LOVE OF CUE GAME THEIR DOWNFALL

Two Young Men Lose Positions Because of Devotion to Billiards.

BOTH CLAIM CHAMPIONSHIP

Neither Will Yield, and They Continue to Play Until Ragged and Unkempt They Are Arrested as Vagrants—Will Leave Town.

A dispute six weeks ago between two friends as to which was the better player of billiards has just resulted in the downfall of both. So interested did the pair become in playing a series of games that they forfeited their positions in a local wholesale house in order to continue the contest uninterrupted. Eventually they got to pawing their effects and living about at free lunch counters that they might go on indulging their enthusiasm for the competition. And yesterday, pale, haggard and unkempt through continued attention to the game, they decided to leave the city when Judge Cameron advised them that they must do something more useful than play billiards if they desired to remain here unmolested by the law.

Arthur Elde and Leo V. Strain are the competitors. Friends of the two men say that neither of them can play billiards from the standpoint of an expert. They were working in a Front-street wholesale house in mental capriciousness when the initial game was played. It is not learned which of them won, but both claimed supremacy in handling the cue. They got to playing evenings to begin with. Evenings proving all too short they added noon hour to the schedule. One afternoon they forgot to show up for work until after 3 o'clock. When they reported at that hour it was to find their jobs had been filled by other workmen, so they went back to the billiard table.

From a purely sporting standpoint Elde and Strain thereafter proved themselves thoroughbreds on the first water. Day and night they kept at it, now one gaining the advantage, then the other. Like children pursuing the evanescent rainbow, each kept after victory which seemed near at hand. They were so evenly matched that an accident would have turned the tide of victory, but this accident failed to occur and the game went on.

It was only a short time until their meager store of money was consumed by billiard-room dues. It costs money to play billiards in a public place at 40 cents an hour. But financial embarrassment was a secondary matter in the contest and they parted with most everything but their clothing among the pawnshops of Third street. The scores in none of their games are available, but it is said the figures are nothing out of the ordinary, except for being very close, and not of sufficient difference to satisfy either man of the other's supremacy. The last game they played continued until 1:30 o'clock Friday morning. They did not quit until the proprietor of the place ran them out in order to close up his place. When they started for their modest lodgings in the Eastern lodging house it never occurred to them of the danger of the hour. An ambitious policeman caught sight of them, observed that they were unshaven and unkempt and insisted on an interview.

There is a law that provides no person can be out after midnight except on lawful business. And the law falls to recognize billiards as lawful business. Of course, persons with more than 50 cents in silver and new clothes, are never molested. But let any person who is shabby try to circulate in the quiet hours before dawn and the chances are 10 to 1 that some policeman who wants to be sergeant will take him in. So it was that Strain and Elde were taken in.

"You men have got to go to work or else leave town," said Judge Cameron when the case was brought before him.

The two players whispered together briefly. Their words could not be heard, but their manner indicated each was demanding of the other that he admit his inferiority at billiards. Doubtless neither would give in and Elde presently turned to the court. "We will leave the city, your honor," he said.

Isaac Gruble, would-be founder of a new school of philosophy, was in court yesterday forenoon. Gruble's system of life is a sort of antithesis to the code of the Stoics. He believes not only in giving play to his feelings, but in indulging them. He is a mixture of anarchist, Socialist, Satyr, rascal and vagabond.

Gruble was trying to convert a group of men to his view of life when the police picked him up; for while this is a country of free thought, individual habits of mind must not openly stray beyond certain prescribed limits. And Gruble was endeavoring to impress upon his auditors that life is a transitory existence beset with miseries such as should be dispensed by any means whatsoever, including morphine, opium, liquor and any other agencies of artificial pleasure which might suggest themselves.

Just to impress upon his hearers the logic of what he was saying, Gruble went into his ragged clothes for a hypodermic needle, plunged it into his bare wrist, and in an instant his rabid mood passed away and he stood beaming and genial. At which moment a plain-clothes officer who had been listening to the glibly uttered words stepped forward and arrested the fellow.

"That a man should use morphine and liquor is a sad misfortune which

"Reserve Force" that's the word for Grape-Nuts FOOD

"I want to tell you about Grape-Nut food, and my experience with it. I had for a year or two, felt a general debility creeping on me, and also suffered from flatulency, piles, etc., which I began to think was due to advancing age, now being 55 years old, when, in the providence of God, as I believe, Grape-Nuts was brought to my notice, and tried as an experiment. In a week I found a decided improvement in myself, and have kept improving ever since, and am now being congratulated on the great change in my appearance by all acquaintances. Not only so, but I feel I have reserve force so that I do not feel wearied at night, although I have worked continuously from 7:30 A. M. until 9 P. M. I recommend Grape-Nuts to my friends and acquaintances, and all of my family use the food, and it is on the table at every meal whatever else is omitted. I write this being desirous of giving vent to the grateful feeling I entertain for the benefits received from the use of this incomparable food."

The particular element which produces the quality of strength is the particles of Phosphate of Potash, not the phosphate of the drugstore, but that which is prepared by Nature and furnished in the field grains. This delicate element, not observed by the taste, is used by Nature in connection with the albumen of food, to rebuild the gray matter in the nerve centers throughout the body and in the brain and solar plexus, so that one thus nourished and rebuilt is very sure to feel the effects of this rebuilding within a week, or ten days, and this feeling grows and becomes fixed as one becomes a steady, every-day user of Grape-Nuts. "There's a Reason," Read, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

antiles him to the pity as well as the contempt of all mankind," said Judge Cameron, in passing on the case. "But that a man should endeavor to convert others to any such deadly habits brands him as a dangerous person. I will give you the limit of the law—90 days at breaking rock."

Looks Like Railroad Work.

EUGENE, Or., July 20.—The Southern Pacific Company has unloaded a carload of scrapers at Siuslaw river, the past week, which is taken as an indication by the people in this vicinity that the work of constructing the Natron-Klamath extension will begin very soon. An official of the company, while in Eugene yesterday, passing through the city on his way South, stated that the company was looking for terminal grounds in Eugene and that this city stood a fair chance of becoming a division point for all the trains of the Natron-Klamath extension, as well as for those of the line across the state to Ontario, when it is built.

Incorporate New Road Tuesday.

EUGENE, Or., July 20.—The Eugene & Siuslaw Railroad will be incorporated here next Tuesday at a meeting of the subscribers to the $50,000 stock taken by Eugene people to help Stephen Garver build a line from Eugene to the mouth of the Siuslaw river. The Eugene and Corvallis lines will be merged into one near Blachley, in the Lake Creek valley, about 35 miles west of here, and then proceed to the Siuslaw mouth. It is probable that work on the line out of Eugene will not begin until early next Spring.

Salem Pen Holds 380 Prisoners.

SALEM, Or., July 20.—Superintendent James, of the Oregon penitentiary, filed his quarterly report with the Secretary of State this morning, showing there were 380 inmates at the close of the quarter, as against 373 at the close of the last quarter. The earnings of the institution from convict labor amounted to $332.25, of which $287 was earned in the North-

Buy an Indestructible Range Buy a Range That Burns All the Coal

Most likely you have been throwing away good coal every day without knowing it. Coal that is only partially burned in the firebox. Because, with the ordinary range draft the air current only strikes part of the fire. Usually the damper door in such a range is situated at one end of the firebox only, which makes your fire hot at the draft end and cold at the other end. Now the draft in a MONARCH RANGE is entirely different. Instead of one damper door, there are TWO, one in each end of the firebox, and both are regulated by the same handle. So you get two different currents of air at the same time, and your fire burns which gets on smoothly and evenly.

The draft striking the fire from both directions consumes ALL THE FUEL, and gives you all the heating power from the coal. When you empty the ashpan in a Monarch Range you are throwing away ASHES—and ashes only—not coal, and in addition to this, the Monarch is constructed of MALLEABLE STEEL, which can be riveted so tight and solid that no air-leaks can possibly happen, as they do in cast iron ranges. The top is malleable steel, polished and bright. You can keep it clean without smearing your range with blacking, as they do in cast iron ranges. The top is malleable steel, polished and bright.
