Larger Eastern Railroads Will Fight Interstate Commission in the Courts.

DEMAND LIBERAL POLICY

Assert That Order to Charge Off Fixed Percentage for Deterioration Will Reduce Dividends. Wabash President Testifies.

WASHINGTON, May 23 .- (Special.)several of the larger Eastern railroads have decided, if necessary, to contest in the courts several provisions of the new accounting system, which has been prescribed by the interstate Commerce Commission. The leadership in the Commission. The leadership in the contest against some of Professor Adams pet accounting methods has been assumed by L. F. Loree, president of the Delaware & Hudson Road. Yesterflay and today were devoted by the Commission to hearing what some of the foremost railway men of the country had to say with respect to the alleged objectionable features of "railway accounting up to date" as worked. accounting up to date" as worked by the theorist of the Commission.

Among the witnesses was Frederic Delano, president of the Wabash A. Delano, president of the Road, who insisted that depreciation on Proceedings of the Control o American railroads practically took care of itself, or was taken care of by pet methods to the best interest of the property and of the stockholders. The situation was put forcibly by Mr. Delano, who said:

Puts Situation Forcibly.

"It is certainly to the interest of the community as a whole that railway corporations shall be managed conservatively and that their securities, so far as shall be free from wide fluctuations. To include in operating expeness a charge for depreciation equally great in bad times and in good-would mean reduced dividends in most cases and bankruptcy in many."

In explanation it might be stated that the Commission has ordered the rail-In explanation it might be stated that the Commission has ordered the railroads to icharge off a fixed percentage, presumably no less than 6 per cent annually, for depreciation of equipment. This includes locomotives, cars, worktrain equipment and tools. The purpose of the Commission in requiring this was to provide a means whereby the investor and prospective stockholder could ascertain how the property is being treated or taken care of. It was also in the mind of the Commission to prevent further padding of the item account called "operating expenses." Notoriously, in the past, have certain railroads padded their accounts and thus roads padded their accounts and thus covered up the true condition of the property, as well as the true financial condition of railroads employing this mathod.

Pleads for Liberality.

Mr. Delane admitted that in certain parts of the country it might be to the interest of the country it might be to the interest of the railroads to pad their accounts and in others to make it appear that operating expenses were lower than they were in reality. Despite this fact, he pleaded with the Commission to treat the subject in its broader significance, and in its probable effect upon commercial America. If, he stated, a fixed monthly charge for depreciation is required it will drive the railroads in time of depression to make reductions in expenditures sufficient to counteract the newly imposed charge, which would be a very unfortunate and undesirable result.

The attention of the Commission was called to the fact that the capitalization of American railroads is less than it was 30 years ago, which is evidence that the railroads have charged "betterments" and "improvements" operating expenses and to income ac

Methodists Hold Tenth Ballot, but Withhold Result-Hingeley Loses Heavily-Goodell Will Talk Cut Openly in Church.

BALTIMORE, May 23.-The epitomized story of the Episcopal election of the Methodist Episcopal general conference is one effective ballot, electing two bishops of the eight new ones ordered, eight ballots that have been without result and the tenth cast and the ballot slips scaled, uncounted and not to be unscaled until Monday. Hence there can be nothing more tangible than speculation as to that the tenth ballot will show.

There are those who, however, judging by his steady advance, believe that there will be announced on Monday morning the election of Rev. W. A. Quayle, of Chicago, and that the election of Rev. Edwin H. Hughes, president of DePauw University, will speedily follow. There are those, too, who look for the election of Rev. Wilson S. Lewis, president of Morningside College, when the result of the tenth ballot is made known.

the tenth ballot is made known.

Perhaps the surprise of the day was the falling off in the vote of Rev. Jos B. Hingeley, secretary of the conference, who between the eighth and ninth ballots lost 53 of his followers, because, it is said, of the receipt by a number of the delegates of telegrams from a resident of Minneapolis expressing amazement at the prominence Mr. Hingeley had attained in the voting.

STRIKES RESPONSIVE CHORD

President Warmly Approves Bishop Cranston's Washington Speech.

BY D. L. RADER, EDITOR PACIFIC CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. BALTIMORE, Md., May 23.—Special Correspondence.)—Whatever may be said for or against the Methodist Epissaid for or against the Methodist Episcopal Church, it surely never can be truthfully charged that it lacks in patriotism or falls in any measure to appreciate any recognition it ever receives from those in authority, or from great officials of the country. It was a great privilege this General Conference enjoyed in visiting Washington, on Saturday, May 16. The members, newspaper reporters and friends, numbering in all about 2000, were taken over from Baltimore on two immense trains, one each on the Baltimore & Ohlo and Pennsylvania Roads. Though the cars were greatly crowded, it was Onlo and Pennsylvania Roads. Though the cars were greatly crowded, it was a happy crowd that sung their way from Baltimore through to Washington. On their way from the station on the streetcars people stood along the street, listening as the excursionists sang the old Methodist hymns.

KANSAS CITY, May 23.—"Christianity is not exclusively but essentially masculine. The Redeemer of mankind was a man. The Bible is essentially, though not exclusively, masculine. I maintain that the evangelization of the world is the work of man. Every man who starts as the sang the old Methodist hymns. The occasion which took them was a reception given by President Roosevelt, at the American University. This is a Methodist institution and it was a dream of Bishop Hurst, who died several years ago, though the dream began to take definite form about ten exclusively, masculine. I maintain that the evangelization of the world is the work of man. Every man who starts on a downward course is led by men; men who are to be raised to a higher life must be led by men. I want to see men represent the spiritual power of the churches. The present conditions, which show an average of only 40 men members in every congregation of 200, must be changed. It is the purpose of the Presbyterian Brotherhood to make the men the active workers of the churches and such a result will be realized."

In this vein Rev. Dr. Landrith, of the Belmont Female college, of Nashville, made a powerful plea in support of the Presbyterian Brotherhood at today's session of the general assembly of the Pression of the general assembly of the Pression of the most eloquent and fitting the course of the course of the most eloquent and fitting the course of the charman of the day, the Rev. to the work of the ministry in West Virginia. Mr. Dolliver is exceedingly proud of his ancestry, and declared in an address of welcoming the general conference to Maryland that the proudest possession of the family to which he belonged and one that he would not exchange for any crown ever worn by any King, is a pair of saddle-bags used by his father when he traveled the large circuits in his conference in the early years of his ministry. This was the man who spoke for the laymen following the address of President Rocaevelt. As Mr. Dolliver proceeded with his superb address, a number of voices yelled, "You are great Presidental timber," and as he concluded many were the cries. "The next President, the next President."

From some things which have appeared in the report of this convention it may have been concluded that the spiritual power and religious influence of the Methodist Episcopal Church were declining, but to any one who is on the ground this will appear as the pimples on a healthy youth's face, not desirable but in no way dangerous to the existence of the body. There are many undesirable features, to be sure, connected with individuals composing this great gathering, but the heart of the mass is true to the Evangel, and the purpose of this body is not self-glorification, but the salvation of the world, and the fulfilling of its mission to the highest possible degree of efficiency. The second Sunday of the general conference was probably the greatest day that Baitmore ever saw, in religious fervor and evangelistic urgency.

The great questions which are absorbing the attention of the General Conference in the committees are as to the number of bishops to be elected, who of the bishops shall be retired, and why, and what Episcopal residence shall be selected for the coming four years. So far as now appears, Bishop Moore will probably return to Portland; Bishop Thoburn, having been retired, will rest the remainder of his days, and enjoy the comforts and blessings of his home with his daughter-in-law and his two children and his grandchildren in Portland. This will be welcome news to the Methodist people of Portland, as he is exceedingly popular there.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 23—(Special.)—Admiral Evans, in an interview with W. S. Meriwether, today, told of the results of the cruise of the Pacific and its benefits and the future policy and prospects of the American Navy.

"What, in your opinion," he was asked, "is the most vital question affecting the Navy today?"

"The shortage of officers and men, particularly officers," Admiral Evans replied. "We have not a battleship in commission today with a sufficient number of officers properly to look out for her battery. Those we have are excellent, but they are so overworked that they are giving way under the strain. Men 'can they are so overworked that they are giving way under the strain. church the battle over the amusement question still rages; the contention for the most part is good-humored and Christian, though occasionally a brother loses his temper and speaks harshly of his opponents. The other committees are engaged with unimportant affairs, passing on memorials and considering propositions looking toward changes in the discipline; nearly all of these will be refused, but reported back to the General Conference as having been considered and rejected.

The outlook today is that the Pacific Christian Advocate will be continued at Portland, with the same financial help rejected.

The outlook today is that the Pacific Christian Advocate will be continued at Portland, with the same financial help that it has had during the past quadrennium, with a possible increase. Though it has not yet come before the General Conference, the treatment given the Advocate, a journal of Chattanooga, is the ground upon which this judgment is based. That paper last quadrennium was allowed $1000 aid per annum from the Book Concern, the General Conference has just given it $2000 a year and the white paper. This is such an increase that it is expected that the Pacific Christian Advocate will be supported so liberally that it will be able to maintain a higher degree of efficiency than it has ever attained before.

There were many propositions coming up from various quarters of the church asking that some limit be fixed for the service of the pastor in any given church. There is a proposition, which will probably not prevail, now before the committee on episcopacy, to make the term of office for bishops 12 years; this was inone-third of the men untrained and arrived at the Pacific entrance to the Straits of Magellan and Magdalena Bay absolutely in condition to go into an engagement."

BALTIMORE, Md., May 23.—(Special.)—

Is no more helpless on a stormy sea than any young man without a couple of tailor-made suits, in modern commercial affairs. A suit of clothes is a lot more than something to keep a man from cold and wet; something more than a place to carry handkerchiefs and pocketknives. A suit of clothes is the right of way over which a business man travels to accomplish the things he has undertaken. The modern business man believes in well-selected, well-fitted, well-tailored clothes. If he did not regard a tailor-made suit an adjunct to his business and social affairs he would become did-in homespuns. To make up your mind that it is proper and best to wear tailored clothes is not all. It is equally important that you should exercise some judgment in selecting a tailor. Columbia Tailors have done more to create reputation for the costuming of Portland men than all other tailors combined. This is due to liberal buying of upto-date patterns, colors, weaves and weights. None better in Portland. The skill of Columbia Tailors speaks for itself.
