"THE MAN OF THE HOUR"

Famous Drama on the Graft Situation at Heilig All Next Week.

With "The Man of the Hour" coming to the Heilig theater for one week, beginning next Sunday night, January 12, with special matinees Wednesday and Saturday. It is interesting to reprint some extracts from the criticisms of the play in Chicago on May 13, 1907:

Chicago Record-Herald—Brady and Grismer's special cast covered itself with glory and was repeatedly cheered. Chicago Inter Ocean—The special cast of "The Man of the Hour" gave a performance that could not be improved upon.

Chicago Daily News—"What a splendid performance!" exclaimed everybody as the curtain fell on each act in turn. And everybody was right. When Brady and Grismer called this cast special, they used the right adjective. It was a fine performance of a great play. The advance seat sale will open next Friday for the entire engagement.

PERFECTION IN VAUDEVILLE

Pantages Management Is Booking Only Selected Acts for 1908.

Thousands have enjoyed the bill of the past week at Pantages and everyone has agreed that better vaudeville has never been put on. Pantages started the new year with a show that sets a new pace in local vaudeville and the Fourth-street house, at least, intends following the pace all the through 1908. With one of the biggest circuits in the country behind it, the management is in a position to pick and choose from the best material. And those who saw the Dooley troupe, Harrington the ventriloquist, Benth and Rodd and all the others on one programme. If you have not seen the New Year's, take the last opportunity today.

The second bill of 1908 will be another innovation in vaudeville perfection. The management has been peculiarly fortunate in the new bookings. By way of a feature, the star mimic, monologist and comedian, Tim Cronin, has been secured. There are lots of people in this line, but there is only one Tim, as the salary he draws very clearly evidences. Tim gets more by the way of salary than some bank presidents are able to earn and steal. He's worth it, too, as you're bound to agree after he has jollied you until your sides ache with laughing.

Second place is hard to bestow. All the others are second features. Those that doubtless will prove most popular are Cocca and Amato, in fancy and novelty dancing. This clever pair will put on their original turn, "The Mixer and the Maid."

Music lovers will find interest in the work of Miss Phyllis Allen, contralto. Miss Allen has a remarkable voice and as a contralto is widely known in the music world. This is her first appearance here in vaudeville.

By the way of another good act the "Veldt" trio is offered. These favorite European acrobats with their "loop-the-loop" dogs have a number of acrobatic feats to their credit that all others have failed in. Their dogs in the loop-the-loop act add zest to the turn.

Bert Page, the skating rube, has been making the vaudeville circuits take notice of him from the fact that the public likes his work immensely. It is his first time here in his skating and comedy acrobatic act.

Fred Bauer, the popular local tenor, will sing a new illustrated ballad while the exclusive motion pictures will be up to their usual standard. All in all a new week.

STAGELAND.
Fame comes to those that make money.

"Sam" Bernard is to have a New York theater named for him.

Henry Miller is to organize a stock company for San Francisco next summer, and will utilize it in "trying out" several new plays.

The rumor that Ethel Levy is to be the leading woman of Robert Edson's company which actor produces a new play called "The Sinner" is denied.

One man in Chicago, never having heard of Bret Harte, was misled by the title of "Salome Jane." "I had an idea she was a burlesque on 'Salome,'" he wrote Miss Robson last week, as an argument that the name should be changed. "In conversation with friends I found this same impression was general, and no one wants to see even a burlesque on 'Salome.' Pardon this anonymous. Some day perhaps you will say to me—as a playwright—'Say, man, what's your name?'"

Manager Henry W. Savage believes he has evolved a plan to defeat the schemes of the ticket speculators. Word comes from New York that he has devised a patent envelope in which the tickets are riveted and sealed. If the envelope is opened before it reaches the doorkeeper the holders of the seats are to be denied admission. As the speculators cannot well dispose of tickets at an exorbitant premium unless the tickets are shown, it is quite likely the new scheme will stop the nuisance.

Edgar Selwyn has literary ambitions and spends much of his time scribbling. He writes plays (acknowledges the authorship of it that have never been produced), stories and occasionally tries his hand at verse. In fact the first money he ever earned with his pen was paid him for four lines of verse that he wrote in the heyday of his courtship of Margaret Mayo. The verses:

Life is but a little story,
Functuated in the main,
With commas of our happiness
And periods of our pain.

Mr. Selwyn sent the lines to a weekly publication and was rewarded with a check for $1.50.

Mabel Talliferro has made her debut as a star in the East, appearing as the heroine of a play written for her and called "Polly of the Circus." Miss Talliferro is credited with a success, and it is also said she is determined to leave the stage after a season in New York and devote her attention to the conduct of her husband's home. She is the wife of Frederic Thompson, the man who built Luna park on Coney Island. "Polly of the Circus" is said to be dainty and interesting, telling the story of a circus girl who wanders into the home of a young minister, falls in love with him, is turned from her rough life by him and marries him. The last tableau shows the reunited lovers standing on the deserted site of the circus grounds watching the wagons disappearing across the hills.

Marie Cahill, on being interviewed in San Francisco, when she is asked what she likes to do, she said: "Before I can do anything with a host of people I've got to make them love me," she declared. "I say to myself, 'You're going to like me, and I'm going to like you; we're going to be like friends and not like enemies.' Then I go to work, and unless the lights go out, or the orchestra turns to brass, or the stage carpenters drop hammers and saws, I don't mind you, that isn't conceit, because I claim that God gave me the best of brains, heart, and I know it is a rare and beautiful gift. I have taken care of it, have kept it free from misery, and I have kept it free from worry. I have kept it free from worry. That's the only thing I worry about, in fact. Sometimes I worry for fear my keeping something away from me to keep me from worrying. Can you follow that?"

A New York newspaper tried diligently to pin several more or less prominent people to a statement of how they would spend the time if they had but one week to live. Florence Reed, who was E. H. Sothern's leading woman when that actor was here, but has since then been succeeded by Miss Virginia Hammond, of Chicago, contributed this effort: "I would show the 'Real Struggle of the Weak,' I would 'Put My House in Order,' say farewell to 'The Hypocrites,' make my will, tell my heirs to look out for 'The Thief,' see my 'Classmates,' assure them that my 'Struggle Everlasting' was over, that 'The Girl From the Golden West' was going to reform her 'Master Builder' when she had crossed 'The Great Divide.'"

When Francis Wilson is ready to quit fooling with farce he hopes to become a playwright. He already has several manuscripts in his trunk and has recently finished a play called "The Magic Ring," in which Nat Goodwin is said to be interested. Goodwin also has a new play written by George Broadhurst, called "The Easterner," with the scene laid in California.
