WASHINGTON Jan. 11—Harlan H. Page, Jr., of the United States Department of War, announced today that the United States government is preparing to send a large body of troops to the Philippines. The move is due to the increase in hostilities between the white and yellow races in that country. The troops will be used to suppress the rebellion of the yellow race, which has been growing in strength for some time.

Page said that the United States government is aware of the seriousness of the situation and is taking all necessary precautions to ensure the safety of its citizens. He warned that the situation could become much worse if action is not taken immediately.

Page also announced that the United States government is considering sending additional troops to the Philippines to reinforce the existing forces.
