and regulations regarding wooden legs. You must pay 15 cents for a doctor's certificate. Otherwise you must serve and cannot be excused." Forget objected to paying out money, and so did nothing more until the time came for him to report. He hobbled into the for him to report. He notified into the barracks on crutches. The sentries wanted to throw him out, but he showed his milltary summons. Forget was taken before the doctor, who was surprised. The doctor quickly ordered the man home and marked his name off the roll. He also sent the police at Essones an official certificate that Forget has a wooden cial certificate that Forget has a wooden

CHAMBERLAIN LITTLE BETTER

Great English Politician Can Never

Again Fight Wordy Battles. LONDON, Sept. 22. The health of oseph Chamberlain is slightly imroved. This week, for the first time since his attack of some months ago, he was able to leave his bed. He sat up daily for an hour or two, and to-ward the end of the week his armchair was moved out on the balcony of his house. He greatly desired to get away from London, but the doctors positive-ly forbade it. It may be some weeks ly forbaue it. It may be before he is strong enough to be moved.

The Chamberlain papers have strenuously denied all along that the great politician was ill. They called it "in-disposition," and have continued to claim that he had merely an attack of gout. The facts in the case speak for themselves. Mr. Chamberiain has been in bed for three months. To his bed-side have been called in consultation the most eminent specialists of Britain the most eminent specialists of Britain and the Continent. His family physician came here from Birmingham and stayed continually in the house with him. He has a night and a day nurse. He is slowly regaining his health, but it is doubtful whether he will ever regain his old-time vigor or be such a fighter at his party's head as in the past. It is extremely probable that he will soon rettire from the areas of nollwill soon retire from the arena of poli-

He died with his boots on, after a fierce battle with the Russian frontier police at Skalmierzyce. It is estimated that Ambrozy was worth $1,000,000, all made out of his extensive smuggling operations. While he owned a large quantity of real estate in this city and elsewhere in Germany, he always had a huge sum of ready money on call at the banks for his business capital.

Ambrozy employed a large staff, yet worked himself on big operations. He frequently changed his districts, and smuggled every conceivable thing, from solum and tobacco to horses and cattle.

The manager and the orchestra and the waiters thought this an awfully good joke and laughed at the stranger's pleasantry. But the laugh froze on their lips when they saw the man was in earnest. The whole party hurried round to the nearest police station. The automobile was one of the taxemeter kind and $20 was owing. The supper bill was $150 and the orchestra $50. The police looked serious. The cafe manager, waiters, motorman and musicians were howling with rage. The elegant young man dismissed his two lady friends, who were only too ready to go when they found he had no money. Then the stranger addressed the police. He said: "I have just come from prison. I served six months and had a dull time of it. I decided that when I was released I would have one delirious day of the best of everything. I have had it from my clothes to my pleasures. I haven't a kick coming. I owe a great deal of money for today's denge and I deal of money for today's doings, and I will keep on owing it. My name is Joachim Blin."

Blin is notorious for having a good time on nothing. He has victimized all the best hotels and cafes as ne did the Cafe Blanche and has already served eight terms for the same old trick. He is the terror of the Paris cafe keepers. He is perfectly willing to do six months in fail for one good day's

LONDON, Sept. 22.—I hear that the United States States is shortly to have a very distinguished visitor in Lord Cur-

He will start his world tour via the United States. He will spend some time there, for his visit will be largely one of business in connection with his late wife's estate. In addition to New York, he will, of course, visit Washington and Chicago. From what I hear, he will probably go to all parts of the country and tour it very thoroughly. I understand in order to keep away from the American reporter he will adopt a nom de voyage.

Pharaoh's Heart Was Hardened.

Records of the Past. It is reported that four ancient Egyptian vases containing the viscera of Rameses II have recently come into the possession of the Louvre. The contents of CLAIMS NEBRASKA MILLIONS Ex-Viceroy of India Will Travel to der, and could not, therefore, be identified. The other contained a hard slab. French scientists had it sawed into sections and examined thin shavings of it under the miscroscope. These horny fragments showed muscular fibers in the formation found only in the heart and tongue. Hence, the conclusion is drawn that this 2 by 1%-inch slab is nothing el than the heart of Rameses II, who died
