

FASHION'S FADS FOR THE FAIR AMATEUR GARDENER

Old-Time Pink Sunbonnet Still Retains Its Popularity as a Preserver of the Dainty Complexion—Usefulness of Sweater Coat Past Dispute.

THE Springtime impulse to plant something and watch it grow is, just at this time, calling with its strongest appeal to every Portlander who can boast a patch of ground large enough to hold a little row of seeds, or the roots of a tiny shrub in. From the windows of any streetcar, on any line, one may see the planters busy in back yard or rose garden, working away as busily and energetically as if life depended upon their efforts, and among the wielders of trowel, pruning shears, spade and garden rake all ages are represented—from the snow-haired, be-spectacled grandma, and stoop-shouldered grandpa, down to the tiny tot in "rompers," who turns the earth with a toy spade and digs up his seeds hourly to see if they have begun to sprout.

All classes of society, too, are at it, and the pink sun-bonnet of the young matron who presides over the humbly suburban cottage, and who is assisted by a coterie of tumbling, tousel youngsters, hobs about in her garden patch just as joyously as does the picturesque big-hat of midday of the aristocratic home on the Heights, busily pruning her choice rose bushes, or training her favorite clematis over trellis or Summer-house in her spacious grounds.

The costumes worn by the gardeners are diverse, but The Oregonian's camera man has endeavored to secure pictures of a few of the most popular items of feminine gardening apparel, the accompanying illustrations being the result.

An attractive and picturesque figure, familiar in the suburban flower and vegetable gardens of the city, is that shown in No. 1, which shows an energetic gardener in a saucy pink sun-bonnet and a great apron of checked gingham, which envelope her from shoulder to hem and has spacious pockets, from which peep the corners of little seed envelopes, hectorically ornamented with enticing pictures in color, of the future glories awaiting the industrious person who will plant the contents. The sun-bonnet, to some women, is distasteful on account of shutting in the ears and a tendency to sit awkwardly on a high coiffure, but it is universally becoming, and on this account alone, is sure of a liberal patronage every season.

Picture No. 2 shows principally a sun-hat, but close observation will disclose a pair of rubber gloves, augmented by a pair of basket-weave sleeve protectors, furnishing a valuable tip to the possessor of dainty hands who wishes to preserve their daintiness while working with trowel or knife about plants which thrive in moist soil. The sleeve protectors enable one, also, to keep one's ruffles or cuffs immaculate, without the trouble of changing, when a spare half hour is available for gardening before one's shopping trip is due.

Some women there are who are fortunate enough to be possessed of complexions which may brave sun and wind without fear of tan, freckles or sunburn, and these rejoice in going into the garden hatless, with sleeves rolled up past the elbow, and as like as not, with shirt-waist neck turned under, the better to give defiance to the over-ardent elements which work such disastrous damage to more

An important item among those the woman gardener should have at hand is the coat-sweater, which will save many a distressing cold if kept conveniently handy, so that it may be slipped on to prevent the chill that follows an enthusiastic bout among the shrubs or plants. So useful is the coat-sweater, at all times, indeed, that one is prone to wonder why so obvious a need was never filled before its recent coming; the initial, high-necked sweater, with its only approach through the bottom, and thence through its reluctantly-stretchable choker, could never have become popular with women generally because of its awkwardness, and because of its penalty of matted and tangled tresses.

In the coat-sweater, which even adds the rare joy of pockets, the problem of the comfortable out-of-doors wrap for women has been solved, and it is destined to become a permanent institution in the feminine wardrobe this year round. One of these coat-sweaters, with the large, loose, gauntlet gloves, so useful for the fair gardener, is shown in Picture No. 4.

Annual Report Rendered by the Secretary of Ladies' Advisory Board of the Boys' and Girls' Aid Society

FOLLOWING is the report of Mrs. C. H. Templeton, secretary of the ladies' advisory board, presented to the board of trustees and members of the Boys and Girls' Aid Society at the meeting Tuesday:

In submitting my fourteenth annual report as secretary of the ladies' advisory board, the question comes to me, "What shall I tell the members and friends of the Aid Society this year?"

Triumphs, disappointments and difficulties that we have met with have been told so many times.

and are receiving the love and attention they never knew in their own home.

The greatest burden of the society is the feeble-minded. Many have been received, as there is no institution for them. An appropriation has been made by our state and we hope there will soon be more adequate means for treating these defectives.

Seven years ago a family was brought to the Receiving Home, the father a drunkard and the mother a notorious beggar. One of the girls of this family was both physically and mentally defective. It was impossible to keep her at the Aid Society and she was sent to the county almshouse. Last year several children, most of them mentally weak, were sent to the home to await the recovery of their mother at the hospital. Mr. Gardner was surprised to find in looking over his records that these weak-minded children were the offspring of the feeble-minded girl that had been sent to the county almshouse only a few years ago.

Who can measure the depravity or realize the misery and suffering that will come to any community if these unfortunates are not kept in special institutions separate and apart from the world?

The past year some foreign children have been committed to the Home. The serious

How Syracuse Woman Took Her Wrinkles Out In Three Nights

AFTER MASSAGE AND BEAUTY SPECIALISTS HAD FAILED

"Made Me Look 20 Years Younger"

Says Cincinnati Lady Who Tried It—"Now Past 40, but My Complexion Is Smoother and Better Than in Girlhood," Writes a Kentucky Woman, Who Used This Wonderful Process for Removing Wrinkles.

The Discoverer Offers to Give Particulars Free of Charge to All Who Write Her Within Next Ten Days—Extracts Promise of Secrecy—Treatment Very Simple and Absolutely Harmless—May Be Used Without the Knowledge of Your Most Intimate Friend.

"Ever since woman's beauty held away over man and brought her power, influence and wealth, she has sought a way to stay the processes of old age and banish deep lines and furrows from the brow.

Chemists, beauty doctors and skin specialists have for centuries past vainly tried to rathom the sealed secrets of nature, and find a way to keep the beauty of youth in a woman's face and form.

Harriet Meta was no exception to the general rule of women. Trouble and worry left their unsightly lines and marks upon her face. She saw the beauty of her youth giving way to the heavy imprints of coming age.

Her first resort was to facial massage, cold cream and steaming pots; then next to beauty specialists; but all in vain. The wrinkles seemed, if anything, to grow deeper and deeper. Massage even appeared to stretch the skin; more wrinkles came. She had spent all the money she could afford to spend, and was ready to give up in despair, when one day a friend made a happy suggestion.

"This gave her a brilliant idea. She set to work on the thing herself, and after several months' hard labor and almost endless experimenting, she succeeded in producing a wrinkle remover, entirely different from anything she had seen or heard of. She tried it on herself, and lo and behold! it worked a wonderful transformation in a single night. She tried it a second night, and her wrinkles were practically gone. A third night—three treatments in all—and her wrinkles had entirely disappeared and her skin was soft, clear, rosy and smooth.
