Alinsworth, who christened the Oregon.

A novel form of entertaining was offered on Wednesday by Mrs. Richard Nunn, who entertained for Bishop and Mrs. Charles Scadding. At 4 the ten matrons arrived for bridge and tea and at that hour the men joining them at that hour. The affair was delightfully informal, it taking the form of a buffet supper, served at table-tete tables. For the nonce the maids were disposed of and the men assisted in serving. The latter part of the evening was devoted to bridge. Besides Bishop and Mrs. Scadding the guests were Mr. and Mrs. William MacMaster, Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Meares, Mr. and Mrs. E. T. C. Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. James Caldwell, Dr. and Mrs. S. R. Johnson, Dr. and Mrs. Geo. Whitehead, Mrs. Trevett, Miss Trevett, Miss May Failing, W. H. Nunn and August Berg.

One of the prettiest cotillions of the winter was given on Saturday of last week by Mr. and Mrs. Adolphe Wolfe in honor of their daughter, Miss Florence Wolfe, who made her formal debut this past year. The ballroom on the upper floor was metamorphosed into a Japanese scene and was extremely effective. Huge umbrellas were suspended from the ceiling and garlands of dainty pink cherry blossoms interspersed with vari-colored lanterns. Bamboo divans had tete-tete seats were arranged at intervals, and picturesque beaded screens and Japanese posters adorned the walls. Adding to the realism Japanese servants in costumes served. Parsona orchestra furnished the music. The color scheme for the dining-room was red. The table, in the shape of a horse, was massed with smilax in which were bedded brilliant carnations of red and from which shone the same brightly hued incandescent lights. The entire table was strewn with fragrant Parma violets. Mrs. Wolfe received in a princely costume of ebony lace, wearing a handsome diamond spray on the corsage and lavender visteria in her corsage. Miss Wolfe wore her debutante gown of white tulle with Napoleonic wreaths of white buds. Favors were Japanese parasols, colored lanterns, canes, fans, boutonnières, garlands of flowers, toy guns and Teddy bears. Distributing the favors were Mrs. Max Hirsch and Mrs. I. N. Lipman.
