The demonstration is being organized, not directly by the United Irlah League, but by the Young Scots' Society, which resents the best elements in Scottish Liberalism. The Young Scots are as em phatic home rulers as Irish Nationalists are, and they as vigorously assert Scot-land's right to a recognition of her dis-tinct nationhood as do Irish Nationalists the right of Ireland. An added interest the work of the Winter months will provided by the efforts to deal with e growing interest in Irish industries the and in the language movement, and quite a number of the United Irish League branches are now considering how best they can ald these kindred movements. BERLIN, Oct. 19 .- (Special.)-The increasing friendliness between Great Britain and Germany, of which the King's meeting with the Kalser and the tour of English journalists through the Empire are the most recent manifestations, is certain to be further strengthened by the forthcoming stay of the German Emperor and Empress in England. This latest royal visit is regarded with lively interest both in England and Germany, and sanguine anticipations are being formed as to its beneficial effect upon the relations between the two empires.

Since the Emperor's last official visit to England, in 1891, events have moved quickly, and a new generation, almost, has sprung up. It is considered certain that His Majesty will receive a hearty welcome from the English people. As Government Steamship Project. That progress is being made in the movement for better steamship service from Panama to Pacific Coast ports is highly satisfactory to the Portland Chamber of Commerce, which started the agitation for an opposition line steamers to the Pacific Mail. L Local business men interested in the coast steamer lines are gratified that prog-ress is being made.

Joseph L. #### High Time at Roscommon.

Members of the Roscommon County Council were specially summoned to Ros-common on Tuesday last to take part in the ceremony of unveiling a life-sized oil painting of the late Michael Davitt. There was a large attendance, including many members of the local trade and labor associations and a number of Sinn Feiners. M. Hayden, M. P., for South Reacommon, referred to Mr. Davitt as a fine type of Irishman. He said Davitt retired from the Irish party because he thought he could do more useful work outside; but he did not, like some cranke outside, but he did not, like some cranke and critics, occupy his time in abusing Parliamentarianism. John McGreevy, a prominent member of the Labor party, declared that the Irish party had degenerated into a sort of a penny-in-the-slot machine, of which the directory in Dublin held the key. Mr. Hayden inquired if Mr. McGreevy was to be allowed to traduce the organization of which Mr. Davitt had been through life a faithful member. The chairman said Mr. McGreevy would not be heard, and instant the Council Chamber was in an uproar. Councillors and members of the public engaged in hand-to-hand fights and in the scrimmage furniture was smashed. The riot continued until a large body of police appeared and eject-ed some of the disturbers from the hall. Several of the Councillors were slightly wounded

Gaelic Spoken by Moors.

The story of Irish-speaking negroes in the West Indies is old, but Rev. Dr. Blair, presiding in the language section of the Pan-Celtic Congress at Edin-burgh, has shown that the sphere of Gaelle is still large by pointing out that Scottish settlers in North Carolina taught their slaves Gaelle and the descendants of these slaves still speak Gaelic. Dr. George Mackay has improved even upon this. He read a paper on the ex-istance of Gaelic tribes in Morocco, his istence of Gaelic tribes in Moroeco, his information being derived from an army officer who had accompanied several ex-peditions into Moroeco. According to Dr. Mackay, this officer discovered that the wild, warilke Berber tribes, who inhab-ited the mountains and tablelands of the interior, spoke a language which had a great resemblance to Gaelic. The tribes lived a clan life and were known by their clan names, just as the folk in the Highlands of Scotland were, and among the names were M'Tir, corresponding with the Highland MacTier. M'Tuga, corresponding with MacDougall, and an-other M'Ghill. The facial type of these Berbers was said to resemble the black Celt of Scotland.

Cured Any one of the ordinary forms of treatment may cure, or it may only appear to cure, or it may show no re-sults whatever. These diseases are treacherous and demand the most care-ful and thorough treatment. Many a case that appears practically cured is all the while developing chronic com-plications that may cause a lifetime of suffering. The only safety lies in the quickest cure possible, and that means a cure by my own system of treatment.
