FORGED TO CONFESS

Apaches of Paris Make Mere Boy a Scapegoat.

DRAMATIC COURT SCENE

Lad Accused of Killing Two Italians, Points Out Actual Murderers From Witness Stand. Arrests Follow.

PARIS, June 20.—(Special.)—A dramatic incident took place in the Seine Assize Court the other day, when a young boy of 17, accused of having murdered two Italians, was brought up for trial. At the preliminary hearing the third degree methods of the police combined with the threats of the gang of apaches to which he belonged had frightened him into confessing a crime he never committed, and when he appeared in court the two real murderers were in the room arranging to kill him in case he should peach on them.

The crime was committed about two months ago at Aubervilliers. Two Italian workmen had been stabbed and were found lying in the street, at a place where many crimes had been committed before, and which is popularly known as the "Carrefour du crime." One of them was already dead and the other was dying, but before he expired he was able to tell the police that the crime had been committed by four young fellows, who had attacked them as they were leaving a cafe, and tried to rob them of their pay.

Played on His Ignorance.

The police soon afterward arrested the four young fellows, and among these was the boy who was brought up for trial. He was the youngest of the gang, and had taken no real part in the crime. The other three, however, had persuaded him that because of his age he would not be sentenced to death, the heaviest punishment that could be inflicted upon him being only an order to shut him up in a house of correction until he appeared as a witness. Being at the same time threatened that he would be killed if he gave evidence that would convict the others, he made up his mind to confess that he alone had stabbed the Italians.

The other three prisoners were, in consequence, released, and were merely summoned to appear as witnesses. At the trial, however, they refused to appear, and the police had to compel them to appear in court.

After being in prison for some weeks the young lad who had pleaded guilty retracted his confession and wrote a letter after letter asserting his innocence, but the court refused to notice him until the suspicion was aroused by the actions of the other three, and when one of them was examined he got tangled up and made contradictory statements.

Reasserts His Innocence.

The prisoner again took occasion to assert his innocence, and on that occasion two fellows in the court room who were pale with rage, and who had threatened him with death. These were the real murderers.

The dramatic scene came to a climax when the witness in the box said that he knew all about the crime, and that he would like to tell the truth. "Why are you afraid?" the judge asked. "Because if I tell the truth I shall be killed," he replied.

The public prosecutor at once proposed that the court should take evidence in private, with the result that instantly afterward the other two young fellows who had been called as witnesses were arrested, just as they attempted to escape from the courtroom.

"TOY SHOP" BRIGHT PLAY

Lines Give Every Opportunity to the Young Actors.

The rehearsals of the "Toy Shop" to be given under the auspices of the Institute Club of the People's Institute Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week at the Hellig, have developed much talent among the young folks. The plot of the opera is full of bright situations and calculated to produce not only amusement, but hearty appreciation of the music and fair-like effects.

A beautiful group is composed of the clock and minute fairies, all in effective costumes of red. The parts of the clock fairies are taken by the Misses Zeta Hollister, Beulah Caldwell, Genevieve Butterfield and Clara Howell, all pupils of Mrs. Walter Reed. The minute fairies are small girls. Dr. Pillsbury (Phelps Carson) and the Rag Doll (Edwin Shovel) furnish some fun, and Johnny Doll (George Blue) contributes some clever comedy work.

The Teddy Bear stunt, which was written especially for the Portland performance, will be very funny. The seats are selling fast and the indications are for a packed house Monday night.

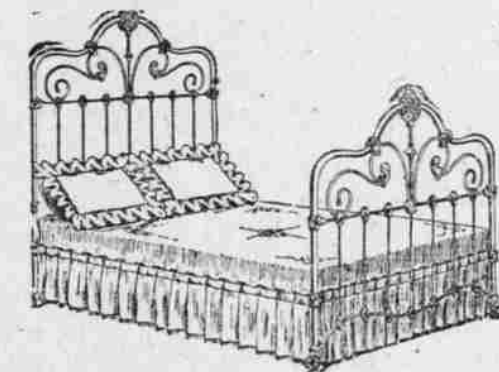

BOERS IN SLAVE TRADE

Carry on Traffic in Portuguese Territory of Angola.

LISBON, June 20.—(Special.)—Major Rocardes, of the Portuguese army, who has just returned here after commanding a victorious expedition against the Guama tribes, has made some very remarkable disclosures concerning slavery carried on by the Boers in Angola. He asserts that the Boers, who have a separate colony to themselves, continually make excursions to the interior in alliance with neighboring native tribes and capture all negroes they can lay their hands on. They describe their prisoners as "spolia of war."

The natives are brought down to the coast by the Boers and are there sold to the Portuguese "native recruiting stations" at prices ranging from $50 to $150 per head. It is evident that the Portuguese authorities are complicit, for they allow the Boers to carry on the slave traffic on Portuguese territory, and even buy the natives from them. It seems that thousands of natives are sold annually, the Boers making large profits.
