An elaborate wedding was celebrated at Hotel Portland when Miss Cora Marx was married to Solomon Gardie. The marriage ceremony was read in the large drawing-room, which was as beautiful a bower as woodland greens and choice flowers could make it. The walls were fairly lined with vine maple and huckleberry vines. The bride's party stood beneath a bower of vines interlaced with pink roses and carnations. Behind them was a solid bank of vines, fern and bachelor buttons. An orchestra was hidden behind a screen of potted plants and bowls of roses. Streamers of pink were festooned from the ceiling to the bride's arbor, and the whole scene was effectively lighted with many incandescents.

Dr. Jonah Wise read the service. The maid of honor was the bride's cousin, Miss Claire Marx, of San Francisco, and the bridesmaids were Miss Sybil Lippitt, Miss Clementine Hirsch, Miss Mae Oppenheimer and Miss Mabel Beck. Samuel Seling was the best man, and the ushers were Leopold Hirsch, Dr. Seling, Louis Marx and Adolph Solomon.

The bride was handsomely gowned in rich white satin, cut empire, with a long train and worn with a veil. Hand embroidery and applied lace formed the trimmings. She carried a bouquet of lilacs of the valley and orchids. The bridegroom's gift, a coronet of diamonds and pearls. Miss Claire Marx wore pale pink satin cut empire and trimmed with Chinese lace. Miss Lippitt and Miss Hirsch entered together, both gowned in white satin. All the bride's attendants carried Goldengate roses. Little Judith Lippitt, in pink chiffon, was the flower girl, and Paul Goldman, in a white Fauntleroy suit, was the ring-bearer.

Following the ceremony an elaborate dinner was served in the main dining-room. A round table for the bride and party and the family was laid in the center of the room, surrounded by smaller tables for the other guests. Covers were laid for 100. The entire room was decked with pink roses and woodland greens. On the tables were pink roses and tulle and the favors were pink and white slippers. Mrs. Marx, the bride's mother, hostess of the evening, was gowned in black satin, trimmed with black Cluny lace over white satin.

PRINCIPALS IN ONE OF THE LARGE WEDDINGS OF THE WEEK

MR. AND MRS. W. F. LEHIGH.

The wedding of Miss Lotta Kerrigan, daughter of J. F. Kerrigan, and William F. Lehigh, of Honolulu, was the culmination of a romance which originated two years ago, at which time Miss Kerrigan visited the islands. The wedding took place at the Westminster Presbyterian Church Wednesday evening, Rev. Marcotte officiating. C. E. Hickman was the best man, and the ushers were A. R. Kerrigan and A. Cammack, of Honolulu. The bride made a charming picture in a gown of satin with duchess lace panels and bertha cut Empire, and worn with a long veil and orange blossoms. She carried bride's roses and Miss Anna Scott was the maid of honor, and wore pink messaline and a pink picture hat. The decorations for the church and the house were most elaborate. Following supper numerous telegrams and cabigrams of congratulations were read. After a month's sojourn in California Mr. and Mrs. Lehigh will sail for Honolulu, their future home. Mr. Lehigh is general manager of telephone lines in Honolulu, though he formerly resided in this city.

J. T. Walls, Mrs. E. Baldwin, Mrs. M. W. Gill, Mrs. George W. Collins, Miss Winifred Rankin, Mrs. F. J. Bailey, Mrs. G. H. Notlage, Miss V. Pritchard, Miss Jellison, Miss Virginia Booth, Miss Katherine Gilbert, Mrs. H. N. Stoner, Miss Rachel Smith, Miss Virginia Borup.

A remarkable woman in more respects than one is Miss Margaret Martin, with who I chatted for a few minutes at the Nertonia the other day. Miss Martin, be it known, is here from Chicago for the purpose of directing and producing "The Toyshop" at the Hotel on Monday and Tuesday nights. She was here last year and achieved a brilliant success with "The House That Jack Built."

Miss Martin has been professionally engaged in directing amateur musical performances for a number of years, and has a reputation as wide as the continent. She must have many of the qualities which have made David Belasco a man among millions, for she possesses a positive genius for getting results from the efforts of amateur actors and singers, particularly if they be children.

"The Toyshop" is the work of Jessie L. Gaynor, who has written "The House That Jack Built" and a number of other successful pieces of similar character. For the Portland production the cast will number 150, and at the only dress rehearsal, held Friday afternoon, it gave a practically letter-perfect performance. With the exception of half a dozen adults all this number are children below the "teens."

"I've had experience in putting on these productions in a great many cities, but have never found children as quick to learn and so easy to work with as my 'Toyshop' boys and girls." Miss Martin said this of our Portland children with no small degree of pride in them, and her words rang with the truth of sincerity. "Just think of it," she continued, "we've worked only two weeks, and I feel perfectly safe in saying that Monday night's performance will go as smoothly as though we had been playing a whole season. If the little performers weren't so bright, the item of 37 dances which they've learned as merely a portion of the work, would be enough to discourage the most enthusiastic."

With this final tribute to young Portland, Miss Martin turned to other subjects near her heart and chatted entertainingly on a variety of themes. She is a woman of striking force and personality. Her capacity for accomplishment seems unlimited, and with it all her charm of manner and comradery make meeting her a pleasure well worth remembering.

Mr. and Mrs. I. N. Lippman celebrated their tenth wedding anniversary on Monday, when many friends called to offer them congratulations.

Dr. and Mrs. G. T. Tromwald are the proud parents of a small son born last week. Mrs. Tromwald was formerly Miss Thora Poulsen, one of the St. Helen's Hall girls.

A picturesque wedding was that of Miss Helen Brigham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Brigham, and Mr. Norris B. Gregg, formerly of St. Louis, which took place on Wednesday evening at the First Presbyterian church, Rev. Hiram Foukes officiating. The big church was entirely filled and prettily decorated with palms, greens and a profusion of grasses and marigolds. The bride's party was unusually effective, the three bridesmaids being tall, handsome brunettes, each gowned in a different shade of satin. Miss Maud Howell wearing a princess gown of shimmering yellow satin with an opey of same tint and carrying black-eyed Susans. Miss Lou King was in blue and carried bachelor buttons, and Miss Irene Higgins, the maid of honor, was in pink satin and carried sweet peas. The bride, who is very popular and has musical attainments, has been the motif for much entertaining for some weeks past. She was beautifully gowned in rich satin, cut on train and on empire lines, the corsage trimmed with duchess lace and worn with a full length veil held in place by orange blossoms. Elizabeth and Ruth Bruere were the flower maids, frocked in white with a broad wash of blue and the other pink. Mr. Gregg was attended by Gilbert Durham, and the ushers were Walter Smith, Lester Hodson, Fred Chapman, Mrs. Walter Reed sang during the ceremony and Edward Courson presided at the organ.

A very pleasant surprise party was given in honor of Miss Hazel Miner at her home, 135 East Twenty-ninth street, Wednesday evening. Those present were the Misses Jessie Sharp, Dollie Puffer, Elsie Muehlig, Anna Hansen, Birdie Probst and Mesars. D. Sealy, B. Briggs, H. Withycombe, H. Schabert, L. Hansen and M. Moore.

One of the most unique affairs that has been given for some time was a country dancing party, given by Misses Ruth E. Diller and Myrtle E. Long Saturday evening, chaperoned by Mr. Downer College.

Mrs. A. M. Lee gave a luncheon on Thursday in honor of Mrs. Eleanor Mitchell, mother of Mrs. John A. Keating, who is to return to her Southern home in the near future.

Arthur Alexander was received with great enthusiasm when he sang at the recent Idaho bankers' convention, held at Lewiston, Idaho. He is now visiting in Seattle.

Miss Gaeta Ivorda Wold goes tomorrow to Eugene to visit her mother, who is entertaining a house party during the University of Oregon commencement week. Miss Jean Wold, who has spent the Winter in New York, is to join her sister in Portland, and together they will leave for the college town. Mr. Robert Boyer is also to be a house guest.

Under the head of weddings is given a full account of several prominent events, among them the Coman-Cahallin, Cronan-Lyons and the Lehigh-Kerrigan nuptials, all of which attracted much attention.
