Wonder What to Do With Money.

What to do with the remnant of the funds received from the management of the Lewis and Clark Fair is agitating the directors. About $5500, which is the last of the exposition fund, remains to be disbursed. A portion of this sum will be used to pay for memorial plates to be placed in honor of H. W. Corbett and H. W. Goode, both presidents of the Exposition, in recognition of their service. The suggestion has been made that the remaining funds be used to erect a drinking fountain in commemoration of Lewis and Clark. Whether this will be done, or the sum distributed among the stockholders remains to be decided.

Depends Upon the Hotel.

Atchison Globe.

Go out on a desert island without even a letter from home, and you will not be as lonesome as an old man seems when boarding at a hotel.

Our reputation for underselling all competition has long been established. We sell for cash only and need no bookkeepers, no bad-bill collectors and we never have any bad accounts. No banker could come into our establishment and get one dollar's worth of goods on credit. Plutocrats are usually poor pay and we don't propose to let honest people pay the bills for that class.
