BY CAROLYN WELLS

comes without rhyme or reason, like a thunderbolt out of a clear sky; revelations that make clear in one illuminative flash conditions and motives that have been tangled in a vague obscurity of doubt:

It was when such an instantaneous radiance of mental vision came to me I realized at ofice why I had come to England. It was simply and only that 1 might visit Stratford-on-Avon.

Nor was this pilgrimage to be lightly undertaken. Well I knew that the position Shakespeare occupied in my lists of hero-worship demanded that a fitting tribute of emotion be displayed at sight of such material memorials as were preserved at his birthplace.

Moreover, I knew that, whatever might be my sense of reverential homage, in me the power of emotional demonstration did not abound.

But it is ever my custom, when pos eible, to supply or amend such lacks as I may note in my nature, by any avail-

And what could be wiser than when going on such an important journey, and where I knew my own powers would fall short of an imperative requirement, to take with me some one who should adequately supplement my shortcomings? Reing of a methodical nature, I have my friends as definitely classified and as heatly pigeon-heled as my old letters. Mentally running over my collection of available companions, I stopped at Sentimental Tommy, knowing I need look no further.

Of course Sentimental Tommy was not his real name, but it is my custom to bestow upon my friends such titles as seem to me appropriate or descriptive.

Sentimental Tommy, then, was the only man in the world, so far as I knew, who would make a perfect associate for a day in Stratford. His especial qualifications were a chameleonic power of adaptability instant and sympathetic sension of mood, an unbounded capacity for sentiment, and a genius for com radeship. He was also a man to whom one could say, "come, and he cometh," without any fuss about it.

The date being arranged. I turned to my Baedeker and was deeply delighted to discover that we must take a train from Euston Station. For it seemed that the wonderful columned facade of Euston was the only appropriate exit from Lon don, when one's destination was Strat ford. I had hoped that our route might cause us to pass through Upper Tooting as, next to Stratford, this was to me the most interesting name in my little red book. I know not why, but Upper Tooting has always possessed for strange fascination, and though it sounds merely like the high notes of a French yet my intuition tells me that it is full of deep and absorbing interest. Sentimental Tommy met me at Euston Station, and bought tickets for Stratford as casually as if it had been on the Pennsylvania Railroad. Tommy was in SUPPOSE every one experiences sud- peculiar kind of international triumpl den novements of self-revelation that which comes only to an American who which comes only to an American who has attained some especial favor of the English. Gleefully he told me of his great luck: Only that morning he had been kicked by the King's cat! An early stroll past Buckingham Palace and along Con stitution Hill had resulted in an interview with the royal feline, and the abovementioned honorable result had been achieved. My observation to the effect that I didn't know that cats kicked, was met by the simple statement that this cat did-and then we went on to Strat-mortal hero of our pligrimage,

That's what I like about Tommy-he has such a wonderful intuitive sense of conversational values. And though his obsession by Shakespeare is precisely the same as my own, and though he is himself a Bartlett's Concordance in men's clothing, yet I knew, for a surety, that he would quote no line from the poet through the entire day.

As we had neither of us ever been in Stratford before, we left the train at the station and paced the little town with an anticipation that was like a blank page, to be written on by whatever might happen next.

Trusting to Tommy's instinct, we asked no questions of guidance, and started off at random, on a nowise remarkable street.

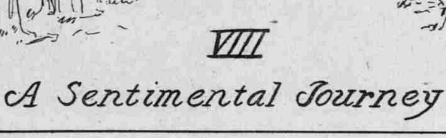

At the Chancel.

It was an affable August day, and our gait was much like that of a snah at ford.

The ride being in part through the same ountry that I had traversed when coming to London, I felt quite at home in my surroundings; and we chatted gayly of everything under the sun except the im-though whether caused by the thrill of being on Shakespeare's ground, or the reflection of Tommy's discernibly suppressed emotion, I've no idea.

But for pure delightfulness of sensa tion it is difficult to surpass that aimless wandering through Stratford, with a subconsciousness of what was awaiting

In London, historical associations crop up at every step; but, though pointing backward; each points in a different direction, and so they form a great semicircular horizon which becomes misty and vague in the distance. This is restful, and gives one a mere sense of blurred perspective. But Stratford is definite and coherent. Everything in it, material or otherwise, points sharply back to the one figure, and the converging rays meet with a suddenness that is dazzling and well-nigh stunning.

Stratford is reeking with dramatic quality, and a sudden breath of its atmosphere makes for mental unbalance. "Don't take it so hard," said Tommy, with his gentle smile; "this is really the worst of it, except, perhaps, one other

"Why, we haven't begun yet," said I, in astonishment. "You're thinking of the birthplace, the memorial and the church. You ought to know that we can see, absorb, and assimilate those things in just about one minute each. It is this that counts-this, and the footpath across the fields to Shottery.'

"And the River," I added. "Yes, and the River."

first corner tears stood in my eyes, | Tommy's steps led us, though perhaps | the Red Lion Inn, or Red Bear, or Red not by the most direct route, to the Shakespeare Hotel.

"You know," he said, "intending visitors to Stratford are invariably instructed by returned visitors to go to something; but instinct tells me that this hostelry has a message for us." Nor was the message only that of the typical English luncheon which the dining-room afforded. There were many other points about that hotel which impressed me with peculiar delight, from the quaint entrance-ball to the garden at the back. Each room is named for one of Shakespeare's plays, and has the title over its door. After hesitating between Hamlet and Twelfth Night, I finally concluded that should I ever spend whole summer in Stratford, which I fully intend to do, I should take pos session of the delightful, chintz-furnished 'Love's Labor Lost."

The library was a continuation of fas cination. A strange-shaped room whose length is half a dozen times its width it seemed a place to enter but not to

However, one does not visit Stratford for the delights of hotel life, and, lunch eon over, we again began our wander ings.

By good luck we chanced first upon th Memorial Theater. The good luck lay in the fact that, having seen the outside of this tribute to Genius, we had no desire to enter. It was mindful of a modern New England high school building, and though we knew it contained authentic portraits and follos, it had little to do with our Shakespeare.

We paused at the monument, and com-mented on the cleverness of the happy thought that provided Philosophy to fill

We entered the narrow doorway into the old house, which shows so plainly the frantic endeavor at preservation, and we climbed the stairs to the room where the poet was born. The air was smoky with memory and through it loomed the rather smug bust, its weight supported by a thin-legged, inadequate table

With Tommy I was not troubled by the objectionable thought of "first impressions." In the first moment we took , with one swift glance, the fireplace, the walls, the windows and the few scant properties, and after that our attitude was as pilgrims returning to an oftvisited shrine.

In the room back of the birth room the one that looks out over the garden, sat the custodian of the place. He was a large handsome man with none of the doddering, mumbling effects of his profes-

He looked at me keenly, as I stood looking out of the back window, my thoughts. all with Mary Arden, and he said, in a low voice, "You love him, too," and I

A little shaken by the birthplace, but of no mind to admit it, we went gayly through the Stratford street, groups of happy villagers, and so suddenly did we meet the Avon that we almost fell into it. We chanced upon two broad marble steps that seemed to be the terminal of a macadamized path to The Avon was using the lower of these two steps, so we sat on the upper one and watched the children sailing boats the fourth side of Shakespeare's upon the Memorial Stream. This brought our faces turned toward it, Anne Hath-nius.

And then we went on to Henley street Shakespeare at 4 years old, and for a and further away to our left.

and the house where Shakespeare was | time the baby Shakespeare took precedence over the man poet

It is scarcely fair that the Avon should be so beautiful of itself, for this, with its vicarious interests, makes it too blessed among rivers.

Then we went to Holy Trinky. The approach, plain as way to parish church, seemed like a solemn ceremony, and, as Tommy afterward admitted, "it got on his nerves. Unbothered by verger or guide, oblivious to tourists, if any were there, we walked straight to the chancel, looked at Shakespeare's grave—and walked away.

It was fortunate for me at this moment that I had taken Sentimental ment that I had taken Sentimental Tommy with me; for, as his emotions are so much mbre available than mine, so he has them under better control. I had expected to look around the church a bit, but Tommy led me away, through the old graveyard, to the low wall by the river. And there, under the waving old trees, we sat until we could pick up out lost three hundred years. Back through the town we went; and I must needs stop here and there at

I must needs stop here and there at the little shops, which, with their mod-ern attempts at quaintness, display reiics and antiques, more or less genu-

Few of their wares appealed to me so I contented myself with a tiry cel-luloid bust of Shakespeare, which by chance presented the familiar features with an expression of real power and intellect. It was strange to find this poet face on a cheap trinket, and with deep thankfulness of heart I possessed myself of my one souvenir of Strat-

It is directly opposed to all the instincts of Tommy's nature to ask, in structions in matters which he feels he ought to know intuitively.

And so, upon his simple announcement, "This is the footpath across the fields to Shottery.—to Anne Hathaway's cottage," we started.
As Tommy had binted, during our walk from the station, there would be another bit of the real thing, and this was it. The walk across the fields as crowded with impulses that came perlicusly near emotional inten-sity. But from such appaling fate we were saved by our sense of humor. One cannot give way to emotions if one is conscious of its humorous aspect. And we agreed that as the path across the field had been here ever since Shakespeare trod it, and as it would in all probability remain for some time in the future, the mere co-incidence that we were traversing it at this particular moment was nothing to be thrilled about.

And yet—it was the path from Strat-ford to Shottery, and we were there! But it was a longer path than we had thought, and the practicality which is one of the chief ingredients of Tommy's sentiment moved him to look at his watch and announce that we would have to turn back at once. If we would have to turn back at once, If we would catch the last train to London. Not entirely disheartened at leaving Anne Hathawsy's cottage unvisited— for we both well knew the value of the unattained-we turned, and wan dered back to the station just in time for the late afternoon train.

And that was why we didn't dis-cover until some time afterward that we had taken the wrong road across the fields; and that, as we imagined

Leonidas, "but that friend of yours, Mr.

they're much worse than some others that | end of a packing box. nin't got so good an excuse.

I was sittin' on my front porch, at repairin," says L Primrose Park, when in rolls that big! plate glass and rubber.

said I, "where they've got a duchess on

"it's the duchess. I'm running away from," says Sadie. "You ain't gettin' stage fright this late in the game, are you?" says I.

"Hardly," says she. "I'm bored, though. The duchess is a frost. talks of nothing but her girls' charity school and her complexion baths. Thirty of us have been shut up with her for three days now, and we know her by Pinckney asked me to drop that if he doesn't get some exercise soon he'll die of indigestion. Will you-let me take you over for the night?" Well, I've monkeyed with them swell dug up trouble at 'em; but for the sake of Pinckney's health I said I'd take an- for sale only between turns." other chance; so in I climbs, and we goes zippin' off through the mud. Sadie

the women had pulled off durin' them rainy days before we was most there. Just as we slowed up to turn into the private road that leads up to Breeze Acres, one of them dinky little onelunger benzine buggies comes along, missin' 40 explosions to the minute and coughin' itself to death on a grade you could hardly see. All of a sudden somethin' goes off. Bang! and the feller that was jugglin' the steerin' bar throws up both hands, like he'd been shot with a ripe tomato.

Carambal" says he. "Likewise gadzooks!" as the antique quits movin' al-

I'd have known that lemon-colored pair of lip whiskers anywhere. Leonidas Dodge has the only ones in captivity. I steps out of the show-case in time to see mister man lift off the front lid and shove his head into the works.

"Is the post mortem on?" says I. "By the beard of the prophet!" says he, swingin' around, "Shorty McCabe!"

Much obliged to meet you," says I givin' him the grip. "The Electro-Polisho business must be boomin'," says I, when you carry it around in a gasolene coach. But go on with your autopsy. Is demonstrator at a food show. Inside of it locomotor ataxia that alis the thing, or cirrhosis of the sparkin' plug." "It's nearer sentle dementia," says he.

"Gaze at that piece of mechanism, Shor-There isn't another like it in the "I can believe that," says L

For an auto it was the punklest ever. No two of the wheels was mates or the road. There was two four-horse wag- nerve to charge two dollars a throw

ELL. I've been doin' a little more | same size; the tires was bandaged like circulatin' among the fat-wads, so many sore throats; the front dasher It's gettin' to be a reg'lar fad was wabbly; one of the side lamps was a with me. And say, I used to think they | tin stable lantern; and the seat was held was a simple lot; but I don't know as on by a couple of cleats knocked off the

"Looks like it had seen some first-aid

"Some!" says Leonidas. hubble of Sadle's, with her behind the nailed this relic together at least twice a week for the last two months. I've But I thought you was figurin' in that used wagon bolts, nuts borrowed from big house party out to Breeze Acres," wayside pumps, pieces of telephone wire, and horseshoe nails. Once I ran 20 miles with the sprocket chain tled up with twine. And yet they say that the age of miracles has passed! It would need a whole machine shop to get her going again," says he, "I'll wait until wagons come up, and then we'll get out the tow rope." "Wagons!" says L "You ain't travelln" with a relinue, are you?" "That's the exact word for it," says he. And then Leonidas tells me about the Sagawa aggregation. Ever see one of around and see if I could find you. He these medicine shows? Well, that's what says he's played billiards and poker until Leonidas had. He was sole proprietor he's lost all the friends he ever had, and managing boss of the outfit.

"We carry 11 people, including drivers and canvas men," says he, "and we give a performance that the Proctor houses would charge 75c a head for. It's all for house parties before, and generally I've a dime, too-quarter for reserved-and our gentlemanly ushers offer the Sagawa

"You talk like a three-sheet poster, says I. "Where are you headed for now?" badn't told me more'n half the cat-scraps "We're making a hundred-mile jump up into the mill towns," says he, "and before we've worked up as far as Providence I expect we'll have to carry the receipts in kegs."

That was Leonidas all over; seein' rainbows when other folks would be predictin' a Johnstown flood. Just then, though, the bottom began to drop out of the big bubble and put him inside.

"Sadle," says I, "I want you to know an old side pardner of mine. His name's Leonidas Dodge, or used to be, and there's nothing yellow about him but

And say, Sadle hadn't more'n heard about the Sagawa outfit than she begins to smile all over her face; so I guesses right off that she's got tangled up with some fool idea.

"It would be such a change from the Duchess if we could get Mr. Dodge to stop over at Breeze Acres tonight and give his show," says Sadie. "Madam," says Leonidas," Sadie kept on grinnin' and plannin' out the programme, while Leonidas passed out his high English as smooth as a ten minutes they has it all fixed. Then Sadie skips into the little gate cottage, where the timekeeper lives, and calls up Pinckney on the house phone. And say! what them two can't think of in the way of fool stunts no one else can. By the time she'd got through, the hit up the ticket wagon.

"It's the first time I ever had the Sagawa aggregation looms upon the

Red Letter Day with a Dramatic Organization ***

ons. The front one had a tarpaulin top, | for perches on the blue boards," says stiff muscles and restores the natural and under cover was a bunch of the saddest-lookin' actorines and specialty people you'd want to see. They didn't have life enough to look out when the driver pulled up. The second wagon carried the round top and poles. Your folks look as gay as a gang startin' off to do time on the island,' Says L.

"They're not as cheerful as they might be, that's a fact," says Leonidas.

It didn't take him long to put life into 'em, though. When he'd give off a few brisk orders they chirked up amazin'. They shed their raincoats for spangled jackets, hung out a lot of banners, and uncased a lot of pawnshop trombones and bass horns and such things. "All up for the grand street parade!" sings out Leonidas.

For an offhand attempt, it wa'n't so slow. First comes Pinckney, ridin' a long-legged huntin' horse and keepin' the rain off his red coat with an umbrella. Then me and Sadte in her bubble, towin' the busted one-lunger behind. Leonidas was standin' up on the seat, wearin' his silk hat and handlin' a megaphone. Next came the band wagon, everybody armed with some kind of musical weapon, and tearin' the soul out of "Silver Heels" in his own particular way. The pole wagon brings up the rear. Pinckney must have spread the news well, for the whole crowd was out on the front veranda to see us go past. And say, when Leonidas sizes up the kind of folks that was givin' him the another cloud, so I lugged him over to glad hand, he drops the imitation society talk that he likes to spout, and switches to straight Manhattanesc. "Well, well, well! Here we are!" he yells through the megaphone. "The only original Sagawa show on the road, remember! Come early, gents, and bring your lady friends. The doors of the big tent will open at 8 o'clock -8 o'clock-and at 8:15 Mile, Peroxide, the near queen of comedy, will cut loose on the coon songs."

"My word!" says the Duchess, as she squints through her glasses at the aggregation. But the rest of the guests was just ripe for something of the kind. Mrs. Curlew Brassett, who'd almost worried herself sick at seein' her party put on the blink by a shopworn exhibit on the inside and rain on the out, told Pinckney he could have the medicine tent pitched in the middle of her Italian garden if he wanted to. They didn't, though. They stuck up the round top on the lawn just in front of the stables, and they hadn't much mor'n lit the gasoline flares be-fore the folks begins to stroll out and

Professor Shorty McCabe tells of a lator and complexion beautifier," says Leonidas in his business talk, "It renoves corns, takes the soreness out of > Pinckney, wanted me to make it five." Anyway, it was almost worth the polish, while a few drops in the bath money. Mile Peroxide, who did the high is better than a week at Hot Springs." and lofty with a job lot of last year He was right to home, Leonidas was coon songs, owned a voice that would and it was a joy to see him. He'd got have had a Grand-street banana huck- himself into a wrinkled dress suit ster down and out; the monologue man stuck an opera hat on the back of his was funny only when he didn't mean head, and he joilled along that swell to be; and the blackface banjoist was mob just as easy as if they'd been fac the limit. Then there was a juggler, tory hands. And they all seemed glad and Montana Kate, who wore buck-

LEONIDAS UP TO HIS NECK IN TROUBLE.

I tried to head Leonidas off from sendin' out his tent men, rigged up n red flannel coats, to sell bottled Sagawa; but be said Pinckney had told him to be sure and do it. They

"I'll bet I know where you picked up the lot of 'em," says I. "Where?" says Leonidas. "Off the benches in City Hall Park," were birds, them "gentlemanly ushers.

"All but one," says he, "and he had just graduated from Snake Hill. But you didn't take this for one of Frohman's road companies, did you?" They unloaded the Sagawa, though 'he audience wasn't missin' anything and most every one bought a bottle

skin leggins and did a fake rifle-shoot- | ney says that it was too bad to keep uch a good thing all to themselves, and he wants me to see if Leonidas wouldn't stay and give a grand matinee performance next day.

"Tell him I'll guarantee him a full touse," says Pinckney. Course, Leonidas didn't need any coaxin'. "But I wish you'd find out if there isn't a butcher shop handy," says he. "You see, we were up against it for a week or so, over in Jersey, and the rations ran kind of low. In fact, all we've had to live on for the last four days has been bean soup and pilot bread, and the artists are beginning to complain. Now that I've got a little real money, I'd like to buy a fewpounds of steak. I reckon the aggregation would sleep better after a hot

"It's the great Indian liver regu- I lays the case before Pinckney and Brassett. And say' before 11:30 they had that whole outfit lined up in the main dinin'-room before such a feed as most of 'em hadn't never dreamed about. There was everything from chilled clives to hot squab, with a pint of fizz at each plate. Right after breakfast Pinckney becolor to gray hair. Also, ladies and gan warmin the telephone wires, call-gents, it can be used as a furniture in up every one he knew within 15 polish, while a few drops in the bath miles. And he sure did a good job. While he was at that I strolls out to the tent to have a little chin with Leonidas, and I discovers him up to the neck in trouble. He was backed up against the center pole, and in front of him was the whole actorette push, all fawin' at once, and raisin' seven different kinds of ructions.

"Excuse me for buttin' in," says I,
"but I thought maybe this might be happy family."

a nappy lamily.

"It ought to be, but it ain't," says
Leonidas. "Just listen to em."

And say, what kind of bats do you think had got into their belfries? Seems they'd beard about the two-dollar-a-head ticket and the swell, crowd that was comin' to the matinee. That, and bein' waited on by a butler at dinner the night before, had gone to the vacant spot where their brains ought to be. They were telvin' Leonidus that if they were gola' to play to Broadway prices they were goin' to give Broadway acts. Mile. Peroxide allowed that she would cut out the rastime and put in a few choice selections from grand opera. Montana Kate hears that, and Ophelia's lines down pat, and she meant give 'em or die in the attempt. The ackface banjoist says he can imper-mate Sir Henry Irving to the life; sonate Sfr Henry Irving to the and the juggler guy wants to show 'em how he can est up the Toreador

"These folks want somethin' hightoned," says Mile. Peroxide, "and this is the chance of a lifetime for me to fill the bill. I'd been doin grand opera-long ago if it hadn't been for the trust." "They told me at the dramatic school in Dubuque that I ought to stick to Shakespeare," says Montana Kate. "and here's where I get my hooks in."
"You talk to 'em. Shorty," says Leonidas; "I'm hoarse."
"Not me," says I. "I did think you was a real gent, but I've changed my mind, Mr. Dodge Any one who'll tie the can to high-class talent the way you're tryin' to do is nothin' less'n a fiend in human form."

"There now," says the blondine.
Leonidas chucks the sponge, "You win," says he. "I'll let you all take a stab at anything you please, even if it comes to recitin' Ostler Joe; but I'll be bleaked if I shut down on salling be blanked if I shut down on sellin' Sagawa!"

Two minutes later they were turning from diggin' out coa-thinks upside down diggin' out cos-tumes to fit. As soon as they began to rehearse, Leonidas goes outside and sits down behind the tent, holdin' his face in his hands, like he had the

"It makes me ashamed of my kind," says he. "Why, they're rocky enough for a third-rate wagon show, and I supposed they knew it; but I'll be says he. hanged if every last one of 'em don't think they've got Mansfield or Julia Marlowe tied in a knot. Shorty, it's human nature glimpses like this that makes bein' an optimist hard work.

Sadie, and they goes straight for Mrs. ors are," says I. "You can't change 'em, though,"
"I wish I wasn't responsible for this lot," says he.

He was feelin' worse than ever when the matinee opens. It had stopped rainin' early in the mornin', and all the cottagers for miles around had come over to see what new doin's Pinckney had hatched up. There was almost a capacity house when Leonidas steps out on the stage to announce the first turn. I knew he had more green money in his clothes that minute than he'd handled in a month before, but he sered as sheepish as if he was goin' to strike 'em for a loan.

"I wish to call the attention of the audience," says he, "to a few changes of programme. Mile Peroxide, who is billed to sing coon songs, will render by her own romest the level song by her own request the lowel m 'Faust' and two solos from 'Lucia di Lammermoor."

And say, she did it! Anyways, them was what she aimed at the crowd held its breath, tryin' to be-lieve it was only a freight engine whistlin' for brakes, or somethin' like that. Then they began to grin. Next some one touched off a giggle, and af-ter that they roared until they were ripin' away the tears. Leoffdas don't look quite se glum when he comes out to present the re-formed barjoist as Sir Henry Irving. He got his cue all right, and he hands

He got his cue all right, and he hands out a game of talk about delayed genus comin' to the front that tickled the folks clear through. The guy never seemed to drop that he was bein' handed the lemon, and he done his worst. I thought they'd used up all the laughs they had in 'em, but Montana Kate as Ophelia set 'em wild again. Mayhe you've seen amateurs that was funny, but you never see anything to funny, but you never see anything to best that combination. Amateurs are afraid to let themselves loose, but not that bunch. They were so sure of bein' the best that ever happened in their particular lines that they didn't even know the crowd was givin 'em the ha-ha until they'd got through. Anyway, as a rib fickler that show was all to the good. The folks nearly mobbed Pinckney, tellin' him what a case he was to think up such an exhibition, and he laid it all to Sadie Only the Duchess didn't exactly seem to connect with the joke. She sat stol-idly through the whole performance in a kind of daze, and then afterwards she says: "It wasn't what I'd call realis clever, you know; but my word! the poor things tried hard enough" Just before I starts for home I hunts un Leonidus. He was givin' orders to his boss canvasman when I found him, and feelin' the pulse of his one-lunger that Mrs. Brassett's chauffeur had tinred up. "Well, Leonidas." says I. "are you combination on the ten-twenty-thirt

he. Twe just paid a week's advance salary to that crowd of Melbas and Booths, and told me to go sign contracts with Frohman and Conried. may be running a medicine show, but I've got some professional pride left. Now I'm going back to New York and hanged if every last one of 'em don't think they've got Mansfield or Julia Marlowe tied in a knot. Shorty, it's human nature glimpses like this that makes bein' an optimist hard work."

"They're a bughouse bunch; all act-