The fact that Congressman Jones' fellow-citizens at North Yakima are clamoring for an announcement of his candidacy and that his friends in other sections of the state are urging him to become a candidate, lends color to the belief that he has practically made up his mind to declare himself.

Then, step by step, every fea-ture of National life was faithfully represented, and in a beautifully deco-rated float, Miss Merveyna Kinney, the Goddesa of Liberty, presided over all. There were in the parade over 600 people taking part. All of the fraternal organizations turned out en masse. Ashland Lodge, B. P. O. The exercises at the Courthouse Grove were listened to by over 5000 people. Every nook and corner of the after round of applause. The Governor the drew a beautiful word painting of the condition of the colonies before the War of the Rebellion. He pertrayed the scenes, the feelings and the emotions of the patriarchs as they gathered around the table to attest the immortal document that severed the political relations existing between the Colonies and Great Britain or what their thoughts Great Britain or what their thoughts must have been as with grim determination they heralded to the world the announcement that the Republic was born to demonstrate that a government of the people was the only assurance of political liberty; of how there were at that time commingled expressions of indignation and regrets, for while the signors hated the tyranny of the Britdignation and regrets, for while the signors hated the tyranny of the British King, they loved the common people of Great Britain across the water and were by them loved in return; that the signing of the declaration meant war with their brothers across the waters and the dranching of their homes in fraternal blood, and that to support it thousands of lives and fortunes must be sacrificed upon the altar of freedom. be sacrificed upon the altar of freedom, and that as the sinking sun disappeared over the western horizon it caused the moments to cast a last lingering glance

Referring to present-day affairs, he spoke feelingly of the absolute necessity of the citizenship of the Nation standing shoulder to shoulder against the wrongdoer. One by one he told of the Governors of the different states who had done so much to drive corruptionists from places of public life, and in doing so he called particular attention to the fact that the men who did things belonged to both the great parties. He closed the point with a glowing tribute to President Roosevelt, and said that while he differed with him politically, none admired his fearless deeds and his unswerving loyalty to duty and Chris-

The balloon ascension by Professor Frank Hamilton, a regularly employed aeronaut, was a thrilling event in which the professor nearly lost his life. It was necessary to postpone the event for nearly an hour waiting the con-clusion of the ball game, with the re-sult that one of the tail poies holding the balloon broke, tearing a large hole in the side of the balloon. Notwithin the side of the balloon. Notwith-standing this accident the balloon was hastily repaired and the ascent made. At a point about a thousand Teet in mid-air the thousands of spectators were horrified to see it burst. With a coolness that would have done credit to a man sitting upon a quiet bench at the park, the professor waited his opportunity and as the waited his opportunity, and as the balloon arighted itself, cut himself loose with his parachute and landed in a tree, about a quarter of a mile from the school ground where the
