

LEM WOON GUILTY IN FIRST DEGREE

Jury Takes 13 Minutes to Convict Murderer of Lee Dai Hoy.

AGREES ON SECOND BALLOT

Prisoner Trembles With Fear When Verdict Is Read—Twenty Days Are Granted to File Motion for New Trial.

Lem Woon, indicted jointly with Lee Geung for the murder of Lee Dai Hoy, was found guilty of first-degree murder by a jury in Judge Bronaugh's court yesterday. The jury retired at 5:10 P. M., and 13 minutes later announced that a verdict had been reached. Only two ballots were taken by the jury, the first standing 11 to 1 for conviction. On the second ballot the 12 jurors were unanimous for a first-degree verdict. Counsel for the defense will appeal the case to the Supreme Court. The trial of Lee Geung, Lem Woon's confederate, has been continued until September.

Lem Woon had scarcely been returned to his cell in the County Jail, following Judge Bronaugh's instructions to the jury, when that body reached an agreement, making it necessary to bring the prisoner into court. The accused Celestial evidently expected the unfavorable verdict, following such a brief deliberation, for he was decidedly nervous as he entered the courtroom, accompanied by Deputy Sheriff Beatty and Buiger. In the meantime an interpreter had been secured to acquaint the defendant with the findings of the jury.

Pales at the Verdict.

Lem Woon was directed to stand up, which he did, his entire frame trembling as with ague. His face, naturally colorless, was perhaps a shade whiter as he listened to the reading of the verdict, which was interpreted to him in Chinese by the official interpreter. But the final words, "guilty as charged in the indictment," failed to produce any material change in the prisoner's appearance.

Counsel for the defense immediately asked and was granted 20 days in which to file a motion for a new trial, after which Lem Woon was returned to the County Jail. No demonstration of any kind attended the reading of the verdict, all but a few stragglers of the large number of Chinese who attended the trial during the day having left the building, apparently not expecting such an early verdict.

Defense Closes Its Case.

The defense closed its case yesterday by calling three witnesses, Jo Bong, Lum Hong and Sam Ah Tye, who corroborated the testimony of other witnesses for the defense in its contention that the man on trial, Lem Woon, was not Lem Woon, but Woon's younger brother, Lum Shue. In rebuttal the state called stenographer Boys and Deputy County Clerk J. H. Bush, who testified that both in the preliminary examination of Lem Woon in the Police Court, at the time of his arraignment, plea and all proceedings before the Circuit Court previous to the trial, the defendant had not claimed any other name than Lem Woon.

Attorney E. F. Freeman opened the closing arguments for the defense, and was followed by John H. Stevenson, Deputy District Attorney, for the prosecution. Dan J. Malarky, who was engaged as special prosecutor by the friends of the dead merchant, made the concluding address, speaking for an hour and a half. He reviewed in detail the testimony of the case, and traced the crime directly to the defendant, who had been identified positively as the murderer by three of the witnesses for the prosecution. Mr. Malarky vigorously scored the defendant, and some of his witnesses, and made an eloquent appeal for justice in behalf of the widow of the dead merchant.

Estate of Mrs. Mary K. Arnold.

John Arnold and Mrs. Caroline J. Kingsley were yesterday appointed executor and executrix, respectively, of the estate of Mrs. Mary K. Arnold, who died June 15, leaving an estate estimated to be worth $17,910. These appointments were made as directed in decedent's will, by the provisions of which the entire estate is bequeathed to her five children, as follows: John Arnold, Mrs. Caroline J. Kingsley, George Arnold, Mary C. Arnold and Alvin Arnold.

Lingle Loses Damage Suit.

The suit of Emmett Lingle against the Clark & Wilson Lumber Company, of Linton, for $200,000, resulting from the loss of a leg, was tried yesterday before a jury in Judge O'Day's court. Lingle and his witnesses testified that while he was employed by the defendant company in the operation of the carriage, his right leg was so badly crushed that two amputations were necessary. The jury retired at 3 o'clock, and three hours later returned a verdict for the defendant.

Circuit Court Notes.

In the Circuit Court yesterday, Judge Gantenben granted final citizenship papers to 29 applicants. Included in this large class of new citizens were representatives of practically every other country in the world.

Owing to the illness of Attorney St. Richter, counsel for the defense, nothing was done yesterday toward completing the jury in the case of the State against Charles W. Walton, whose fourth trial on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon is pending. The examination of additional jurors will be resumed when court convenes tomorrow morning.

LOOK FOR SUBSTITUTES.

Papermakers Find Many As Good As Wood.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, June 20.—The American Nation has the reputation for wasting almost as much of its resources as it uses. Facts are often advanced to show that there is much truth in such a statement. A practical papermaker recently called attention to a few of the sources of enormous waste when speaking of the number of materials in America's refuse heap which are worth while considering as promising substitutes for wood pulp.

The Northwest annually produces a million and a half tons of fax stalks which are not now used for anything. The amount of waste remains after the twine-makers take all they want. It makes excellent paper. The farmers in the South burn or plow under 15,000,000 tons of cotton stalks every year.

That which is plowed under is not wholly lost, for it enriches the soil to some extent, but not so with that which goes up in smoke.

Five hundred thousand tons of fiber have been adhering to cotton seed every year. It has been fed to farm stock along with the seed and has done the stock no good. Cattle and sheep do not like the fiber and the seed cake is better without it. A machine has been invented, which, it is claimed, will separate the lint from the seed. Papermakers think they can use it.

Nobody knows how many million tons of cornstalks go to waste; but in quality they are ahead of cotton stalks, and it is believed can be made into paper, although it has not yet been done on a commercial scale.

Thousands of acres of wild hemp grow in the southwestern part of the country, particularly along the Colorado River. It is only used now to shelter jack rabbits and coyotes, but it has splendid fiber and tests on a small scale show that excellent paper can be made from it. Paper-making from straw is a well-established industry. Bookbinders use thousands of tons of strawboard. The straw which goes to waste in Western fields would bring fortunes if made into paper.

Kinds of fibrous or woody plants suitable for paper are without limit, but only a few may be had in quantity sufficiently large to be considered. The time has not yet come when it is absolutely necessary that substitutes for pulp wood be found, but it is coming. The forests are still able to furnish materials for paper, but they cannot continue to do so for a great many years to come, at the present rate of cutting and growth. Makers of paper are therefore turning to pulp wood and it is this which prompts the active search now going on for substitutes.

SIXTH AND EVERETT SOLD

"DAVE" MACKIE NEGOTIATES SALE OF CORNER.

Hood Hotel and Adjoining Ground Taken by McMinnville Man as an Investment.

D. B. Mackie is one of the Portland realty men who believe that all the chances for excellent investments in what is known as "downtown stuff" have not yet been picked up. He has a client in McMinnville named R. Jacobson, who for some time has been looking over propositions made to him by Mr. Mackie, and yesterday decided that the northeast corner of Sixth and Everett streets came as near to being a bill as anything that could be secured at the present time.

Then an obstacle came in the way. The owners, MacMaster & Birrell, trading under the name of the Union Trust & Investment Company, evinced little inclination to sell, and it was at this point that the enthusiastic broker showed the stuff he is made of. He convinced the owners that $35,000 is a good figure to get for the 300x100 feet in that section of the city, and at the same time had little trouble in likewise convincing Mr. Jacobson he had a bargain in securing the piece at the figure named.

It is the intention of the buyer to build an annex to the Hood Hotel, that occupies 60,000 feet of the quarter block, to take up the balance of the ground, the annex to be of brick and three stories high, as is the present structure.

The McMinnville capitalist bought this property and will build the addition as an investment, remarking that he could find no better way to invest his money there, and that he intended to hold it for his family as an inheritance. Dealers asked as to the deal agree that the price paid is only a fair valuation, but the effect of the sale on the real estate market at the present time can be regarded as most gratifying. It proves, they say, that outside men of means look to Portland, really as one of the most promising investments offered, not only by reason of the revenue assured, but certainty of advance in value.

It was reported yesterday to be Mr. Jacobson's intention to back the construction of the addition soon after the deeds pass into his possession.

KILLS SEVENTH WOMAN

Italian Murderer Adds to List of Fledgling Crimes.

ROME, June 20.—(Special.)—The city of Turin is horrified by the atrocious murder of a young girl, the seventh mysterious crime of its kind that has taken place in the last 18 months, during which period six women, both young and old, have been found slaughtered, some at the doors of their houses, others in suburban streets. In each case the assassin has eluded capture and the police have been hopelessly baffled.

The latest victim of the fiendish woman-slayer is a beautiful young girl of 14, named Carolina Piovano, whose body was discovered on Tuesday last in a wood at Can Vito, in the neighborhood of the Piedmontese capital. The poor girl must have been attacked while returning home by familiar forest paths from an afternoon pilgrimage to the sanctuary of the Madonna. Her dainty veil and prayerbook were picked up near her body, which was shockingly mutilated.

A servant girl living in a nearby villa told the police that on Tuesday she met a beardless middle-aged man in a state of great nervous excitement, who was hastening away from the spot. He told her that a girl's body was lying there. The man, who is thought to be the murderer, was also seen by several other people while he was descending the hillside in the direction of the city. Since then, however, he seems to have entirely disappeared and no arrest has been made.

DR. PERKINS' "SANITARY" REFRIGERATORS

Show an advanced principle along the lines of scientific refrigerator construction. The Dr. Perkins' system is entirely different from others, and embodies features that are most important from both a sanitary and economical standpoint. Experts have for years endeavored to produce a refrigerator that would have pure air circulation—that is, while the refrigerator is closed and in operation, have a means of continually taking in fresh air and expelling the air after it has circulated through the ice and various provision chambers and become impure. This principle is scientifically set forth in the Dr. Perkins' "Sanitary," as shown in the accompanying diagram. The circulation of air can here be traced from where it enters at the intake "A," until expelled at the outlet "E." "Sanitary" refrigerators cost no more than ordinary refrigerators and are more economical. Many sizes and styles, to meet every demand. We sell them on easy payment terms.
