An Advertiser in the Oregonian Is Swamped With Replies

Patrons who use the classified columns of The Oregonian are often surprised at the large number of replies they receive from advertising inserted in this part of the paper. The remarkable increase in advertising now regularly carried by The Oregonian over the amount of advertising carried one year ago in itself is the most valuable recognition advertisers can give the merits of this paper as an adver-tising medium. There is hardly any business in the field of the Pacific Northwest that cannot be profitably advertised in The Oregonian.

On March 28, The Oregonian inserted, on order of the Hood River Banking & Trust Company, the following advertisement under the heading, "Wanted, Miscellaneous," in the classified columns:

WANTED - TWO CEMENT HOLLOW block machines. Address Lock Box 618, Hood River, Or.

The following letter written to The Oregonian by the advertisers on the 2d inst, will be found self-
