

SOME SMART TURNOUTS AND SADDLERS THAT WILL APPEAR IN THE ROSE FESTIVAL PARADE THURSDAY

THE accompanying group of interesting pictures is just a sample of what thousands of visitors to the Rose Festival will have a chance to see in the magnificent street parade of decorated saddle horses and ponies, vehicles and floral feature floats, next Thursday morning. But they will be greatly enhanced in attractiveness for the reason that one and all will be handsomely decorated with ribbons, bunting and flowers, and will appear under a general scheme of decorative designs officially prepared by the various organizations which have made club entries. That these and the hundreds of other turnouts will make a splendid showing is assured from the fact that there are dozens of fine cups and trophies hung up for the best decorated entries in the many classes listed for competition.

According to the lists of entry blanks now in the hands of the general parade committee and filed with the special committees representing the Riverside Driving Club, the Portland Hunt Club, the Junior Hunt Club and the many local fraternal societies and improvement clubs competing with feature floats, there will be not fewer than 500 entries in line, and General Chairman W. M. Davis said yesterday that he thought the aggregate would run over 600, for many outside towns which have sent for blank entry slips are yet to be heard from.

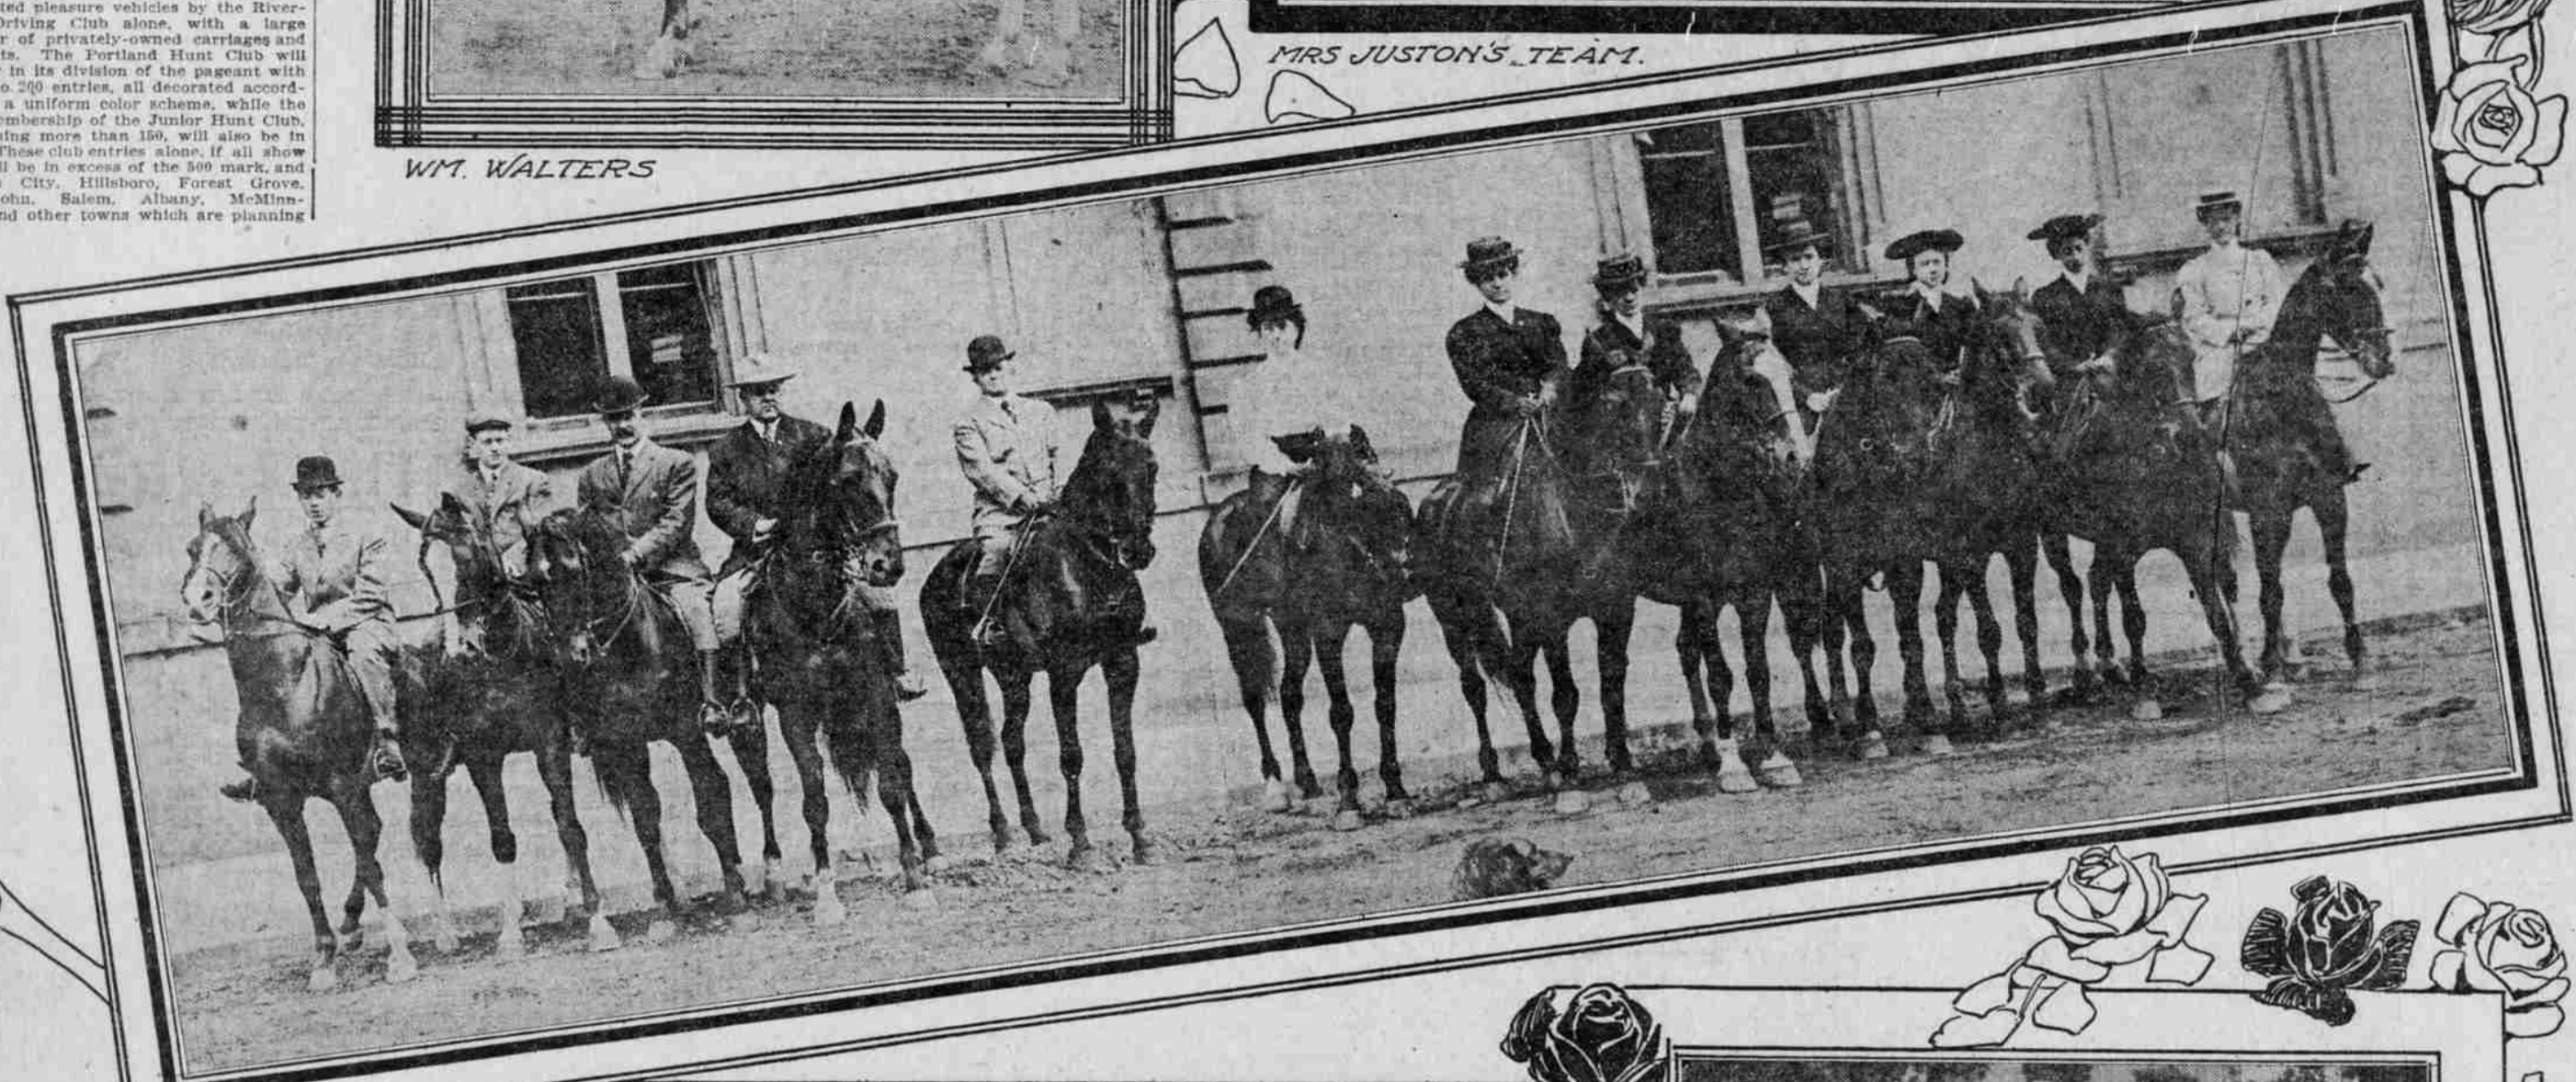

So far there have been 150 entries of decorated pleasure vehicles by the Riverside Driving Club alone, with a large number of privately-owned carriages and turnouts. The Portland Hunt Club will appear in its division of the pageant with close to 200 entries, all decorated according to a uniform color scheme, while the full membership of the Junior Hunt Club, something more than 100, will also be in line. These club entries alone, if all show up, will be in excess of the 500 mark, and Oregon City, Hillsboro, Forest Grove, St. John, Salem, Albany, McMinnville and other towns which are planning to come in have not been heard from as to the number of their entries. What is sure to be one of the most interesting features of this grand cavalcade will be the division composed of 12 companies of Oregon Agricultural College Cadets, numbering more than 500 all told. They will be led by the Cadet Band of 40 pieces. The cadets will pay their own expenses to Portland for the Festival, and will arrive here Thursday morning on board a special train of 16 coaches. Some brilliant military maneuvers may be expected from the boys during the course of the parade, as they are trained to the very minute. There will be three separate battalions of four companies each, officered by upper classmen. The cadets are equipped with Krag-Jorgensen rifles and are handsomely uniformed, and the Festival considers it a marked achievement on its part and a splendid show of public spirit and patriotism to be able to announce the appearance of the Corvallis cadets. As a further bid for general interest, Queen Flora, the reigning sovereign of the Festival and Royal Consort of Rex Oregonus, the Festival King, will ride in this parade on a floral decorated float.
