

Market Baskets and Shopping Bags Still Have the Vogue

CAREFUL HOUSEWIVES DO NOT DISDAIN TO CARRY HOME THEIR OWN PURCHASES

THE HOUSEWIFE who has not a speedy collection of shopping and market bags these days is behind the times. There was a time when the market basket and the shopping bag were the exclusive privileges of the old lady or the rural woman. But in this era of common sense no housewife disdains to carry home her small purchases, and the delivery boys and wagons of the big department stores are not so taxed with the burden of carrying a spool of thread, a yard of ribbon or a bolt of lace to the home of the lady, who is too proud to be seen carrying bundles on the street. A few of the ultra dainty still order their smallest purchases sent home through the delivery department, but the market basket and shopping bag do not go begging on account of these. There are housewives who never start down town without some one of their dainty little baskets, and if they do not wish to make their purchases until after paying a round of calls they have but to slip into their little wrist-bag the tiny wad of silken net, with its two stout handles, which, when opened up, is capable of expanding to an astounding capacity, embracing all manner of bundles and packages and keeping them snugly imprisoned while the shopper has no further bother than to keep a firm grasp upon the double handle, for the collapsible basket, of wicker-work, and long, deep and narrow in shape, with the double handle, is one of the most popular bags for shopping and marketing and comes in all manner of weaves, the Indian variety running up to a considerable cost. This style of basket, and the old reliable net bag are shown in the central picture (No. 2), assisting a suburban housewife to keep together the fruits of her Saturday shopping expedition. No less than 14 different baskets has this little woman, and when asked why she naively replied:

"I live at St. Johns."

Not infrequently, she says, all her baskets and bags are working at once, although she does not attempt to carry more than three at a time herself. A neat little basket, she explains, is different than an awkward assortment of loose packages and bundles, and even though it be crammed full to overflowing one has not the same hesitancy in pressing it upon some home-going neighbor for the journey suburbward, in case one is already overburdened with other bags and baskets. An idea of the capacity of these bags and baskets and of the assistance they are to the shopper who does not desire to await slow delivery can be had from a study of No. 2. No less than two dozen different packages and bundles are snugly tucked away in the two bags, and the lady from St. Johns still has a firm grasp on the situation, managing her parcels and a large framed picture as well.

In picture No. 1 are shown two styles of fancy baskets, a little less capacious, but more dainty, and a nifty little aid to fair cherry-pickers or to take along on a berrying expedition. The more elaborate inter baskets come in these shapes, and one may spend as much money as one desires in fine coloring, superior materials and intricate weave. On the other hand, a very dainty and attractive little basket may be picked up for a mere trifle.

No. 3 shows one of the pretty little flower baskets which can be utilized so charmingly in sweet pea season. The little housewife from St. Johns has a thriving hedge of sweet peas at her home, and two or three times each week may be seen coming into town with one of her flower baskets well laden with bright blossoms, for the bedside of a sick friend or for the luncheon table of some intimate who is entertaining.

Excursion Season Has Opened.

Many New Cottages Are Building.

NEWPORT, Ore., July 20.—(Special.)—All the past week the incoming crowd has been on the increase, and most of the cottages at Nye Creek have been filled and many camps set up. Most of the arrivals this week have been cottagers or campers, the hotels remaining about half full. The number of registrations, Sunday an excursion from the valley brought in a trainload of 400. This is the first large excursion of the year, but others will occur each Sunday during the remainder of the season.

The buying of lots and building of cottages seems to be unceasing. A day never passes without a purchase or a contract being made, and the price of property has been raised considerably since the opening of the season. The new addition north of Nye Creek, opened up last season by ex-Mayor Irvin, has been entirely sold out, and within a year or two the north side will be covered with cottages. This district has been taken into the city limits, and a Marshal placed in charge to see that sanitary precautions are observed. Every camp and cottage in the whole Nye Creek section is taxed 25 cents a week to pay for the hauling away of garbage, thus preventing the danger of disease.

Many other improvements have been added during the winter to make Newport more attractive. Coast streets, which runs parallel and about 300 yards from the ocean, has been graded at the cost of $4000, and the residents compelled to build sidewalks before their premises.

George Myer, of Salem, has constructed a skating rink on the hill between Newport and Nye Creek. It is considered by experts to be one of the finest in the state and cost Mr. Myer about $2000.

On Tuesday, July 23, the Red Men will convene their annual grand encampment here, and arrangements have been made to entertain at least 250 of these lodge men. The encampment will last a week.

The Willamette University Summer School, under the direction of President Coleman, has proved to be a fine drawing card for Nye Creek. Complete and comprehensive lecture courses are given in the Irvin Grove, where the students and faculty are camped. This school is the best experiment of its kind in Newport.

The hotel registers show the following registered:

"Always Busy at Eilers"

Pianos at Your Own Price!

—and it means exactly what it says, for here is our offer to substantiate it.

Owing to the fact that we have had an exceptionally large business during the past few weeks for this season of the year, and having recently taken in trade a number of used pianos as part payment toward Pignola pianos, Weber and Chickering Grands, and other popular instruments in our Line of Highest Quality, and as we are already commencing to receive advance shipments of our Fall stock, we are beginning to be crowded for space. We wish to move these used instruments at once, and have decided to adopt a novel idea to accomplish it. In a few words, we're going to sell these pianos for just what you are willing to give. We'll offer nine of them—three on Monday, three on Tuesday and three on Wednesday. We'll place them in our large corner window, where you can examine them readily and critically. We will set upon each one a starting price, which is in itself a low figure, and a price which represents a bargain, to begin with. Beginning at 8 o'clock Monday morning, we'll reduce the price $1 every ten minutes, on each one of the first three instruments, until sold; on Tuesday, we'll do likewise on the next three; and on Wednesday, the same on the last three.

HERE IS THE LIST

Look It Over Carefully

THESE THREE TO BE OFFERED ON MONDAY

- J. & C. Fisher, of New York, Cabinet Grand, full size, the style sold by other dealers at $350; our price, to start.....$235.00
- Marshall & Wendell, an excellent make and well known, the regular $365 style; priced to start.....$265.00
- Baus, another good, dependable make, style regularly sold at $375.00; priced to start.....$245.00

THESE THREE TO BE OFFERED ON TUESDAY

- Ludwig, sold by other dealers at $350; to start, at.....$245.00
- Sherwood & Son, the $350 style; to start, at.....$235.00
- Lester, Grand, $750 style; used limited time by one of Portland's leading musicians who has left the city; to start at.....$410.00

THESE THREE TO BE OFFERED ON WEDNESDAY

- Draper Bros., sold regularly by dealers who carry them at $325; to start at.....$230.00
- Bailey, full size, a handsome instrument, regular value $325; to start at.....$245.00
- Weiser Bros., the $425 style, Orchestral Grand; to start at $265.00

Our usual Easy Payment Plan may be taken advantage of in connection with this special sale. A small amount down, and the balance in convenient monthly sums, will place any one of the pianos in your home at once.

And now, it remains for you to say what these pianos are worth to you. Look them all over carefully; decide which one suits you best, and name the figure you feel that you can afford to pay. You can either make your offer when the price reaches the point you wish to pay, or you can hand us in your bid at once, as soon as you look the instruments over, and take your chance of its not being sold to some one else at a higher bid.

And the Prices Begin to Drop—a Dollar Every Ten Minutes, MONDAY MORNING at 8 o'Clock Sharp

Now, of all the bargain opportunities offered to piano-seekers in this town, this is certainly the greatest yet. If you want a piano, and want to buy for less, don't miss this.
