There will be presented to the Board of There will be presented to the fourd of Education at its meeting tomorrow night petitions asking to have established an industrial school in connection with the public school system of Portland. For several weeks the patitions have been circulated and have been signed by many of the most prominent citizens. Those who are behind the movement feel confidence when the confidence is the confidence of the conf dent that it will meet with the approval of the board.

This belief is founded upon expressions of several of the directors in regard to the project. At a recent meeting of the board, the matter was brought up informaily and met with the hearty approval of those who spoke upon the subject. It is planned to establish an industrial school which shall have the same rela-school which shall have the same reac-tion to the regular work that the manual training course now has. It is planned to give a thorough training in the trades with competent instructors. Although the details have not yet been worked out, the project will follow general lines indicated in an article that appeared recently in The Oregonian. The Oregonian.

"I am strongly of the opinion that a vocational school, such as is suggested, would be of great benefit to Portland," said Judge A. L. Frazer last night. "In my work with children I have found many who are active mentally and physically but who are not satisfied with books. They simply will not be confined to the schoolroom and it is necessary to direct their activity along other lines. For these children, a trades school is of great benefit.

'I consider it most important for a boy "I consider it most important for a boy to be thoroughly trained in the line he has chosen for his life work. He should be taught to do something well. If he is placed in a trades school he will get exactly the training that will make of him a useful citizen."

One of Portland's foremost music-lovers, Mrs. H. L. Keats, during the past week, sebured from the Ellers Piano House a magnificent new sites Art Grand Weber Piano, to which is attached unusual interest.

A few weeks ago, when the famous Rosenthal visited this city, he spent some time as the guest of the Ellers House in their warerooms. While there, he happened to strike the keys of this particular plane and the unusual quality of ticular piano and the unusual quelity of tone and splendid touch instantly ap-pealed to him, and resulted in his sit-ting down and spending fully two hours at the instrument.

The Weber plane is Rosenthal's choice and the make exclusively used by him, but this particular plane drew forth an expression of admiration more enthusiastic than usual Not stone is it beautiful in tone and action, but it is also one of the handsomest planes perhaps ever turned out by the Weber Company. They would immediately run the price up to 75% and then back to 75%c. That is the way they were posted on the board," said Mr. Harris.
