VIEWS OF SCHOOL BOARD

Director Wittenberg Alone Is Opposed to Representative Beveridge's Bill-J. V. Beach Undecided_Rigler Advocates Plan

Educators of Multnomah County have been industriously studying the free text book question, since announcement was made a few days ago that a bill propos-ing such a law in Oregon, would be in-troduced at the next session of the Legislature by J. W. Beveridge, representa-tive from Multnomah County. The gen-eral opinion seems to be favorable to such a law though many have not yet given sufficient study to the question to take a decisive stand.

Among the arguments most prominently advanced in favor of free text books is that it will assure absolute uniformity in text books, thus solving a problem which is at times vexing. Linked with this is the argument that the law would eliminate delay in the organization of the schools. This is a suggestion that appeals with especial force to the teachers who know better than others how work is hampered at the opening of school.

Under the present system, where each pupil furnishes his own books, it is im-possible for all to be supplied on the opening day of the term, and it is often several days before every scholar is equipped, whereas, under the new plan, it is asserted, the books would always be at hand and ready for distribution on the opening day of school.

Even more important in the eyes of some is the argument that free text books would increase the attendance. At present there are undoubtedly many children who are kept out of school because their parents cannot afford to buy books, or because they do not wish to incur the outlay. All admit that the district should pay for books for the former class and many think that they should for the later, inasmuch as if this is not done the children suffer because of the fault of the parents.

Now Supplied to Destitute.

Books are now provided for children of destitute families, when application is made, but it is staied that many chil-dren are kept out of school because their parents are too poor to buy books and are too pround to ask the district to supply them. With free text hooks for it here.

"In Philidelphia, where I was connected with the schools, a free text book law was in force," he said, "and from my experience there I can say that it proved very satisfactory. Conditions in that city were not the same as here and the results might not be the same. I am going to make a study of conditions here in connection with the bill to be introduced by Mr. Beveridge, but would not like to express an opinion upon it at this time.

books, it seems to me, lies in the help they give in organizing a school. There can be no doubt but that much time would be gained if the pupils could be furnished with all books upon the opening day of each term."

Chairman Beach Undecided.

I can see many benefits which would be derived from a free text book law," said J. V. Beach, chairman of the Board of Education, "but I am not sure that paternal government and this seems to me to be a step in that direction. The more we let people help themselves the botter it is for them. If children know that their parents are paying for the books, it seems to me they will realize that an education is of more value than they will if the books come from the quarters. It is only since 1897 that the first organized work for young women was done in the whole Northwest, under the guidance of the first state committee of the North Pacific Coast Association. The organization had jurisdiction over Washington and Idaho. members were Mrs. C. A. Dolph, chair-man; Mrs. H. W. Corbett, Mrs. J. F. Watson, Mrs. C. R. Templeton, Mrs. J. B. Montgomery, Mrs. S. B. Hill, Miss Gertrude Holmes (Mrs. Charles Lawrence), Mrs. Dell Stuart, Mrs. E. W. Allen, Miss Mabel Hazeltine (Mrs. J. Hazelton). It was organized at the Holbes Business College, which, through the courtesy of Miss Holmes, continued to be state headquarters for five years.

It was pioneer work that these women and Mrs. C. A. Dolph, its chairman, was untiring in her efforts for the success of a greatly needed institution in the beginning the associations, under the supervision of the committee, were all in colleges and normal schools, of which there were at that time 27 in the Northwest. The question of a city association in Portland had frequently been definite steps were taken toward the accomplishment of the work till 1900, when was their duty to take some steps toward the starting of an association for the girls of Portland. It is not often that a city waits to have a population of a hundred thousand be-fore this organization so necessary in the establishing of standards for womanhood in every community is formed; but it was so in Portland. Mrs. Dolph took the in-Itiative. Her first step was to invite to Portland one of the brightest members of the National secretarial staff, Miss West, who was then in Seattle helping to reorganize a city association there. Mrs. Dolph invited 50 representative women of Portland to discuss the matter in the parlors of the Hotel Portland. Miss West made a spiendid plea for the city, and stated clearly the need for the organiza-tion and the great benefit the girls of Portland would derive from it. So con-vincing was her statement that a large number of the ladies present gave their number of the ladies present gave their names as charter members. Three days later another meeting was called by the state committee, and the city association was formally organized, with over 200 charter members, and Mrs. W. J. Honeyman was chosen president. Mrs. Honeyman has continued in office till the present time, and given untiring effort and unlimited time to the work.

It was with great difficulty that rooms were at last secured in the McKay building. These were formally opened April were at last secured in the access blind-ing. These were formally opened April 2, 1901, and the wonderful prosperity and growth of the association in the short five years of its life have been largely due to the fact that a number of repre-sentative women have almost constantly made this thing first in their interests. Before long the association was obliged Before long the association was obliged to move from the McKay building because of the large number of girls that came to the rooms at the noon hour, thus clogging the elevator service. It was then the pres-ent quarters were obtained, with an out-side entrance that could be used exclusively by the young women. It is because that building is no longer to be available to them that the immediate need for ade-quate quarters must be met.

advantages. As yet I have not given the question enough study to venture an opinion. The law would certainly be a good thing for the people who are not able to buy but on the other hand. It would saddle an additional expense upon the public. It seems to me that under a system of free books, very close oversight would be necessary to prevent the children from using them recklessly."

H. Wittenberg, also a member of the Board of Education, came out flatly against the proposal.

"I fail to see the necessity for a law of this kind as long as parents are able to buy books," he said. "Free text books of diabetes.

He retired and bought a cafe and hotel. His beer garden at Giesing, near Munich, was well known all over Europe. He still amused his customers by feats of strength. A rock in the garden weighing 400 pounds he would tip over with one finger. He could carry a 10-gallon barrel of beer in a sling on two fingers. Better than all, she has a personality, a rare asset for a girl in the early 20s. Her education stopped when she dressed up in her white frock and recited something about "Beyond the Alps Lies Italy," from a high school rostrum; but she has read many helpful books and is generally informed.

LONDON, Sept. 29 .- Antonio Pierri, the well-known manager of wrestiers, has just returned to London with two champions from Albania. One is named Hussein Mahmout, the other Leonidas Konstantin. He will go after all the wrestiers of the United States, and then try and get a whack at Hackenschmidt for the best man of his two. Pierri tells a wonderful story of his capture by brigands and his discovery of his new champion Hussein as he well-known manager of wrestiers, ery of his new champion Hussein as chief of the brigand band. He does not say when he will go to the United States, but he will first of all hold some bouts in England and Scotland. LOW RATES EAST.
