Portland Man Finds Little to Admire in Canadian Metropolis.

Toronto, on the Other Hand, Is Busy, Bustling and Up-to-date-Possesses a Fine System of Streetcars.

Correspondence.)—Montreal was a great disappointment to me. I was under the impression that it was a big. up-to-date city, but it is modeled on the lines of some of the did French cities of the Middle Ages. It is the most unprepossessing city you could imagine. The streets are very narrow, so narrow that except on a very few of them there is room for only one car track. I discovered this after walking along one of the carlines and wondering why the cars only went in one direction. The result is that the carlines are a system of loops.

In the old part of town, the French quarter, the streets are not more than 20 feet wide, some of them less, and the sidewalks are not over two feet wide, sidewalks are not over two feet wide. BT THOMAS M'CUSKER sidewalks are not over two feet wide, so that it is just possible for two people to pass. They may have arranged them so that, like the carlines, the traffic should all be in one direction. I saw the fire department turn out. They use double teams or four in heads free department turn out. They use double teams, or four-in-hands, possibly because four horses could not be driven abreast. They do not travel in a burry when going to a fire. Fires burn slowly there. There's no haste about anything. The streets and alleys are the poorest The streets and alloys are the poorest and dirtiest I have ever seen anywhere. I asked an Englishman why. He said that two-thirds of the population are French, and they control the Council and everything else. When they ask for improvements they are told that there is no money. He intimated that, inasmuch as the taxes are paid regularly, somebody must be getting a rakeoff. One instance was cited where a manufacturer wanted a sidetrack on the street in front wanted a sidetrack on the street in front if his property, but as he refused to be sled, he did not get it, but had to build t on his own property.

French Own the City.

was also told that the French assur to own the place, and that they consider that the English cught to be grateful for being permitted to live there. You can really feel this in the air. French is taught in the achools, and it would seem that the church dominates politics. On hat the church dominates politics. On he streets practically the only language is french. In making inquiry for direction here or there. I was answered by "I do not speak English." and yet the reply was in fairly good English. Whether they do not want to encourage the English language or not, I am unable to say. What little French I knew did me no harm-I did not attempt to use it. The architecture is peculiar-in fact, I might call it "Dominican," whatever that s, as all the buildings have a serious re-igious aspect. Even the hotels and rail-road depots have the appearance of churches, and I found myself taking off my hat when asking for a ticket. This peculiarity is also carried out in naming the streets, as nearly all of them commence, with Saint, viz. St. Peter. St. Paul, St. Sacramento, St. Xavier, etc. In fact, I got acquainted with more saints ;

Mixed up with the saints I found McGill street. Trust an Irishman for "butting" into the best of company. I noticed that nearly all the business firms used the word "limited." Hunting their financial liahillry. Nearly all the signs carried French with an occasional sign showing Murphy," or "William Cassidy, d." I discovered that in the latter cases it meant that their knowledge of French was limited

French was limited.

Montreal is situated somewhat as is Fortland, inasmuch as the St. Lawrence River divides the east from the west side, and back of it they have the heights, which is called "the mountain." From which is called "the mountain." From this eminence you get a fine view of the city. Here they have an attempt at a purk, but it does not compare with our

Some Fine Residences.

There are some fine residences on the sidehill, and some beautiful private grounds, but it impresses you as being the house of the indolent rich, as there is little effort made to beautify the surroundings, and you see no life around the es. It is possible that they are hiber-ng yet and have not come out of their ter quarters, as it is very cold there. The buds are just sprouting on the shrub make money there, as I do not believe any of the buildings have been painted since the completion of the Church of Notre Dame, in 1829.

Speaking of this church, it is one of the attractions of the place, and well worth a visit. It is quite an imposing edince from the exterior, but inside it is grand. I cannot begin to describe the magnificent carvings and freeze work, and the figures standing in niches throughout the church, before which throughout the church, before which kneels some devotee at all hours of the day or night, for this is the Mecca of the Catholic, no matter from what hand he Towering to a height of 50 feet or more, Our Lady" looks down upon the assembled multitude or the lone penitent, with that gracious smile which bids him hope, while at a distance an august figure of the Delty, with hands outspread, invokes a blessing upon the beads of all who enter these sacred precincts.

There are many visitors who are provided the provided that the provided the provided that the provided th a blessing upon the beads of all who the ter these sacred procinets.

There are many visitors -who prowl about this grand old church, viewing with curiosity the many things of interest, but to me it seemed sacribes, and it was with the greatest reverence that I impected the sacred images and other works, not on account of the religion of works, not on account of the religion of the religion of the religion of the sacred images and other works, not on account of the religion of the sacred images. which they were emblems, nor on ar-count of these who placed them there, but on account of that which they repre-sented to me, that undefined something which is manifest to a greater or less degree in the minds of men, no matter of what race or creed.

There are other places of interest if of early days of Canada. In the court is mounted some cannon of very ancient vintage and alongside is piled cannon balls such as were used in those days, but look now to be a pile of rust. From a basiness standpoint Montreal is of great importance, as the shipping is heavy, but I cannot say that it is on account of her enterprising citizens.

The contrast between Toronto and Montreal is so great that one would scarcely believe they were in the same country. Toronto is not French by long odds, but I would say was more american. A visit will cause you to believe that Canada and America are separated only by an imaginary boundry line.

Toronto Well-Built City.

Here everything is hustle and up to date, with good substantial buildings, not unlike our own, and broad, well-paved streets, and, what is better, the cieanest streets I ever saw. This is also true of the alleys, which are few. If there should come up a windstorm, there will be no dust to blow in your eyes. I am told that the streets are always clean. The citizens brook no delays in remaring streets. The street always clean. The citizens brook no delays in repairing streets. The street car company has atheets forn up, but only for a short distance and time, and if a merchant thinks by reason of the impassable condition his trade is being injured, he makes complaint and the company is required to put on enough men to rush the work to completion. It is quite evident that the corporations do not control the city, and that the plain, ordinary citizen has some rights here.

Though the large ocean streams do not touch here, the shipping is important and lowed, and found they were the employees of the firm of T Eaton & Co. a large manufacturer and owner of an eightstory department store, the factory and store covering three blocks, larger than store covering three blocks, larger than ours. The employes number 6000 now, which is increased a thousand or so during the holidays. The store and factory open at 8 A. M. and close at 5 P. M. the year round, with a half holiday on Saturdays and close on all holi ays. There are no strikes with this firm.

The remarkable part of this man's business, especially for a department store, is that he does only a cash business. He came here 13 years ago, and his factory and store employed only 900 people. He said he would either make or break on the principle which he established, and his success speaks for itself. speaks for itself.

The elder Eaton died a few months ago, and his son is conducting the business along the same lines.

There are several other good department stores here. The hotels are remarkably good, and the interior finishings are extremely rich, everything indicating prosperity. In most of the restaurants you get good, wholesome fare at reasonable prices. I found the people courteous and accommodating and anxious to supply any information desired.

The streetcar service is first-class. The cars are different from our own. The rear platform is extremely large and di-vided by a railing, the rear part is for entrance and the other half for exit, so there is no confusion. The cars are wider and there are two doors, entrance and exit. Some cars have a wide vestibule in the middle so that they can be loaded or unloaded from either end without con-fusion and much quicker than our system. In my opinion, a decided improvement on our system. The conductor takes no fares. He pre-sents a little iron box, something like a dime savings bank, only larger, and you place your money in the slot. There is an attachment holding tickets or trans-fers, to which you help yourself. There is no time limit punched in the transfer, but they are dated, and are good for certain hours, that is, between certain hours before noon and afternoon. I think there are many things we could learn from our

May State Land Receipts.

SALEM, Or.. June 1.—The receipts of the State Land Department for May aggregated $100,997, representing the largest month's business in land transactions in years. Of this amount, $55,50 is credited to the sale of school lands, and the heavy receipts are due to the redemption of certificates canceled for fraud, at the advanced price of $2.50 per acre. Previous payments upon these certificates, the bulk of which are held by John De Laittre, of St. Paul, Minn., and represent about 50,000 acres, averaging 75 cents per acre, must be refunded, as per order of the Board, which will reduce the receipts somewhat. Repayment will also have to be made upon the Kelliher list of certificates, aggregating about 30,000 acres, which have been cancelled without recourse. This will amount to about 75 cents per acre.
