Scheme Would Annex Harbor Area to Private Properties, Increasing Their Value, Without Compensation to Port.

Though the small sum of $2000 would pay for a 22-foot channel in front of the wharf property of Allen & Lewis, J. C. Flanders, the Portland Gas Company and the O. R. & N., between the Burnside and Steel bridges, on the west side of the river, those owners want the port and the United States to give them additional frontage to deep water, worth at least

This $2000 cost is the estymate of the Port of Portland engineer, made in response to a request from Colonel Roessler, United States Engineers, for Informa-tion on that subject. The expenditure of that sum would deepen the channel some ten feet some 40 feet outside the present harber line to the new line sought by the owners—this being the area which the owners seek to take from the harbor and add to their wharves and warehouses.

The grant will be opposed by Colonel Roessler unless the owners shall advance stronger reasons for it than they have done thus far. He declines yet to express his final judgment of the matter, but it is evident that his unwillingness to see the harbor narrowed has not been overcome. Major Langfitt, Colonel Roessler's predecessor, opposed an 50 and 90-foot extension by the owners as a compromise.

by the owners as a compromise.

This compromise was represented to the Port of Portland Commission as approved by Colonel Roessler. On this assurance, the Commission last Thursday recommended it for adoption. But it turns out that the 40-foot extension is not approved by him and that he suggested it only by him and that he suggested it only tentatively, for the purpose of discussion, meaning that further extension would not be considered. His letters to the Port of Portland Commission, the Pilots' Association and the owners, written last June and July, set forth clearly that he did not commit himself to the 40-foot line, but they have been misinterpreted by the interested parties, who, led by Mr. Adams, represented to the pilots and the Commission that Colonel Roessler favored the compromise line. by him and that he suggested it only BERLIAN, Oct. 12.—Mias Bertha Krupp, who is to be married on Monday to Lieutenant Gustav von Bohlen und Halbach, has possessions valued somewhere beyond a hundred millions of dollars, and a position in Germany that is more than that of the richest subject. The institution she owns is almost a department of government, supplying the artillery for the German army, all the armor and guns for the navy, and some of the ships. The semi-political agents of the Krupps are persons of importance in Constantinople and in the Balkan capitals. In telligence of most departments of military and naval affairs in any part of the world reach the Krupp management, and thence the general staffs of the army and of the navy. Socialists Block Naval Programme. PARIS, Oct. 13.—A conflict has arisen between the Minister of Marine and the budget committee, the latter demanding that construction on the three last iron-cluds forming part of the naval pro-gramme of 1906 not be commenced. This gramme of 1906 not be commenced. This programme comprised six battleships, of which three are now in course of construction. The Cabinet at yesterday's meeting fully supported M. Thomson's demand to carry out the programme.

M. Thomson, Premier Sarrien and M. Poincaire, the Minister of Finance, later appeared before the budget committee in the matter. The members of the committee are largely Socialists, committed. mittee are largely Socialists, committed to a specific policy not favoring prepara-tions for national defense. M.
