LAST DAYS IN PEACE

Turf, Now a Widow's Pet.

MANY WOULD EXHIBIT HIM

Owner Resists All Flattering Offers and Takes Tenderest Care Possible of the Old Veteran.

Jay-Eye-See, crowned more than a quarter of a century ago, king of the trotting turf, is spending his last days on the Pleasant View Stock Farm, near Racine, Wis., the only comfort of a lonely woman. For a day only did Jay-Eye-See hold the world's trotting record, but all the harness world remembers the day when the days. when the plucky little gelding raced down the home stretch of the Providence track and lowered the world's record. He was worth $5,000 then, today he is worth nothing. Yet twice $50,000 could not buy Jay-Eye-See.

Jay-Eye-See.

Mrs Case, widow of J. I. Case, who owned Jay-Eye-See when he trotted his great mile, has had numerous chances to exhibit the horse that made her husband's name a matter of record on the American turf. She has stoutly refused to consider such an offer.

"It would take several months at least before we could yet Jay-Eye-See in con-before we could get Jay-Elye-See in condition for any exhibition, even if I allowed him to leave the farm at all." said Mrs. Case recently. "This I shall not do under any circumstances, for the good little fellow worked like a Trojan while ny husband was alive to make the name

"He has carned his rest and he shall have it us long as I live.
"He is 25 years of age now, his teeth are all gone, he cannot eat solid foods of any kind and all of his grain I have the men grind for him, and while at pasture he cats grass as any horse would.

Many Offers Received.

I have been repeatedly asked to allow I have seen repeatedly asked to allow the horse to be exhibited, but in memory of my husband I will never allow the old champion to go on the track again. The directors of the Narragansett track, of Providence, have asked me to allow the old horse to reappear on the scene of his former triumph, but I cannot allow him to leave the farm.

"I remember well the day that he made the wonderful record at Providence, for I was there with my husband. It was on August 12, 1894. "The poor old fellow suffers at times from the decayed seeth, for there has never been a veterinary that has been able to operate on his teeth. Whenever this has been attempted he has fought Just at present he is in fairly good health, and while the promoters of fairs in Indiana and Illinois have been en-deavoring to secure consent for his ex-hibition, the old-timer is being guarded securely on the old farm.

"It is now more than two years since a harness has been placed on him, and it is problematical just how tast he may be able to do a quarter, a half or a mile. I do not believe that he could in his old age of 28 stand up to the strain of trotting or pacing again."

Raised on Blue Grass.

Jay-Eye-See was fosled in 1878 at Lexington, Ky., and there raised on the blue grass of the state which has produced so many of the most magnificent steppers in the history of the world.

He was one of the batch owned by Colonel Richard West, and a son of Dictator, a full brother to Dexter, whose strain goes back to Midnight, Pilot, Jr., Daylight, Elinor and Darkness.

When the late J. D. Case bought the gelding it was thrown in with a lot of other horses, and little mention was made of him at the time.

Mr. Case at that time was a presperous manufacturer of Rache, Wis., a noted borse familier, and one who was always looking for the "fighting chance".

He found it in this remarkable gelding, considered but a pony at that time, which was being worked out with the ordinary run of stock that was quartered on the

Somehow or other the little gelding be-gan to show remarkable speed at trials on the track, yet none but Mr Case had the slightest confidence in his staying and fighting powers.

Was Problem to Trainers

He was the "joker" of the entire bunch. A problem to drivers, stablemen and track touts. Yet, when four years of age, he made a record of 2:15.

At five years of age 2:10 3-4 was the mark that astounded the Westerners, and then came the sensational perform orld for a day. On the following afternoon at Cleveland, Mand S. clipped a fraction from the record of Jay-Eye-See, dethroning him from his kingdom, yet not taking the title that had come to him at Providence, and lives today.

After his last race at Providence the tendons of one of his legs gave out, and for the sake of saving the speed of the animal Ed Bilthers changed his gait to a pace, and later sent him a mile in 2:061-2, which made him the fastest combination gelding in the world, a mark and reputation that hangs to the credit of Jay-Eye-See today.

ee today. Ed Blithers, now at Readville, has a wonderfully warm spot in his heart for Jay-Eye-See, now poking about the home farm at Racine.

ORIGIN OF

DEVELOPED GRADUALLY FROM THE SHEPHERD'S REED.

Scotch Howl and Instrument Unfitted for Pibroch Playing-Was Never Popular in England.

According to the encyclopedia, the bagpipe is a wind instrument the fixed characteristic of which has always been two or more reed pipes attached to and characteristic of which has always been two or more reed pipes attached to and sounded by a wind chest, or bag, which bag has in turn been supplied either by the lungs of the performer or by a bel-lows. The original instrument was pre-sumably the simple reed, or shepherd's pipe, which was well known to the Tro-jans, Egyptians, Greeks and Romans, But the strain of blowing these ancient p'pes was so great that some senius con-I pes was so great that some genius con-ceived the idea of having a reserve supply of wind in a bag attached to the pipes; and hence the bagpipe. The first real in-strument is believed to have been a skin of a goat or kid, with two pipes, through other emitting the sound. In early some inflated by the mouth and others by some inflated by the mouth and others by bellows; while in the British Isles three kinds were known—the great Highland bagpipe, the Lowland bagpipe of Scotland (which closely resembled the Northum-brian) and the Irish bagpipe. In the great COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., Oct. 27.—
(Special.)—General William J. Palmer, multimillionaire, retired railrogid magnate and philanthropist, was thrown from a horse he was riding at the entrance to the Garden of the Gods today, and seriously if not fatally injured. He was badly bruised about the head and face and his spine injured to such an extent that his lower limbs are said to be paralyzed. Four doctors, two of them noted Denver physicians, who were summoned on a special.)—General William J. Palmer, Highland bigspipe, which originally had but one drone, a valved tube leads from the mouth to an airtight bag, which has four other orifices, three farge enough to contain the base of three fixed enough to contain the base of three fixed another. The three are thrown on the shoulder, while the latter is held in the hands. All four pipes are fitted with reeds, but of different kinds. The drones are tuned by means of kinds. The drones are tuned by means of sliders, or movable joints, and this tu ing or preparation for playing, which gen-erally occupies a few minutes of the piper's time before he begins the tune proper, is heard with impatience by th not accustomed to the instrument. In-deed, it gave rise to the saying, applied in Scotland to those who waste time over small matters: "You are longer in tuning your pipes than in paying your tune. The Scotch Lowland baspine, like the Northumbrian pipe, was in two forms, one consisting of a smaller and milder-toned edition of the Highland instrument, and the other a minipature of this, and having the same relation to it as the fife has to a German band. Its great draw-back, from the point of view of the dev-otees of the Highland bagpipe, is that it is unsuited to perform what they consider the perfection of pipe music—the pibroch. These small pipes were, however, gentler than the Highland, having the same tone. but less sonorous. It was to the strains of such a babpipe that Chaucer tells us the company of pigrims left London, and it is the same instrument that is alluded to in Shakespeare as the Lincolnshire bagpipe. The Irish bagpipe is the instrument in its most elaborate form, and is supplied with wind by a bellows. The drones are all fixed on one stock, and have keys which are played by the wrist of the right hand. The reeds are soft and the tones very sweet and melodious, and there is a harmonious bass, which is very effective in the hands of a good player. The Irish instrument is fast dying out, but there is believed to be at least one observe for Cle believed to be at least one player in Glas-gow, an old man, bent with years, but devoted to his pipes, who rakes his stand near the top of the classic High street and to a small, but appreciative, and renders Scottish and Irish airs on the bagolpes of Erin.

The bagpipe, though at one time fairly common, never obtained a firm hold in England. It lost favor and sradually de-teriorated until it is now practically ex-tinct. The average Englishman neither caught in corn," wante and to a "horrible, writer likens its sound to a "horrible, nolsy, mad Irishman," or to the cries of the "eternally tormented." To the Irish people it appeals more strongly; they still possess in a degree the feeling of attachment to the baspipe which is so general among Scotsmen. There is evidence of among Scotsmen. There is evidence of the interest of the property of the possess in a degree the feeling of attachment to the baspipe which is so general among Scotsmen. There is evidence of this in the revival of pipe bands in certain Irish regiments. land babpipe, which, as already explained. consists of three drones, including the big drone, which was added about the beginning of the last century. It is this type which has gradually superseded the Lowland pipe. There is no doubt that the bag-pipe was in use in Scotland from a very early period, and it is in Scotland that it has been brought to the highest degree of perfection. Its music distinctly con-nects it with Scotland, as is clear in the pibroch, the strathspey, the reel, the march, and other popular melodies. There are proofs that the instrument was cultivated in that country certainly in the 12th century, and of its universal popularity as early as the 15th century, while in the 17th century nearly every town in the Highlands and Lowlands boasted of its piper.

It is not sufficiently realized that the great Highland bagpipe is fitted for Highland music only. It is most offensive to those who understand and appreciate the instrument to hear English and other un-sultable airs attempted on it. It is the exponent of Highland music, and of that only. It also belongs to the open air as naturally as heather belongs to the hills appreciates nor understands it. A famous poet irreverently once compared its notes to "the shrill acreech of a lame goose caught in corn," while another heretic writer likens its sound to a "horrible, noisy, mad Irishman," or to the cries of the "icerrally as heather belongs to the hills and salmon to the sea lochs.
