SOCIALISM IS ENGLISH ISSUE

Little Encouragement for the Unionists in Recent Victory at the Polls.

FIGHT IS STILL AHEAD

Propaganda Begun Year Ago Has Permeated Country and Has Thousands of Exponents Throughout Entire Island.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—There is great unfatigable jubilation throughout the country over the so-called rout of the socialists in yesterday's municipal elections. There never was a greater misnomer for the result of the national polling, and no board-minded English politician is deceived by it—least of all the leaders of the unionist party.

What has happened or is happening is a complete change in the political complexion of the British electorate. Every form of radicalism in Britain until within the last year has been included under the banner of the liberal party. This loose grouping now has fallen apart, and was inevitable after the overwhelming victory at the last general election.

Movement's Rapid Spread.
The accession of the laborites was expected, but the exchange which actually has taken place has a far greater significance. Socialism pure and simple began a widespread propaganda about a year ago and its effects were first manifested in the result of yesterday's election. Its work has pretended to be political and its doctrines have been preached in churches, schoolhouse meetings, open-air assemblies, and under every possible guise and on every possible occasion.

So active have been its disciples that there now average 1500 meetings weekly throughout the country. So-called non-political organizations have been formed everywhere. There are scores of these in London alone, with membership of from 700 to 2000, which did not exist a year ago.

The leaders ignore or repudiate the mistakes of municipal ownership which caused the overwhelming defeat of the progressive party in London and other cities last Spring. These mistakes they account for by saying that they were made by amateur and impractical imitators of real socialist principles.

Name First Candidate.
Their doctrine is the simple pure article, which they easily induce the half-educated classes to believe will bring the social and political millennium. They nominated candidates for the first time in England in the local campaigns which closed yesterday, and the wonder is that they elected anybody, for though they certainly did not expect to, they actually captured six seats in various places.

They did succeed, however, in changing the whole complexion of the municipal bodies. They split in half the anti-unionist vote of the country and the result was a great unionist triumph. Though the successful unionist candidates in most cases received considerably short of a majority of the votes cast, and the emptiness of the unionist success thus becomes apparent.

It by no means follows that socialism is destined to capture England. On the contrary, the opposite prophecy is a safe one. It does signify, however, that the political situation in this country has entirely changed and socialism is to become a great national issue. The leaders of both the old parties realize this fully. Lord Balfour proclaimed it in his appeal a few weeks ago, when he called on citizens of all parties to organize to meet it.

The machinery of both the unionist and liberal parties is in a condition of demoralization and disintegration, and there is no real leadership on either side. The question of the hour is whether the leaders and the rank and file sufficiently understand the emergency to be willing to abandon old party lines and reorganize to meet the grave issue which the country must face sooner or later. There is less hope of this at the present time in conservative England than there would be in alert America. The average Englishman is not prompt to foresee political dangers, but he is more alive than usual to this emergency. No British political situation ever possessed more world-wide interest than this, and its development will command as much attention in other lands as in this.

HUNT FOR PIRATE'S GOLD

Latrobe's Treasure Object of Voyage to Caribbean Sea.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—There is a flavor of Stevenson's "Treasure Island" in the story of two Liverpool men, Captain Small and a companion, who have recently reached Bermuda in quest of a pirate's treasure, which is believed to be worth anything from a quarter of a million to a million and a half.

Intrepid voyagers that they are, they set out from the Mersey port in a little craft named the Catherine, which, though possessed of splendid sailing qualities, is only 5 1/2 feet in length, with a 15-foot beam, and is one of the smallest sailing vessels of modern times that have ever attempted the trans-Atlantic voyage from the European side.

Captain Small and his companion, who left Liverpool on June 7, arrived at Bermuda on September 18, after an exciting voyage. They reached the Azores on July 21, and after repairs started again on August 1. On August 13 a cyclone struck them, and the sea ran 25 feet high. Making for Bermuda, they were becalmed for 24 days, during which time provisions and water ran short. The two men were practically starving when they fell in with a Booth liner.

chico, was made the confidant of his patient, who told him that in 1898, when the seaman was a lad, his vessel was captured by the notorious pirate, Latrobe. Latrobe was afterwards captured and executed at Jamaica, but before his death he gave to the young sailor whom he had taken prisoner papers describing the spot where the treasure had been hidden.

Thus an old man he still retained possession of the documents, and on his death he confided to Dr. Davidson, his story.

Since that day no organized attempt has been made to recover the treasure, but now it is hoped to be possible, with the help obtained locally, to locate the treasure and bring it home.

WOMAN IN THE JUNGLES

Mrs. Mary Hall Daring Explorer in Darkest Africa.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—Miss Mary Hall, whose daring adventures through the African continent have just come from the press, is an English woman of the same dogged type as Lady Stanhope of historical memory. For a solitary woman to pursue the adventurous calling of explorer, and to make a daring "trek" from the Cape to Cairo, is no small achievement.

Her first essays in travel were made in search of health. When she recovered her strength and energy she had formed the idea of pushing her way through the wilds over the best part of the civilized world.

If 1894 she was one of the first travelers on the new railway which is popularizing the Victoria Falls, and she fell under the spell of that mysterious continent. She resolved to penetrate the wilds between the great lakes and push her way through to the Sudan alone, because of the difficulty she knew she would have in getting thoroughly congenial companionship. Of course, she had necessary guides and bearers. Thus she traveled through thousands of miles of forests, plain, river, and lake.

In remote Uganda she was surprised to find the boy King playing football, while many other indications of Western influences were in evidence.

As a marked contrast to the thorny paths of the earlier explorers of the past, Miss Hall gratefully acknowledged that from first to last she met with nothing but courtesy from native chiefs and Sultans. In fact, news that the "Jungle woman" was approaching was sufficient for the high dignitaries of the village to turn out to honor her coming.

INTERMENT AT RIVERVIEW

Funeral of Hugh Murray, Who Died October 29 at Valdez, Alaska.

Hugh Murray, who died suddenly of heart failure at Valdez, Alaska, October 29, aged 23 years 9 months and 23 days, was buried Friday afternoon at Riverview Cemetery. Services were held at Finlay's chapel, 2 P. M., being conducted by Rev. Dr. John Hayes Welch, of the Fourth Presbyterian Church.

Mr. Murray was a member of Occidental Chapter, No. 22, A. F. & A. M., of San Francisco, and the services at the cemetery were under the auspices of the Masonic order, Columbia Lodge, No. 114.

He was a native of Scotland, born at Symington, Parish of Ayrshire, January 6, 1884, and came to America 39 years ago. For several years past he had been prominently identified with commercial interests on the Pacific Coast and in Alaska. He was at one time interested with the late David Morgan in the Bay View Salmon Cannery. After disposing of his interests on the Columbia River he built and operated the Chilea cannery in Alaska, later merging with the Alaska Packers' Association of San Francisco, and for a number of years was superintendent in charge of the Pyramid Harbor cannery. During the past few years he was engaged in steamboat business at Valdez, Alaska, and owned a number of mines in the Copper River district.

Mr. Murray is survived by a widow and family living in San Francisco; also two sisters, Mrs. Chris Irving and Mrs. Jessie Holley, of Denver, and three brothers, James and Edward Murray, of Denver, and John Murray, of Fairbanks, Alaska.

MAY BE KING OF CONGO

Belgian Ruler Would Give Scepter to Son of Mistress.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—Truth's Paris correspondent reports: "Tongues are now busy with the King of the Belgians, who is believed to have left Larmoy by the grand gate a few weeks ago, to return by a more private entrance, and to be making preparations to secure the empire of Congo to an infant which is perambulating there under the eyes of the lady whom he has appointed chaperone.

"The moribund union does not exist in Belgium, and the present dynasty is too young to have formed precedents that might limit the King's choice in taking a second wife.

"Public opinion might be a check to inclination, but the Belgians have been far more passive than enthusiastic in accepting Princesses imported from abroad for their future Queens. However, there can be no doubt as to His Majesty's unlimited personal power in the Congo Free State.

"I described to you not long ago the Chateau de Larmoy and the security it affords for complete privacy. But for the quarrel between the chaperone and her chief and statements before a Judge de paix and to interview there had been no indication of the domestic felicity the chateau shelters.

Head of Corpse His Mascot.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 2.—Two men living at Kamenska, a small town in the Lyubim district, quarried a few days ago. Thereupon one of them informed the local police that his enemy had violated a grave in the Jews' cemetery last year and cut off a corpse's head, which he was treasuring in his house as a "sure means of causing his ewes to be fruitful at the lambing season.
