MARKET RAIDED BY HIGHWAYMEN

Robbers Steal Physician's Rig and Drive to Scene of Crime.

Bold Thieves Make Escape by Free Use of Revolvers-Butcher Shop on Sixteenth Street Is Held Up.

After stealing Dr. Sanford Loeb's horse and buggy at Sixth and Washington streets, in the heart of the business dis-trict, at 7 o'clock last night, three highwaymen drove in a roundabout way to the North End Market, Sixteenth and the North End Market, Sixteenth and Marshall streets, entered the establishment about 3 o'clock and held up the proprietor and a man who was there on business. They secured about $100 and escaped in the rig. While carrying out the robbery, in which but two of them engaged, the thugs were masks made of flour sacks.

Just as the highwaymen were leaving the market, J. C. Duhrkoop, of Sylvan, Or., who was in 'he shop on business and who lost 535 in the robbery, ran out and tried to stop the horse. His act caused the bundlis to empty their revolvers at him, a number of shots being fired. Some say there were but five in all, but others, declare they heard at least ten

Some say there were but five in all, but others declare they heard at least ten shots fired. No one was hurt.

The highwaymen drove off in the direction of the railroad yards. Within a few minutes after the robbery was reported the police were out in all directions, a squad of detectives going to the scene in an automobile. The machine was driven through the district where the hold-up occurred, then out on the Linnton road, but up to an early hour this mornroad, but up to an early hour this morn-ing no trace of the highwaymen had been found.

Shortly before the robbery was commit-Shortly before the robbery was commit-ted, William Hampel, of 548 Walnut street, saw the horse and buggy tied to a tree at Twentieth and Thurman streets and rec-ognized them. He had just been to Dr. Loeb's office and knew of the theft. He alighted from the car on which he was riding and tried to take charge of the rig. He encouniered one of the bandits, however, who tried to explain that the rig was not the property of Dr. Loeb, and was not the property of Dr. Loeb, and the affair finally ended by two of the three highwaymen leaping into the car-riage and making off at a rapid rate. the highwavmen drove direct to the North End Market, located at Sixteenth and Marshall streets. There were two men actively engaged in the holdup, and some actively engaged in the holdup, and some say that a third robber remained outside to stand guard, but the police are inclined to believe that only two men were in the robbery. The two adjusted their white masks after alighting from the buggy, and were seen to do so by Duhrkbop, who had entered the market but a few minutes before. After masking themselves, the two men advanced inside the store, one displaying a blued-steel revolver.

He then opened the cash register and quickly stooped out the money in the drawers. Then he turned to his pal and remarked that it was time to get out. Both hurried to the sireet, after warning those within the market to remain quiet. Lessying into the buggy, the robbers started away, when Duhrkoop, recovering from his shock, rushed out and laid hold of the horses bridle. Immediately the men the huggy drew their weapons and Captain of Detectives Bruin and Patrol Captain Slover were at headquarters when the hold-up was reported. The hold-up was the most sensational of the present year, and is regarded as indicative of the presence in the city of a desperate gang of criminals, probably paroied convicts, with which Portland is said to be filled just now. Numerous burglaries have been reported to the police for several days, and many robberies and attempted robberies of safes have also been recorded.

He had been drink-ing heavily for several days, and his death is said to be traceable to his help-less condition.

Charles Miller, serving a term of six months at the Kelly Butte rockpile, escaped from that place at 3 o'clock last night and has not been recaptured. He had been doing duty as a trusty and took advantage of an opportunity to get nway. The escape was reported to the Sheriff and the police. #### PORTLAND MAN KILLS HUGE ELK NEAR SEASIDE

Walter R. Honeyman has achieved the distinction of being the first Portland sportsman to kill an elk this year. Not only this, but it is doubtful whether any other sportsman in the state will be able to bag a bull as large and handsome as the one that fell before the unerring aim of Mr. Honeyman. Mr. Honeyman has been walting for years for a chance to kill one of the fast vanishing elk, and just as soon as he could arrange it after the ban of the law was removed, he made ready for his trip. He left Portland a week ago last Friday, and returned yesterday morning, bringing back with him the head and hide of a seven-point bull. The head is undoubtedly one of the handsomest specimens ever brought to the city.

Trouble is threatened in the ranks of organized labor. At its meeting last night the Stationary Engineers' Union voted not to comply with the instructions of the Federated Trades Council to furnish the Portland Brewing Company with two engineers before tomorrow morning, under penalty of suspension from the central body. sists. Discussing the matter Dr. Axelrood said:

From what I have seen and read in the newspapers I am of the opinion, which is based on my personal experience, that it is imperative to do not only something, but a great deal to prevent the importation of the disease to Portland, and to do it as soon as possible, right now without any delay. I see in a San Francisco paper of October 5 that "The Board of Health reported today on the plague situation as follows: Number of verified cases 54, deaths 30, suspected cases 37, discharged 17, Seven new verified cases and three suspected cases have been discovered in the past 24 hours."

Further we hear that bubonic plague has made its appearance on Puget Sound, so we are threatened from two sides with the possibility of importing the scourge in our own city and I fully agree with our Honorabie Mayor, Dr. Lane, when he said: "I pity the people if the plague ever shows up in Portland. It will cost the city at least $500,000 to prevent its spread."

Difficult to Stamp Out.

In crossing a bridge between here and Hillsboro, the Portland auto party met Dr. Bailer on the approach. Instead of slacking speed, the auto driver rushed straight ahead, narrowly missing a collision with the doctor and his buggy, who would have been hurled to the water below had the vehicles come together. Arthur, driver of the automobile, was permitted to return to Portland, to await a call from Sheriff Connell should the doctor decide to prosecute the youth.

It is not an easy thing to fight bubonle plague and to get rid of it, as it usually stays with the locality wherever it is brought in; especially when we remember that bubonic plague seeks and thrives in filth, of which we have an abundance along the waterfronts and in the neighborhood of the guiches, as I have observed myself since I took up my residence in South Portland.

I wish only that all citizens of Portland should know, that the plague is the most dangerous disease to mankind, and that it is easier to prevent the importation of it by taking proper sanitary measures before its appearance among us than to fight it when it will be already here. As far as I know the members of the Board of Health, most of them personally known to me, are experienced, scientific and honorable physicians; the initiative steps they took in regard to this question are undoubtedly proper and timely. No doubt they know how and will do their best to cope with the situation.

Needs Thorough Cleansing.

Needs Thorough Cleansing.

That some parts of Portland need a good overhauling scrubbing and cleansing foes without saying, plague or no pague. There is also no doubt that a great many structures, dangerous wharves and rotten old huts have to be destroyed, sewers repaired, and that owners of private systems or the municipality will have to spend some money on all those improvements as the city and the public in general will be benefited by it. The City of Portland has in some places so many pest holes and germ-breeding places that the cleansing process ought to have been undertaken long ago, but now, since we have an incentive like the fear of having the bubonic plague brought into our city, let us do it well.

For a long time the plague was considered to be a miasmatic disease, originating from the accumulation of filth. This opinion was supported even by the French Academy as late as 1886; and can start anywhere. But in our day it is agreed by all medical actentists that the plague must be imported, introduced into cities previously healthy, by individuals.

Eyes fitted to glasses, it, at Metzger's.* is the manager, has been arraigned and will have a preliminary hearing on October 18. In default of $5000 bail he remains in jail.

from infected districts, and that certain conditions and surroundings must exist to form some infected fact (centers) in order to propagate the disease. That plenty of such conditions and surroundings do exist in our city. I am sorry to say, there is no doubt. So let us improve the sanitary and hygienic conditions of our city, let us be clean and be ready and able to meet the scourge at the gates of our Rose City and tell her that here is no home for her.

Epidemic in Russia

An idea of the great task of fighting the plague once it has commenced its ravages is given by Dr. Axelrood in his description of the epidemic that broke out in Russia in 1878. In this case Dr. Axelrood considers that the disease was intro-in Russia in 1878. In this case Dr. Axelrood considers that the disease was introduced from Turkey by Cassocks returning home, and that it had been carried to Turkey from Persia. In describing the epidemic in Russia and the means of fighting it, Dr. Axelrood said:

In the later part of October, 1878, M. N. Galkin-Wrassky, Governor of the State of Saratoff, and Mr. Melvikoff, Mayor of the dity of Tzaryclu, notified the authorities in St. Petersburg by wire that the bubonic plague was in Netliauka, and asked for medical assistance and other means to fight the pestilence. On November 8 I received a telegraphic order from the Russian Surgeon-General in St. Petersburg, Dr. N. I. Kosloff, to at once leave the Military Hospital and return to St. Petersburg, and to get ready to accept a commission to Vetlianka as-senior physician, accompanied by other physicians, stewards and nurses.

On November 10 1 had already started for Odessa, where I had an opportunity to consult Dr. Schactinger, who had a great dead of experience in the matter, and on November 14 1 arrived in St. Petersburg. November 18 saw me and five other physicians already on the train for Vetlianka. On my arrival there, November 24 1 had the honor to meet Professors Hirsch and Eichwaldt, Dr. Somerbrot, the Austrian Professor Besiadctsky, Dr. Tuber, Professor Muench, Dr. Depender and Dr. Teliafuss, from Bake and Irs, Grigarieff, Morosoff and Koch (the last three died from the plague), and Dr. Pogoessky, I found the following lacts.

History of Epidemic.

History of Epidemic.

To Vetlianka the disease was brought over from Astrachan by a woman. Mavra Pisareoa. She arrived sick on October 12, 1878, was sick a rew days and died. Right after her all the members of her family toes sick and died. Immediately after this the disease spread among the neighbors. A county medical steward, by name of Trublioff, was the first to attract the attention of his superiors, the local physicians, of some unusual and unknown to him disease. The physicians could not believe, and would not agree, that the existing disease was of a plaque character. They took it simply to be a febril disease, and save it the name pneumatyphus, and not until the mortality increased to an enormous degree and had as its victims some of the physicians and medical stewards who denied the enistence of plaque—not until then did the authorities commence to think of isolating the afflicted and take appropriate precautions.

On November 29, the Governor, Galkin-Wrassky, two clergymen of the village, myself and two other physicians, met some of the elders of the village and explained to them the urgent necessity of taking extraordinary means to check the mortality and spread of the disease, asking in the name of the government their co-operation in the matter, to which they gladly consented. At midnight on December 1 was established the first sanitary cordon, and then the real panic began, reminding one of the horrors of the middle ages, for the ignorant peasantry, not understanding our intentions, absolutely refused to obey our orders, saying that, "God sent this soourge and God will take it away." With such a philosophy of their own they abandoped their affilicted sick and left them without food or drink or clothing in their houses and huts, with windows broken by some families when the temperature was is degrees below zero.

Dead Lie Unburied.

Pre
Bead Lie Unburied.

The dead were not buried, as people were afraid to approach the bodies. This period of general panic, however, was of short duration. We decided to maintain the cordor, to enforce isolation of the afficted and disinfection with the aid of the regular military and 160 Cossacks. And only then the real work began. Houses in which the plague made its appearance were surrounded by guards, dressed in overcoats, previously saturated with oil, as well as masks and oiled gloves, each of the guards before going on duty had to lubricate his whole body with lard or fishoil. They had strict orders to prevent at the point of bayonets, any one to leave or anyone to enter the house except physicions and their help.

The afflicted were supplied with food by means of long poles. All the houses, whose plague-stricken occupants died, were first thoroughly disinfected, and at the end of the epidemic they were burned to the ground with everything in them, for which loss the villagers received compensation from the government. The dead were buried in deep trenches, filled with unslaked lime. All the graves, where plague-stricken bodies were buried were, after the epidemic, again covered with a deep layer of earth, mixed with Health Board acted wisely in taking prompt precautions against the introduction of bubonic plague, is the opinion of Dr. Max Axelrood, a local physician who has had experience in fighting this dread scourge in Russia. He thoroughly approves the course that has been taken in Portland but believes this should be only the beginning. Much should be done towards cleaning up and improving the sanitary conditions of Portland, he insists. Discussing the matter Dr. Axelrood said:

From what I have seen and read in the newspapers I am of the opinion, which is based on my personal experience, that it is imperative to do not only something, but a great deal to prevent the importation of the disease to Portland, and to do it as soon as possible, right now without any delay. DENIES FAVORING Superintendent Condemns Present Expensive Collection System, Which He Says Should Be Changed to District Work.

Aroused by an interview given out by C. L. Daggett, superintendent of the city garbage crematory, in which he advocates municipal collection of refuse. Portland scavengers declare that the superintendent has completely turned front, as only two months ago he endeavored, they assert, to form a combine among them by which there should be a still more complete monoshould be a still more complete mono-poly of the collection business. Last night the scavengers met at the residence of one of their number, Jacob Neumelster, 503 Twenty-fourth street north, and discussed the position tak-en by Mr. Daggett.

en by Mr. Daggett.

It is the charge of the scavengers that two months ago Mr. Daggett called them together in a hall at 713 Williams avenue and endeavored to or-ganize them so that they could fight any efforts to take the collection of any efforts to take the collection of garbage out of their control and that he advised them to establish a schedule of prices and enforce it. When they refused to do as he advised, they say, he tried to have the city adopt a collection system of its own. They are especially indignant over the assertion of the superintendent that garbage conditions are now very bad under the collection system.

Tries to Organize Men.

"Superintendent Daggett is now endeavoring to make it appear that there is a combine among the scavengers," said Neumeister inst night, "whereas he himself tried in vain to organize such a combine among us two months ago. He got us to meet on Williams avenue and had two attorneys present whom he wanted us to employ. Mr. Daggett said that we were not getting pay enough for collecting garbage and urged us to band together so we could make more and control the business.

"We refused to organize and employ his attorneys and that is the reason that Daggett is fighting us now. We have no combine and did not wish to organize one. It is true, as he told us, that we are not getting any too much money for collecting garbage, but our pay is reasonable and we decided that we did not want to form a combine.

When asked about the matter after the meeting last night Mr. Daggett de-nied that he had ever tried to form an organization among the scavengers. an organization among the scavengers. He said further that the men did not understand the interview he had given out as he had never said there was a combine among the scavengers. The present service is poor and should be superseded by a municipal collection, he believes, but he does not think the collectors are combined to control prices.

No Object in Combine.

"It is ridiculous that I should try to form a combine among the scavengers, as I would have no object in doing so," said Mr. Daggett. "About two months ago, when the Portland Sanitary Company applied for a franchise to collect and incinerate the city's garbage for a period of years, the scavengers were grestly excited for they thought they would lose their they thought they would lose their they among the scavengers and are always likely to "It is ridiculous that I should try to means of earning a livelihood.
