

Muslin Underwear

Extraordinary bargains in our Great January White Sale, including Paris Lingerie

Lipman, Wolfe & Co.

Good Merchandise Only—Quality Considered Our Prices Are Always the Lowest

New Lingerie Waists

Advance Spring 1907 Models of dainty Lingerie Waists, variety of styles, sale prices

Our Annual January Mark-Down Sale in Progress in All Departments

75 Women's New Long Plaid Coats To $20.00 Values $9.50

Now that the cold January rains have set in, every woman will appreciate the luxury of one of these coats—the most popular and stylish of the year. 75 New Long Coats, 50 inch length, full loose front and back, made in fancy plaid, shadow plaid and fancy mixed cloths, in light, medium and dark effects, in plain tailor-made and fancy trimmed styles. Sold reg'ly to $20. Sale price $9.50

10,000 BARGAINS

In Coats, Suits, Petticoats, Waists, Furs, Wraps, Children's Wear and all other Women's Apparel.

Spring 1907 Cheney's Foulard Silks $1 Vals. 78c Yd. $1.25 Vals. 98c Yd.

As a special attraction of this Great January Sale, Lipman-Wolfe & Co. offer 9000 yards of advance Spring, 1907, Cheney's Foulard Silks, the best of all foulard silks in exquisite weaves that have a rich beauty impossible to equal. Foulards will be in the highest favor next Spring and Summer for shirtwaist and jumper suits. These splendid, high-priced Foulards—rich, lustrous with shimmering beauty, in bewildering assortment and guaranteed showerproof, go on sale Monday for only 78c and 98c

Wonderful Sale of Real Tortoiseshell

Hairpins, Backcombs, Sidecombs, Etc.

Every article made of genuine Tortoise Shell, in the best and newest shapes, finest finish, and infinite variety to select from at prices greatly reduced.

Table listing various hairpins, backcombs, and sidecombs with their prices.

OTHER TORTOISESHELL JEWELRY Novelty Hair Barettes and many other unique and beautiful conceptions in real Tortoiseshell, at reduced prices.

85c Valenciennes Lace, 27c yd.

These splendid Lace and Embroidery bargains are so truly extraordinary that we cannot guarantee any of them to last all day Monday. Come early.

- List of lace and embroidery items with prices: 12 1-2c Torchon Lace, 4c; 25c Point de Paris, 9c yard; 85c Valenciennes Lace, 27c; etc.

$1 and $1.25 Dress Goods, 69c Yd.

We quote here some of the special bargains, but every piece of goods in this department is reduced in price.

- List of dress goods items with prices: 50c and 60c Dress Goods, 39c; 54-in. All-wool Tailor Suitings; etc.

Clearance Sale of Embroideries $18.00 Demi-Made Robes, $7.75

Broken sets in finest Swiss and Nainsook embroidery, 3 to 18 ins. wide, divided into four lots. Values to 35c, reduced to yard, 14c; Values to 75c, reduced to yard, 33c; Values to $1.50, reduced to yard, 63c; Values to $2.50, reduced to yard, 98c

New Millinery Has Arrived

On display Monday—a stunning display of Exquisite New Hats, representing the new Spring styles, shapes, etc. See the new Tam Crowns; also the new mushroom shapes and numerous other smart effects. January Sale prices: $4.69, $5.69, $6.89, $7.89

$1.25 Table Damask, 85c $3 Pure Linen Cloths, $2.15

72-inch grass-bleached Table Damask, also lutey pure linen, $1.25 quality, a yard, 85c; 1/4 Napkins to match, worth $3.75 dozen, $2.98; Bleached Pattern Cloths of pure linen satin damask, size 2x2 yards; regular $3.00 value, $2.15; etc.

$10 Set of Dickens, $5.25 $40 Set of Balzac, $18.00

Dickens' complete Works, 15 vols., cloth; regular $10; sale price $5.25; Balzac, 20 vols., Athenaeum Ed., buckram binding; regular $40; sale price $18.00; etc.

Reg. 50c Vichy Salts, 35c

Wyeth's Effervescent Vichy Salts, Reg. 50c Val. . . 35c One-Pound Size, Regular $1.25 for . . . 85c; 1 lb. pkg. Fuller's Earth, 90c; etc.

$15 and $17.50 PLAID WALKING Skirts, $7.95

45 Walking Skirts of fine all wool imported plaids, made in gored, tucked and plaited effects, also in the new circular shape; sold regularly at $15 and $17.50; sale, $7.95; 30-inch Percales in Checks and Figures, 8c Yard; etc.

600 Pairs Renaissance Lace Curtains, Values to $4.50 for $3.19

600 pairs of Renaissance Lace Curtains, with edging and inserting effects, all mounted on good quality bobbinet, in white or Arabian colors. Values up to $4.50 $3.19 Special for this sale. 1500 pairs of Scotch Lace Curtains, with plain or figured centers, in a large variety of patterns, 3 yards long, 50 inches wide; values to $1.50 a pair, for only 98c

TAFT FAVORED AS STANDARD-BEARER

War Secretary Closest to the People

IS G. O. P.'S BEST TIMBER

Ohio Storm Center in Presidential Fight.

FORAKER "MACHINE" MAN

Many Statesmen Are Being Groomed for Roosevelt's Job, but None Seems to Have the Popular Prestige of Buckeye Jurist.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU.

Washington, Jan. 5.—If Presidential candidates were chosen by popular vote instead of by convention, and if a general primary could be held today, there is little doubt but what William H. Taft, of Ohio, would be chosen to lead the Republicans in the next Presidential contest. But Presidential candidates are not nominated by the people, and therein lies the danger to the so-called Taft boom.

Machine politicians, well aware of Taft's strength, are vigorously plotting to head off the moves being made by the friends of the Secretary of War, both in Ohio and in the country at large, and while he is well aware of what is going on, Secretary Taft does not even lift a hand to checkmate the men who are doing their utmost to keep him out of the White House.

Of all Republicans listed as Presidential possibilities, Secretary Taft is the only one who is not at this early day making a contest for the nomination. Fairbanks has been at work for more than a year; Foraker is just now doing more than any other of the possibilities. Secretary Shaw, while no longer sitting up nights to nurse his boom, is keeping a watchful eye on the country, though he begins to realize that his chances are slight since his political enemy, Governor Cummins, has control of the Illinois delegation in the palm of his hand, but he is giving his entire attention to his work as speaker, though he made considerable hay last summer. Secretary Taft sits calmly at his desk in the War Department, occasionally shooting away the Illinois boom, in order that he may devote his entire energy to the work that falls upon him as Secretary of War and right-hand man to the President.

Ohio the Storm Center.

Interest in the Presidential game just now centers in Ohio. Foraker, in Ohio, is devoting attention to other sections of the country, hoping by that time the nominating convention meets to be hailed not only as Ohio's favorite son, but as the best choice of many other states. Foraker fears that his hold in Ohio may be broken, not by Taft himself, but by his Iowa friend, foremost among them Representative Burton, chairman of the House committee on rivers and harbors.

Foraker and his ally, Senator Dick, are much more experienced in political trickery than Burton or Taft; Foraker would resort to methods that Taft would shun. The Republican party of Ohio is and has been long controlled by a machine, and machine politics has always governed. If machine politics is to continue, Foraker may be able to hold his control for the next 18 months, unless there should be a popular uprising that would bring Taft and Burton out on top. But nothing short of a reform wave is likely to bring this about, particularly as Secretary Taft refuses to become an active candidate for the Presidency or an active bidder for the support of the next Ohio delegation.

Foraker a Corporation Man.

In the last session of Congress Senator Foraker introduced the bill for the Senator, and the country became imbued with the idea that he was representing the corporations, and not the people in the Senate. So doubt Foraker would do much more than the corporations than would Taft. He has not the same independence; he has not that same loyalty to the public. Foraker is a close corporation man, and as such would gain much corporate support. Foraker would not wear as heavy a yoke as Fairbanks; he would be less subservient to the will of the corporations than would Fairbanks. The balance is decidedly in favor of the Secretary of War.

Cannon Boom Not Serious.

Very few politicians give serious consideration to the Cannon boom; it appears to have reached its zenith. But for his age the Senator would be much in evidence. But a man who will be 73 years old at the close of President Roosevelt's term is not likely to be chosen as the next President.

Foraker Has Strong Supporters.

Foraker is in a position to receive the support of many powerful Republicans in the Senate. These friends have already shown their hands. Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island, in undisputed control of that state, stands ready to deliver the Rhode Island delegation to Foraker. Aldrich does not want Taft. Senator Penrose, who manages by hook or crook to retain control of the distinguished Quaker machine, has it known that Pennsylvania will present the name of Senator Knox at the next convention. Knox is not a candidate any more than Taft, and the corporations do not wish him, any more than they wanted Roosevelt or Root. However, Penrose is for Foraker, and has thrown the name of Knox into the field to create a counteraction in the event that a multitude of candidates will enable the machine men to checkmate the Taft supporters. That is all the newly launched Knox boom is for, and he would not be surprising if Knox would do something that would destroy the weapon that Penrose hopes to wield. As a matter of fact, Penrose would be the last man in the world to boom Knox if he believed Knox stood any chance of winning.

Ohio Storm Center in Presidential Fight.

It has long been an open secret that Taft is Roosevelt's choice among the numerous Presidential aspirants, but the President has never made public announcement of that fact, nor is he likely to do so. The President hopes for Taft's success, and he realizes that any announcement from the White House would be construed as an attempt to dictate to the party and would probably do more injury than good to the man whom he regards as best equipped to succeed him. Taft, on the other hand, does not seek and will not seek any expression from the President, if he is to be nominated he wants the nomination to come as an expression of the will of the party and not at the behest of any man or group of men. In other words, he will not seek Roosevelt's pull to secure him a well-earned promotion.

Taft Not an Office-seeker.

Had Secretary Taft been a chronic seeker after the Presidency his public career would probably have been patterned differently. In the discharge of his official duties he would have shirked certain responsibilities that fell to his lot, and would have side-stepped some delicate problems which he has actually handled without gloves. For instance, he would not have gone to Idaho last Fall to champion the cause of law and order, when by so doing he was sure to arouse the enmity of a certain element of union labor. No more would he have taken occasion to uphold the President's action in discharging three companies of negro troops. Going further back in his career, had Taft been looking toward the Presidency he would not have been so vigorous in issuing injunctions against labor unions that were the object of his official duties. He would not have insisted that all injunctions be obeyed.

Secretary Taft Spoke Truly when he said his ambition was not political.

His training has been in the judiciary and his fondest hope, even today, is to land in the post of greatest honor to a man of his profession, the office of Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. This does not mean that he would not appreciate a Presidential nomination, for he would, indeed, he would appreciate it more than any man now seeking the office. But clinging to his old-fashioned ideas, Secretary Taft conscientiously believes that the office is in the judiciary. He does not believe he is as well equipped for the Presidency as some others. It may be modest; it may be something else; but whatever it is, Secretary Taft is not laying any plans to capture the Presidential nomination, and he is not working for the office, though it will not be tendered him. Apparently he has no concern whatever, so far as he personally is affected, with what the Republican National convention may do.

He Is the Best Timber.

Disregarding Secretary Taft's estimate of himself, it is interesting to note that leading Republicans who are not committed to any aspirant are practically unanimous in the opinion that Taft is the best timber equipped for the Presidency than any other man now mentioned for the office. Fairbanks is not in the same class with him. With Fairbanks in the White House the corporations would be less concerned about the Governmental interference. Men in high place who have been despising the public domain, would have no concern, because they were strong politically. The country would have an administration strongly akin to that under President Roosevelt, save that Fairbanks would be even more inclined to listen to the dictation of Wall Street and the big corporations of the Nation. Of all the Republicans now in the race, Fairbanks is the most popular with the corporations, because he would be most apt to do their bidding, but there is one Fairbank weakness, for this fact is known to the country and in this area of reform it would be disastrous for the Republican party to name Fairbanks as their candidate. The corporations will not attempt to force his nomination, knowing that by so doing they would almost certainly force the election of a Democrat, probably Bryan, with a very heavy margin.

Foraker a Corporation Man.

In the last session of Congress Senator Foraker introduced the bill for the Senator, and the country became imbued with the idea that he was representing the corporations, and not the people in the Senate. So doubt Foraker would do much more than the corporations than would Taft. He has not the same independence; he has not that same loyalty to the public. Foraker is a close corporation man, and as such would gain much corporate support. Foraker would not wear as heavy a yoke as Fairbanks; he would be less subservient to the will of the corporations than would Fairbanks. The balance is decidedly in favor of the Secretary of War.

Cannon Boom Not Serious.

Very few politicians give serious consideration to the Cannon boom; it appears to have reached its zenith. But for his age the Senator would be much in evidence. But a man who will be 73 years old at the close of President Roosevelt's term is not likely to be chosen as the next President.

Foraker Has Strong Supporters.

Foraker is in a position to receive the support of many powerful Republicans in the Senate. These friends have already shown their hands. Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island, in undisputed control of that state, stands ready to deliver the Rhode Island delegation to Foraker. Aldrich does not want Taft. Senator Penrose, who manages by hook or crook to retain control of the distinguished Quaker machine, has it known that Pennsylvania will present the name of Senator Knox at the next convention. Knox is not a candidate any more than Taft, and the corporations do not wish him, any more than they wanted Roosevelt or Root. However, Penrose is for Foraker, and has thrown the name of Knox into the field to create a counteraction in the event that a multitude of candidates will enable the machine men to checkmate the Taft supporters. That is all the newly launched Knox boom is for, and he would not be surprising if Knox would do something that would destroy the weapon that Penrose hopes to wield. As a matter of fact, Penrose would be the last man in the world to boom Knox if he believed Knox stood any chance of winning.

Ohio Storm Center in Presidential Fight.

It has long been an open secret that Taft is Roosevelt's choice among the numerous Presidential aspirants, but the President has never made public announcement of that fact, nor is he likely to do so. The President hopes for Taft's success, and he realizes that any announcement from the White House would be construed as an attempt to dictate to the party and would probably do more injury than good to the man whom he regards as best equipped to succeed him. Taft, on the other hand, does not seek and will not seek any expression from the President, if he is to be nominated he wants the nomination to come as an expression of the will of the party and

Foraker a Corporation Man.

In the last session of Congress Senator Foraker introduced the bill for the Senator, and the country became imbued with the idea that he was representing the corporations, and not the people in the Senate. So doubt Foraker would do much more than the corporations than would Taft. He has not the same independence; he has not that same loyalty to the public. Foraker is a close corporation man, and as such would gain much corporate support. Foraker would not wear as heavy a yoke as Fairbanks; he would be less subservient to the will of the corporations than would Fairbanks. The balance is decidedly in favor of the Secretary of War.

Cannon Boom Not Serious.

Very few politicians give serious consideration to the Cannon boom; it appears to have reached its zenith. But for his age the Senator would be much in evidence. But a man who will be 73 years old at the close of President Roosevelt's term is not likely to be chosen as the next President.

Foraker Has Strong Supporters.

Foraker is in a position to receive the support of many powerful Republicans in the Senate. These friends have already shown their hands. Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island, in undisputed control of that state, stands ready to deliver the Rhode Island delegation to Foraker. Aldrich does not want Taft. Senator Penrose, who manages by hook or crook to retain control of the distinguished Quaker machine, has it known that Pennsylvania will present the name of Senator Knox at the next convention. Knox is not a candidate any more than Taft, and the corporations do not wish him, any more than they wanted Roosevelt or Root. However, Penrose is for Foraker, and has thrown the name of Knox into the field to create a counteraction in the event that a multitude of candidates will enable the machine men to checkmate the Taft supporters. That is all the newly launched Knox boom is for, and he would not be surprising if Knox would do something that would destroy the weapon that Penrose hopes to wield. As a matter of fact, Penrose would be the last man in the world to boom Knox if he believed Knox stood any chance of winning.

Ohio Storm Center in Presidential Fight.

It has long been an open secret that Taft is Roosevelt's choice among the numerous Presidential aspirants, but the President has never made public announcement of that fact, nor is he likely to do so. The President hopes for Taft's success, and he realizes that any announcement from the White House would be construed as an attempt to dictate to the party and would probably do more injury than good to the man whom he regards as best equipped to succeed him. Taft, on the other hand, does not seek and will not seek any expression from the President, if he is to be nominated he wants the nomination to come as an expression of the will of the party and

Foraker a Corporation Man.

In the last session of Congress Senator Foraker introduced the bill for the Senator, and the country became imbued with the idea that he was representing the corporations, and not the people in the Senate. So doubt Foraker would do much more than the corporations than would Taft. He has not the same independence; he has not that same loyalty to the public. Foraker is a close corporation man, and as such would gain much corporate support. Foraker would not wear as heavy a yoke as Fairbanks; he would be less subservient to the will of the corporations than would Fairbanks. The balance is decidedly in favor of the Secretary of War.