

large chorus of beautiful girls is employed. There are also to be introduced several high-class vaudeville acts, among them being that of the Donzetta family, noted European acrobats; a novelty costume singing act by Pierce and Roslyn. The dramatic cast includes J. Edward Pierce, William G. Welp, Ralph Gordon, Paul Bell, Al Lang, Charles Porteous, Frank Denmore, Arthur Van Court, Hazel Edna, Marie Roslyn, Lillian Newcombe, Adelaide Spencer, Bessie Browning, Estelle Gould, Freda Knott, Lillian Dean, Frances Wright.

"ZIRA" NEXT WEEK'S BILL The Baker Company Will Present This Powerful Play.

A beautiful production of "Zira," Henry Miller's adaptation of Wilde's Collins' famous story of "The New Magdalen," next week, opening Sunday matinee, March 15. Florence Roberts played it during her last visit to this city, and it created a sensation among all lovers of the powerful and intense form of drama. The role of Zira is one that requires a star or leading woman of rare temperament and ability to play, and the one for which Stoddard, of the Baker company, is peculiarly well fitted.

Creston Clarke to Appear. Creston Clarke, than whom there is no more popular actor upon the vaunting list of the larger cities of the country, is appearing this season in a new three-act drama of American life in Mexico, called "The Power That Governs." The piece is from the pen of Adelaide Prince, and in the opinion of the star and his manager, Julius Murry, he has never before been given so congenial a vehicle for his unusual talents. At the Marquam Grand soon.

"Sis in New York" Coming. "Sis in New York" is the title of the offering which comes to the Empire next week, starting Sunday matinee, March 15, and it reveals the merry Hoosier lass in a new role. A visit to the great metropolis permits of many chances for fun.

If there is one kind of vaudeville specialty that the children appreciate more than another it is an animal act. The Grand will offer this week, commencing tomorrow afternoon, one of the best of these acts, when Carlisle's dog and pony circus comes. This act introduces Tom, the world-famous talking donkey. Sullivan & Conditine have this act under contract and are paying an enormous salary, but the act in itself is also in the top-notch class for entertainment is Howe and Edwards. They have a comedy sketch called "The Arrival of Mr. Dooley" and it is a "quail," laughable comedy. The humor is appreciated everywhere and Howe and Edwards have in their sketch some lines and jokes which are the essence of Celtic wit and humor. The attraction on the new programme will be the Stadium Trio. This is a ring act and it has a reputation as wide as the continent. The Stadium Trio has played all the best vaudeville houses in the country.

Kaufman Brothers take a dip into grand opera, only instead of making it serious, they burlesque it. They are excellent singers, have appeared in several noted musical organizations and in addition to being able to sing, they can also manufacture mirth. The Two Dots, a mother and her daughter, have a head-to-head balancing specialty. This act was seen here many months ago and made a most favorable impression with the Grand audience. Since then the act has been a success in the East.

CROWDS SEE GOOD SHOW Pantages Coming to Stand for the Best in Vaudeville.

Pantages patronage is steadily increasing and nearly every performance for several weeks past has been to capacity houses. The theater-going public is coming to understand that Pantages is the name that represents real values in vaudeville and that good acts may be expected week after week. Pantages insists on having the best, no matter what it costs. For example, the famous actor, Melbourne McDowell, in a dramatic sketch has been signed up to appear next week, and other noted stars are being negotiated with.

Symon and the half-dozen other successful performers have been going bright. The Florence troupe will be remembered by Pantages' patrons as the most remarkable performers that ever appeared here. They will introduce a number of new sensational feats on the occasion of their second appearance. They are far and away the best acrobats in the world today.

Marion and Pearl have made good in the big Eastern cities with a talking acrobatic comedy act, which is replete with new turns and lively fun. Arthur Houston, the comedy juggler, is likewise a clever man in his line, and stands on the top rung in the comedy juggling business. Houston does many feats which no one has been able to imitate. Polk and Collins, singers and dancers, will appear here for the first time. They have been playing the Western vaudeville circuit with considerable success. Jean Wilson will sing a new illustrated song, and the biograph will spin off the latest thing in the moving picture line. When you see the moving pictures at Pantages you see them for the first time.

Portland Symphony Orchestra Will Give Concert Series Under the Direction of Charles Dierke

AMONG the important attractions of a busy musical season comes the announcement of the reorganization, on new basis, of the Portland Symphony Orchestra, composed of 45 of this city's best instrumental musicians, under the direction of Charles Dierke, well-known in musical circles. The concerts will only extend over a short season this year, the first occurring March 23 and one each in April and May. The soloist at one of these concerts will be Mrs. Beatrice Dierke, pianist.

Sweetbreads Are Luxuries, but They Help to Round Out a Menu

Lillian Tingle Also Writes on the Preparation of Brains, and Calves', Sheep's or Pig's Heads for the Table. SWEETBREADS at local prices must decidedly be classed among the luxuries and can hardly claim a place in an article supposed to deal with "Economy in the Household"; but I may perhaps be allowed to mention in passing that they are good baked, roasted, stewed, fried or broiled, and make a delicate salad, either alone with lettuce or in combination with grapefruit or with tomato and cucumber. A combination of pineapple, plum and sweetbread has been recommended to me, but I cannot speak of it from personal experience.

water which should be changed once or twice) for about two hours, then put into boiling salted water, with little lemon juice, and simmered five to ten minutes, according to size, until they are just firm but by no means hard. On reaching this point they are dropped into cold water for 10 or 15 minutes. This process is called blanching. The sweetbreads should then be dried, trimmed and pressed between plates until cold. Then finish them off in any of the ways suggested above or serve in timbales or patty cases with some choice sauce.

Several famous sweetbread dishes can be initiated, with moderate success, by the use of brains—both your own and those that can be bought at the meat market. The latter are usually inexpensive. They must be soaked and blanched before use, just like sweetbreads, and care must be exercised in picking away all the stringy fibrous part of them. Here are some suggestions for further treatment: (1) Dry the prepared brains and lay them on slices of bacon in a deep frying pan or shallow stew pan, cover with stock. Add half an onion (if liked) and a tiny piece of thin-cut lemon rind. Simmer until the bacon is cooked. Thicken the liquor, add final seasoning (pepper, salt, cayenne, dash of lemon juice) and serve garnished with toast or fried bread. The flavoring of the stock can of course be considerably varied by the use of celery, herbs or mushrooms, and beaten egg yolk or cream can be used in thickening where a rich dish is desired, but of course with such additions the dish is not exactly an economical one. (2) Brush the prepared brains with oil, then roll in highly seasoned sifted bread crumbs. Place on slices of bacon and bake in the oven, basting with the bacon fat and browned butter. Serve on a bed of browned mashed potatoes, and accompany with a rather acid or piquant sauce. Or serve on toast with the sauce poured over. (3) Mince and mash up the prepared brains, adding egg yolk and a few fine bread crumbs to make a croquette mixture. Fry chopped parsley (or sage if liked), with a dash of grated orange or lemon rind, white pepper, mace or nutmeg, and cayenne are suitable seasonings. This onion juice can be omitted if approved. The mixing bowl can be rubbed over with a cut clove of garlic. This mixture may be fried in little cakes or egg-and-crumbed and fried as croquettes or used as a filling for potato croquettes. It is sometimes ried in tiny balls the size of a marble, and used for garnishing soups and other dishes.

(4) A white sauce for lamb's tongues is sometimes made from minced prepared brains, with cream thickening, and the usual plain cream sauce seasonings, or the addition of a little sherry. Another, similarly made brain sauce has a little tomato pulp added and is served with macaroni or Italian pastes, accompanied with Parmesan or other dry grated cheese.

A calf's head, says an old authority, "is one of the most useful and convenient items in the way of butcher's meat that a housewife can deal with. It is as more for soups, both hot and cold, in which it may be dressed and redressed." And since France is supposed to lead in matters of dressing, you may like to know a French recipe for "calf's head galantine," which, its maker says, is a suitable cold dish for luncheon or supper.

coyer with thin-cut slices of fried ham or bacon, hard-boiled sliced eggs and a little forcemeat (with chopped mushrooms, olives, truffles, pistachio nuts "and such small deer" to the extent permitted by the state of your pocket-book) and roll up the head as tightly and neatly as possible in a acidified cloth. Tie up with tape and boil gently in stock or water for three or four hours, according to size. Take up, re-roll in the cloth (which will be loose, owing to the shrinkage of the meat), tie, and place under a board with a weight on top until cold. Then trim, glaze and garnish with moist jelly, sliced lemon and sprigs of parsley.

EVENING DRESS TOO PLAIN

Silks and Satins Made Compulsory in Brunswick.

BERLIN, March 7.—(Special).—In the Duchy of Brunswick, which has only recently recovered from the turmoil caused by the shattering of the dynastic pretensions of the Duke of Cumberland, there is walling and gnashing of teeth over the revolutionary "clothes policy" of the new regent, Duke Johann Albrecht. The Duke, who is fresh from Mecklenburg-Schwerin, where they seem to do things their better, finds the court attire of the burghers of Brunswick too simple. His Royal Highness has accordingly banned plain evening dress for men at court, and the Duke's latest edicts command the shaving off of the Court Chaplain's cherished mustache.

The Emperor is organizing a brilliant pilgrimage to Vienna. He will lead it himself, and the company will include all the reigning sovereigns of the German Federal States. Their mission is to greet the Emperor Francis Joseph next December on the occasion of his diamond jubilee.

BILL BAD FOR BUSINESS

German Merchants Protest Over Policy Toward Poland.

BERLIN, March 7.—(Special).—Even among the loyal German inhabitants of the province of Posen the Polish expropriation is exciting lively apprehensions and marked hostility. The large German landed proprietors are circulating a petition against the measure for presentation to the Upper House. The German shopkeepers in the town of Posen are obtaining signatures for an address to the Burgomaster. The address says: "The strained situation in our province has already produced an unfavorable effect upon trade. We who are actively engaged in business see in the expropriation bill an immense danger, which would more or less unfavorably affect every German who is engaged in trade in our province."

Daizel Brown's Trial Set.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 7.—The trial of J. Daizel Brown, indicted on the charge of embezzlement in connection with the failure of the California Safe Deposit & Trust Company for about $5,000,000, of which institution he was the general manager, was today set by Superior Judge Dunn for trial on March 22. The case of Walter J. Barnhart, formerly vice-president of the same bank, and ex-vice-president and general counsel for the Western Pacific Railway, indicted on similar charges, was continued until March 23, to be set for trial. Both men have been confined in the county jail since their arrest, neither of them being able to furnish the necessary bail.
