OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Wash-ington, June & Senator Bourne has been urging the director of the geological survey to make a comprehensive study of those regions of Oregon supposed to contain gold-bearing grarels. There ap-pears to be no doubt whatever that there are numerous gold deposits in the state which, if properly studied, would render handsome returns on investments. But these placer fields have not been Tender handsome returns on investments. But these placer fields have not been carefully studied in many instances and little is known as to their extent or the quality of their gold deposits Chambers of Commerce and leading clitzens have appealed to Mr. Bourne to have the gold resources of the state made cilizens have appealed to Mr. Bourne to have the gold resources of the state made the subject of early and exhaustive study. Some years ago Waldermar Lindgren of the geological survey made such a study of the gold fields of the Blue Mountain country in Eastern Oregon. He devoted a great deal of time to this work and his report, subsequently published, did more to interest outside capital than any other one agency. Mr. Lindgren's report was exhaustive and was found to be most reliable. Thaw drama. All the characters, except Stanford White, were billed in their real names, but the author had taken considerable license with the story, The audience of riverside workers and costermongers was delighted, and greet-ed the playwright-actor-manager affec-tionately as "Good Old Birdie."

In view of the great value of Mr. Lindgreu's report on the Blue Mountain coun-try and the development which subse-quently resulted it is believed that, if this same class of work could be extended into other localities, similar resuits would follow. Authoritative in-formation of this character, if it is favor-able, will prove an attraction to outside capital and will direct the attention of rapital and will direct the attention of miners to localities where paying invest-ments can be made. At the same time, it would head off the wildcat schemes, which might otherwise flourish and do considerable harm, not only to the state, but to innocent investors who might be persuaded to take stock in them. The acquiring investors who might be persuaded to take stock in them. The geological survey has mapped out its work for the present season and its studice of gold deposits have been some-what interferred with by the special investigation being made of the coal fields in all the Western states. A great deal of land supposed to contain coal and therefore withdrawn has since been found to be agricultural or timber land with no workable deposits of coal on it, and all this land has been restored to entry. There remain several hundred thousand acres which must be examined before it is definitely known whether the land contains coal or not, and it is with a view to getting this information that the Government geologists have been the Government geologists have been diverted from their usual work and as-signed to coal examination. Mr Bourne has been advised that owing to the coal investigations it will probably be impossible for the geological survey to take up the study of gold deposits in Oregon during the present season, but he has assurance that the matter will be has assurance that the matter will be made the subject of special inquiry next year. Director Smith has assured Mr. Bourne that, if it should be possible to send a man to Oregon later this season to study the gold-bearing gravels, he will make the detail. It seems to be settled, however, that, if the study is not made this season, if will be taken up at the opening of the season of 1995.
