

SHADE HATS ARE TO BE RELEGATED TO THE BANDBOX; THE LATE NARROW-BRIMMED SPRING PATTERNS

"Merry Widow" of Abbreviated Type Alone Will Survive, According to Milliners.

UNDER the glare and ardor of the early summer sun, the tailored and dress hats of abbreviated and upturned brim are steadily finding their way back to the bandbox...

The shade hats now being shown, despite the predicted doom of the inverted brim, are inclined toward a slight all-around droop of the brim...

Several of the varied types of the early summer shade hats now being displayed by the local shops are shown in the accompanying pictures from a selection made at random from the millinery department of a local outfitting establishment.

One of the smartest of this selection is the shade hat of double Tuscan straw, in the mouth carise tint, shown in No. 1. The slightly drooping brim is of medium width, but the crown towers high and in the exact form of the roof of a bee-hive, being of the daring carise tint throughout, with a mass of cerise aigrettes, leaves and velvet ribbon centered at the front.

Picture No. 2 shows that the old reliable "Leghorn" is with us again. This season the wide Leghorn brim is bent to the slightly drooped shape and lavishly laden with roses, forget-me-nots or other flowers, the leading tendency of trimming being toward a massing of flowers and ribbon at the front.

A dainty and serviceable shade hat is the one shown in No. 3, which is a wide-brimmed sailor of Copenhagen blue straw, with masses of tiny white flowers, interlaced with velvet ribbon of the same blue tone, and a great alken rose at a little to the left of the front.

is shown in No. 4, which has an open-work brim of gauze and straw with a dainty ribbon binding, and a low crown of massed lace straw, with high white aigrettes and plumes at the left of the front. The crushed crown of lace or fine straw is a feature of the elaborate shade hats, and the trimming runs in a wide variety, tips and plumes retaining a goodly share of popularity for this purpose.

There is no marked eccentricity of shape or style in the early summer display, and this leaves each shopper the happy privilege of selecting what is best suited to her own individual type, or even to order innovations which will not only enhance her personal charms, but give the distinguishing touch of originality as well.

INSPECTOR SLETZER VISITS THE LOCAL LODGES OF MACCABEES

Entertained With Drill and Banquet by Division No. 1—Admires Scenic Portland From Council Crest.

GENERAL W. H. SLETZER, of Cleveland, O., is visiting the Uniform Rank, Knights of the Maccabees, on the Coast and arrived in Portland on his trip of inspection Friday morning from Sacramento.

General Sletzer has been away from his headquarters at Cleveland since May 1, visiting the uniform rank in the States of Iowa, Nebraska, Colorado, Kansas, Arkansas, Texas, New Mexico and California, inspecting the divisions and examining into their general condition efficiency.

Portland Division, No. 1, was inspected and gave an exhibition drill at 8 P. M., Friday evening, in the Foresters' Hall on the eighth floor of the Marquam building in the presence of General Sletzer and a number of members from the various units of the city. The drill was finely done and the officers in command, Captain E. M. Lance, First Lieutenant Anderson and Second Lieutenant Kinney, were highly commended for their proficiency and knowledge of tactics. This division is the one that received the beautiful prize awarded for the best-drilled company at the Oaks last summer.

At 9 P. M., the division, accompanied by over 30 prominent members of the order, took up the line of march to the Hotel Lenox where an elegant luncheon was served in compliment to the distinguished guest. In response to the introduction by State Commander Sherwood, General Sletzer gave an interesting review of the aims, objects and accomplishments of the uniform rank and cited the triumphs at the World's Fair in both St. Louis and Jamestown, also the notable one at Washington, D. C., where at the inauguration of President Roosevelt the uniform rank was the only citizen soldiery invited to participate in the line of march.

General W. H. Sletzer, Commanding U. R. K. O. T. M.

ures the commercial greatness of Portland. John A. Jeffrey gave a clever and witty talk. City Treasurer Werlein made a brief but pointed talk and the banquet closed with the health of the General, proposed by Captain E. M. Lance.

Woman's Club Closes Year's Work

"Rose Day" Programme, Prepared by Mrs. Warren E. Thomas, Fitting Termination of Season—Review of Department Work.

BY MRS. JAY SMITH.

Recording Secretary Portland Women's Club. MOST fitting termination to the year's programmes of the Portland Women's Club was last Friday's "Rose Day," presented by Mrs. Warren E. Thomas, chairman of the day. A programme of singular beauty, unique in that every song was either to or of a rose, was rendered as follows:

"Roses," Gaston Borch; "The Rose in the Garden," Neidinger, Lakme Quartet. Two numbers from Liza Lehmann's cycle, "The Life of a Rose," Mrs. May Dearborn Schwab; "When Roses Bloom," Reichardt; "Chain of Roses," Lehr, Miss Petronella Connolly; "Faint Roses," Lambert; "A Bowl of Roses," Clarke, Lucy Widom; "My Rose Garden," Lemmon; "The Weed and the Rose," Bailey, Mrs. W. A. E. Bushong; "As in a Rose Jar," "In My Garden," Liddle, Miss Ethel M. Lytle; "You and Love," d'Hardelot; "My Rose of Yester-ye," Marie Rich, Miss Sara Giamco; "Under the Rose," Fisher; "O, Rose, Climb Up to Her Window," Poole; nocturne, Nevill, John Claire Monteth.

During recess, after the business session, roses were distributed to each person, and the platform was transformed into a bower of the Queen of Flowers, which, with the dainty white dresses of the women singers and the beautiful songs rendered, formed a most delightful combination.

Each of the musicians seemed in excellent voice, and only the length of the programme made it impossible for the soloists to respond to the insistent applause. Mrs. Frederick Eggert, the retiring president, has won the love and esteem of the club by her untiring efforts, and as a presiding officer has been most gracious and dignified. Long years of experience and a very superior education have made her a most logical and able parliamentarian, thus lending to her rulings the strength and support that just a superficial knowledge of parliamentary law would make impossible.

Her decisions have in all cases been tempered with wisdom and justice, with no thought of self-aggrandizement, and it is with regret that at the next meeting, June 26, the club will have finished this season's work, which has been such a pleasure and help to all.

To the incoming president, Mrs. Robert Lutke, and other officers, the club will lend its hearty support.

The department work of the club has been most satisfactory under their efficient leaders. The art department established this year by Mrs. Alice Welster, is one of the most flourishing in the club, and has given the club members several delightful stereoscopic lectures on "Modern Art and Artists." The outline of their work for the coming year promises a season with excellent results. Mrs. Welster having traveled extensively and securing her own pictures, has made her a most interesting and valuable leader.

The English literature department, with Mrs. James Moffett at head, was fortunate in obtaining the services of Dr. Chapman. The study for this year embraced Ancient and Modern Drama, and Dr. Chapman's expositions have not only been most valuable, but a pleasure and delight as well. Mrs. Moffett is to be congratulated in again engaging Dr. Chapman for the coming year.

The current literature department, led by Mrs. Sarah E. Evans, and educational department, with Mrs. J. C. Pritchard as leader, each completed a year full of good work, as did the different study classes under their enthusiastic leaders.
