PAY HOMAGE TO NATION'S DEAD

Sallors of Atlantic Fleet and Veterans of Civil War Parade.

CROWDS THRONG TACOMA

Memorial Day Very Generally Observed by the Cities and Towns Throughout Northwest-Graves Are Decked With Flowers.

TACOMA. May 20 .- A pause was made today to the festivities incident to the presence of a portion of the Nation's marine force, in order to pay tribute to the memory of the heroes of the Civil War. This homage was concretely expressed in a parade, in which participated the military and which participated the military and haval strength of the present day and the remnant of that great, fast disappearing force of the days that once were. The grizzled veteran of the Rebellion marched haltingly behind the sturdy step of the salier and marine sworn to perpetuate the Government the veteran fought to preserve. Some the veteran fought to preserve. Some of the veterans were on cruicbes, others rode in carriages and others walked in pain, but kept in the line of march.

City Filled With Visitors.

A surging, cheering crowd, on street, balcony and roof and from window, lined the streets over which the procession of sallors, marines, yeteran and civic organizations tramped.

The day, while cloudy, was pleasant and the crowd, decked in gay colors, waited or moved in kaleidoscopic array.

Early in the morning trains, street-cars and wagons began to bring peo-ple from valley, mountain and plain from all over Southwestern Washing-ton. Small towns and cities sent their beribboned delegates by the hundreds and each delegation was accompanied by the local band, whose blaring horns led the way in the descent upon the

From the State Soldiers' Home at Orting there came a large number of veterans who had postponed their own celebration in order to form a part of the parade in this city.

Murdock, of the Rhode Island; Mayor Linck, Captain Henry McCrea, of the Georgia, and Captain Alexander Sharp, of the Virginia. Then came the Naval division of 1290 sailors and marines, usfler command of Captain W. H. H. Sutherland, of the New Jersey. They were followed by 200 veterans of the Civil War, veterans of the Spanish-American War, military and fraternal organizations. organizations.

Liquor Issue in Marion County Overshadows Senatorial Fight-School Children Parade at Eugene and Medford.

SALEM, Or., May 30 .- (Special.)-In a parade five blocks long, probably the longest procession ever seen in Salem, the anti-saloon workers demonstrated their earnestness in a fight to be decided Monday, when Marion County will vote "wet" or "dry." The procession was formed in Wilson avenue and traversed the principal business streets to Marion square, where a number of addresses were made.

The procession was made up of men, women and children, the most affecting women and children, the most affecting.

The procession was made up of men, women and children, the most affecting feature of the demonstration being the mute appeal of a number of women who marched along pushing baby carriages. Numerous banners were displayed bearing legends, a specimen of which is, "You may vote a ssloon for my boy, but I won't vote one for yours." The crowd at the square was the largest public gathering of the general campaign in Marion County.

So far as public interest is concerned, the saloon question has apparently overshadowed the senatorial question here. In the matter of literature distributed and newspaper discussion on both sides.

In the matter of literature distributed and newspaper discussion on both sides, the work done has been far in excess of that done in behalf of all candidates of all parties in this county. It is believed that the vote on the liquor question will be close. The liquor people have hopes of holding Marion in the "wet" column because it is an extensive hop-producing county; because there is a brewery located here and because a number of the outlying precincts are loon sentiment in the United States, and are encouraged by the fact that many merchants are turning against the salion because they believe they would sell more goods if the liquor dealers sold less. The killing of City Marshal Krechter in a drunken riot at Champoeg about two years ago and the killing of Theodore Goulson by Victor D'Anna, who took his carn life agmentation and search of the own life, something over a year ago, were incidents of which the anti-saloon people have made much in this campaign.
