EXPLAIN NEEDS OF UNIVERSITY

Eaton and Alderman Present Argument Why Appropriation Should Carry.

DEBATE AT BROWNSVILLE

Referendum Supporters Fail to Show Up, and Discussion Becomes General—Superintendent Gibson Makes an Able Address.

BROWNSVILLE, Or., March 21.—(Special.)—Opponents of the University appropriation, after accepting a challenge for a debate on the Linn County Grange referendum, failed to put in their appearance, and the recent meeting at the Opera-House was thrown into an open discussion of the merits of the State University appropriation.

Superintendent Gibson, of the Brownsville public schools, led the discussion. The other speakers were L. R. Alderman, formerly of the Brownsville schools, but now City Superintendent at Eugene, and Allen Eaton, State Representative from Lane County.

The discussion was opened by Superintendent Gibson, who said that aside from the indispensable work which the University of Oregon is doing as the head of the public school system of the state, the effect that an adverse vote on the bill would have on property interests and prospective immigration was so important a matter that no man, be his interests ever so small, could afford to see the bill defeated. From a commercial standpoint alone, an adverse vote would cost the state irreparable loss. But the work of the university as a part of and the head of the public school system could not be crippled without affecting very materially the public and high schools. Mr. Gibson said he knew that something like 65 per cent of the young men now attending the State University were either wholly or partially making their own way, and many of them could not get these advantages if Oregon did not support her university. Immigration from other states, of the best stamp, will be turned to other states just in proportion as Oregon neglects her educational institutions.

Needs of the University.

Mr. Eaton said that the argument on the university bill resolved itself into two primary considerations:

"First—Does the university need this amount of money to adequately maintain the institution? If it is not needed the bill should be overwhelmingly defeated. But if it does, the only thing that should stand in the way is the inability of the people to pay it. The needs of the university were best known to those who have it in charge, but Mr. Eaton said some of those that any visitor would recognize indicated something of the situation in all quarters. The new library building can be used only in the day time because the university has no money with which to install lights, although the building is wired; the small girls' dormitory is unoccupied because the heating central plant is taxed to its limit and there is no money to spend for stoves.

"The university pays $500 rental annually for the splendid Condon geological collection, which is useless now because the university cannot employ an instructor in that department, and the neighboring states are trying hard to secure this great museum for themselves. Some classes have to be held in three different buildings because there is no adequate room or no chairs for their accommodation. The fire protection for the university buildings is entirely inadequate, as there is no money with which to buy another pump, and this places $125,000 in buildings alone at the mercy of a conflagration upon which the state carries no insurance. Instructors are serving on three-quarters pay, which means that if continued, the best ones will go to other states, where they can make a living. These are a few of the conditions.

Tax 9 Cents on the Thousand.

"If the university needs the money, can the people afford to raise it? Oregon gives less to the support of her university than is given by any other state in the union, yet there are nine states with less population and ten with less assessable wealth. The amount of increase in taxes in order to raise the sum asked for will be, to the man who pays on $1000 worth of property, about 9 cents, to him who pays on $500 worth of property about 4½ cents. Of all the states in the West which support state universities and agricultural colleges, separately as we do, the mill tax levy which would be required of Oregon to raise the amount called for in this bill, would be less than that paid by any other state."

Superintendent Alderman showed how the University of Oregon had developed the high-school system of the state. He made plain the functions of a state university, telling of the work it had done for the state and the very important work which it has undertaken and will carry out with adequate support. He pointed to the work done for the people by the University of Wisconsin, a state now which does not have to levy a state tax because under the leadership and co-operation of the state university a tax system has been adopted by which the great bulk of taxes paid to the state comes from corporations. Mr. Alderman pointed out that the best system of public schools was in those states which supported best their state universities. In a state like Oregon, where legislation is placed in the hands of the people, it is highly important that the state do its share in securing the best educational opportunities for the young men and women who are to be its citizens. Why should not the boys and girls of Oregon have equal opportunities with those of other states?

Don't Know What They Talk About.

Mr. Alderman then took up the arguments which the opponents of the university have made, showing that the facts had in a number of instances been misstated. The claim made by the leaders of the opposition that they were friends of the university was denied by Alderman, who said that when asked in public debate how much money they would give the university they stated $90,000 or $95,000, but when asked why that amount they were unable to give an answer, never having visited the university or looked into its needs.

"The people who are opposing this measure," asserted Mr. Alderman, "are the people who oppose the taxes required for the support of the public schools. Since this referendum was brought up, I have met scores of men, with whom I had been acquainted, and invariably those who are fighting this measure are men who would not vote a quarter-mill tax to patch the roof of the schoolhouses in their communities."

He closed his talk with an appeal for equal opportunities for the boys and girls of Oregon with those of other states.

The sentiment in Brownsville is strongly for the proper support of the State University. This town has tried to maintain a high standard in its public schools, and its high school and seems to feel that it is not economy to half support the State University.

GOES AFTER REDUCED RATES

M. A. Carter Announces Candidacy for Railroad Commissioner.

SALEM, March 21.—(Special.)—The First Congressional District now has two candidates for Republican nomination for Railroad Commissioner. W. A. Carter, of Salem, today entered the race and will compete with the present incumbent, T. K. Campbell, for the place on the ticket. While there have been six candidates for the Commissionership in the Second District, Mr. Campbell has been congratulating himself on having no opponent. Mr. Carter has had the matter under consideration for several days and decided today to make the race for nomination. He was, until two months ago, a resident of Gold Hill, Jackson County, where he engaged in mining and merchandising. He is now a merchant in Salem and still has mining interests at Gold Hill. He was a member of the Oregon House of Representatives in 1901. He will make his campaign chiefly upon the proposition that existing freight rates are unjustly discriminative as between commodities and that interior cities should be given the same terminal rates as Portland, so as to allow them to do a distributing business.

Mr. Campbell was formerly a sawmill proprietor at Cottage Grove, but sold his business when appointed a member of the Railroad Commission, so that he would have no special private interests that could be affected by his acts as a Commissioner.

PRESIDENT ABERDEEN CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

W. J. Patterson.

ABERDEEN, Wash., March 21.—(Special.)—W. J. Patterson, who has been elected president of the Aberdeen Chamber of Commerce, is manager of the Hayes & Hayes Bank, a stockholder in the Raymond Bank, a member of the Masons, the Elks and other organizations. He promises to make the Chamber of Commerce more than ordinarily successful the coming year. The organization, at its annual meeting, decided to reduce the salary of the secretary from $2000 a year to $1200, and to give more attention to the social side of the chamber. Mr. Patterson, in his speech, declared that he must have complete co-operation in his work and, without co-operation, he would not undertake to serve. He is one of the foremost young business men in Chehalis County.

MAKES GOOD LOSS BY WATER

Farmer Who Dilutes Milk for College Boys Gives Cash Settlement.

SPOKANE, Wash., March 21.—(Special.)—Because he watered the milk furnished to college boys in the dormitory of the Washington State College at Pullman, Wash., C. Battenberg, who leases the dairy farm of President E. A. Bryan of the college, has been intercepted by L. W. Hanson, a deputy state dairy inspector, and in order amicably to settle the difficulty out of court, has made restitution to the varsity lads in the sum of $75, which the young mathematicians figure is the worth of milk whose place had been substituted by water. President Bryan says that Battenberg is a Hollander, who has been a resident of America for but three years, and committed no malicious wrong. Battenberg believed that if the milk tested as high as the legal butter-fat standard he would be immune from punishment for dilution. President Bryan had no knowledge of the affair, stating that the man had leased the ranch and has sole control over it, owns his own appliances and manages the farm individually.

The investigation occurred last month, but the facts were not made public until today.

ALBANY'S LIST NOW $7000

Advertising Fund Increases—City May Secure $100,000 Sawmill.

ALBANY, Or., March 21.—(Special.)—The campaign inaugurated at the "get-together" banquet last night for "A Greater Albany" is growing in volume today. The committee which arranged the banquet has made no further efforts today to increase the subscriptions for the publicity campaign, but voluntary subscriptions from men who were not at the meeting last evening have raised the total of subscriptions for the first year's work to almost $7000.

Not only is an epoch-marking and unprecedented advertising campaign to result from last evening's banquet, but the city may secure a $100,000 sawmill from it. When J. K. Weatherford, a prominent local attorney, arose at the banquet to make his subscription to the publicity fund, he announced he would give $500 toward the building of a sawmill in Albany, if epough other local men would subscribe enough to build a $100,000 plant. D. W. Merrill, of E. T. Merrill & Son, timber buyers, said his firm would equal Mr. Weatherford's subscription, and M. J. Cameron, another timberman, offered to take the same amount of stock in such an enterprise. As soon as the commercial organization is effected the advancement of this proposition will be one of its first objects.

Form Lodge at White Salmon.

WHITE SALMON, Wash., March 21.—(Special.)—The Woodmen of the World society organized a camp of 26 members at this place Wednesday evening. Representatives from Portland and a large delegation from Hood River assisted in the organization. The camp is known as Camp Mount Adams. It starts out with a good prospect for growth.

DRIVING PILES IN PUYALLUP

Tacoma Company Begins Work of Dredging the River.

TACOMA, March 21.—Work of bulkheading and dredging the Puyallup River, the contract for which was awarded to the Tacoma Dredging Company, has begun. A piledriver is at work placing the first of the 8000 piles which will be used.

The tug Sea Lion towed the American ship St. Paul to Quartermaster to drydock and then left out, towing the British bark Sussex, which has lumber for the United Kingdom.

The British ship Segura has finished loading wheat, and with the British bark Engelhorn, also wheat laden, proceeds to sea next week.

The United States lighthouse tender Heather, is in drydock at Quartermaster.

The tender Armeria was in port last night, proceeding down the Sound today.

The German steamer Wangard left out for Seattle this afternoon to continue loading flour for North China.

The United States cable steamer Burnside, which has been repairing boilers this week, will coal tomorrow and leave out Monday, under hurry orders to repair a break in the cable between Sitka and Valdez.

Wheat clearances for the week were 23,836 bushels for Yokohama and flour clearances were 335,570 sacks for the Orient. In addition, 30,136 sacks of feedstuffs were cleared for the Hawaiian Islands. Foreign clearances of lumber for the week were 2,152,585 feet.

NEED BETTER PRUNE PACKS

Oregon Growers Lose Money by Careless Shipping Methods.

SALEM, Or., March 21.—(Special.)—At its meeting today, the Marion County Horticultural Society discussed methods of preventing the marketing of dried prunes that have not been cured and packed so they will keep. It was agreed that the rejection of mouldy prunes in New York during the last few months has very seriously injured the reputation of Oregon fruit, and that measures must be adopted to prevent a repetition of the experience. At the April meeting this will be the special subject and in all probability the next Legislature will be asked to make it the duty of County Fruit Inspectors to see that prunes are properly prepared for market before shipment.

Enos Presnall, a Salem fruit-grower who recently made a tour of the East studying markets, told of buying Oregon Royal Anne cherries in bottles and boxes bearing Eastern brands, the bottled or candied cherries bringing 50 cents for a quality which brought the grower 5 cents or less.
