Malleable charcoal iron. In baking, water-heating, saving of fuel, lasting qualities, it excels all other ranges made. Will not crack, rust or crystallize. In constructing the Majestic the manufacturers now use charcoal iron in place of steel. This new feature alone adds 300 per cent to the life of the range, as it resists rust and crystallization in any climate, a feature not possessed in steel. All breakable parts are made of malleable iron, material that cannot crack or break. By using malleable iron in construction with charcoal iron it enables the manufacturers to cold rivet all parts together air-tight, allowing no heat to escape, thus heating the oven and holding the heat with a small amount of fuel. ## CIGARETTES BASIS OF SAMOS REVOLT

Importation of Machinery for Rolling "Pills" Causes Uprising.

RULING PRINCE IS STONED

Relatives of Women Who Lost Jobs in Factory That Adopted Modern Methods Lead Mob Against Palace.

BERLIN, June 27.—(Special.)—The importation of a few machines for the manufacture of cigarettes was the spark which set off the revolution in the island of Samos, whose inhabitants are now determined to tear themselves loose from the rule of Turkey. The little island, it is 468 square kilometers in area, and its principal town boasts of 10,000 inhabitants, is ruled by a Prince by the grace of the Sultan of Turkey, who pays into the Turkish treasury an annual tribute of 200,000 piastres. The Prince changes very often, for the people are in the habit of letting them know in the plainest possible manner that they are not popular, and the only one who ever enjoyed any popularity was Prince Karatheodor, who was deposed last year by the Sultan for that very reason. The present Prince was getting along tolerably well until he allowed a German manufacturer of cigarettes to import cigarette-making machines. When he did that he sealed his own doom, for a number of Samos women make their living by making cigarettes and when the machines came 45 of these lost their jobs and that was enough to cause a general uprising.

Citizens Stone Prince.

The fathers, mothers and brothers, not to speak of countless sweethearts of the women, went right up to the Prince's palace and demanded that he give orders to have the machines destroyed. When he refused they began to throw rocks at him and as his own guard seemed rather pleased at this the Prince beat a hasty retreat and sent a messenger to the Sultan asking for troops. The Sultan gave orders to the Turkish garrison in the island to defend the Prince, and the whole force, consisting of 50 men, armed with flintlock guns, was ordered to bombard the city of Vathy, which the Prince had taken refuge in. Turkish troops threatened to do so but as they were afraid to leave their barracks they had no effect. Then the Sultan sent 200 soldiers over to the island from Smyrna. The Prince went down to the dock to receive the transport but was surrounded, beaten and made a prisoner in his own home. Then there was a brisk little fight between the people and the 200 soldiers who were finally driven away.

Orders Out Warships.

Furious at this insult the Sultan ordered three Turkish men-of-war to go to Samos and all Constantinople lined the shores to witness the unusual sight of Turkish ironclads actually sailing. Probably the Sultan wanted to show that not all his navy is junk and that there really exists Turkish naval officers who are not afraid to take their vessels into the open sea. In the meantime the "Ruler" of Samos sits a prisoner on the roof of his palace and swears at cigarette girls and cigarette machines, while the Sultan is wondering whether England's suggestion to send 20 English soldiers to Samos to protect the Turkish flag was meant as an insult or a sign of good-will.

BERLIN TO HAVE SUBWAYS

Kaiser Plans Up-to-Date System of Rapid Transit.

BERLIN, June 27.—(Special.)—The people of Berlin are to have real rapid transit, and the Kaiser is the man whom they will thank for it. A few days ago the Kaiser sent for the Chief Mayor of Berlin, Herr Kirschner, and when he arrived at the palace post haste, for the Kaiser is very nervous of late and can be very unpleasant when people do not "obey" his invitations quickly enough, the mayor was told by his majesty that the suggestion of communication in Berlin were far from what they ought to be and that something must be done and done quickly.

Beyond saying that the Kaiser was interested in the building of an extensive subway system and had emphasized the necessity of quick action, the Mayor would not say anything about his audience, but the reports of the special commissions who visited New York and Paris to inspect the subway systems of the two cities, are to be laid before the city fathers of Berlin, and there is no doubt that a definite plan will soon be submitted to the Kaiser probably as soon as he returns from his Norwegian cruise.

ADMIT FEMALE STUDENTS

Prussian Universities Open Doors to Women Next Fall.

BERLIN, June 27.—(Special.)—It has now been definitely decided that from the beginning of the next semester all Prussian universities are to be open to female students, providing they possess the same qualifications as the men, that is to say that they have passed their final examinations in an authorized Latin school. Progressive women are jubilant at this, though they express their regret that it will still be impossible for women to enter into competition with men as far as judicial and state offices are concerned. The Prussian government is still opposed to women judges and the employment of women by the state.

GET RID OF DALAI LAMA

China Hits on Scheme to Speed Lingering Guest.

LONDON, June 27.—(Special.)—A meeting between the Dalai Lama of Tibet and the Emperor of China, the two most unapproachable men in the world, is being arranged by the Chinese Government. This is really an attempt by the celestial government to get rid of the Lama, who has outstayed his welcome, for he has been the guest of China ever since the British marched against Lhasa, four years ago. The holy man's visit has been very embarrassing to the Chinese authorities. He is followed by an enormous retinue with a great caravan of baggage animals, which has been a heavy burden on the local magistrates, who have had to provide supplies for this small Tibetan army.

Extraordinary honors will be paid to the Lama when he goes to Peking. He will be accommodated at the yellow temple, and an elaborate ceremonial has been arranged for his reception by the Emperor. When the Lama is admitted into audience with His Majesty, the Emperor will rise and ask him to be seated on a bamboo couch at right angles to the throne. While conversation on Tibetan affairs is proceeding refreshments will be served, and at the conclusion the Buddhist priest will receive numerous valuable gifts.

BRUTES IN GERMAN ARMY

PRIVATE SOLDIERS ARE SUBJECTED TO ABUSE.

Kaiser's Efforts to Stop Ill-Treatment of Men Meet With Only Moderate Success.

BERLIN, June 27.—(Special.)—In spite of all the Kaiser's efforts to stamp out the maltreatment of privates in the army, cases of brutality towards their men on the part of noncommissioned officers are continually cropping up. One of the worst cases of cruelty and brutality ever recorded has just been taken up by a court martial in this city when four sergeants and four bombardiers of the First Artillery of the Guard, one of the crack regiments of the army, were placed on trial for ill treatment of subordinates.

No less than 600 charges were made against the principal offender, Sergeant Thamm, and then Sergeant Schulz. The kernel of the case was the suicide of a recruit named Kobbe, who was constantly abused by Thamm or by his own comrades, acting under Thamm's orders. Through fear of further torment Kobbe finally threw himself from a window in the military barracks, and died in the hospital a few hours afterwards.

With the utmost reluctance a number of the dead man's comrades, who were evidently afraid of what might happen to themselves, testified against the sergeant, and their testimony showed that the accused had been even far more brutal than it appeared in the complaint, and that it would probably only have been a question of time when the dead man would have succumbed from the tortures he was made to suffer daily.

WEIRD TALES OF SEA BARNYARD ON THE STAGE

Fishing-Boat Sails Into Port With Corpse on Lookout.

LONDON, June 27.—(Special.)—A weird sea story is reported from Plymouth. The little fishing boat Fear Not went out on the Eddystone fishing grounds the other day. In her were William Rove, her owner, aged about 60, and his son, a boy of 17. About 4 o'clock in the afternoon the boat returned to Sutton Harbor. Rove sat upright upon a thwart, with his arms folded, gazing out beyond the bows. His son was leaning upon the tiller, steering the boat, which came along slowly in a light breeze.

The fishermen on the dock hailed the two men, but received no answer, and neither of the figures appeared quite unmonstrous of his surroundings, like a man in a trance. Later on he was able to explain the mystery to some extent. He said that his father had seen the anchor and then dropped back into a sitting position and never spoke or stirred again. Heart failure brought on by heavy exertion and the heat was found to be the cause of death. When the son realized that his father had expired he said he felt like a man in a dream, and he can only remember blankly steering the boat to Plymouth.

CELEBRATE CHARTER DAY

Berlin Plans Great Historical Pageant for November 18.

BERLIN, June 27.—(Special.)—Great preparations are being made for the celebration of the one-hundredth anniversary of the original Berlin City charter, on November 18 next. A great historical pageant is to be one of the features of the celebration, but what interests the city employes more than this is the fact that at the suggestion of the Kaiser a fund of several millions of marks is to be created, the interests of which are to be used to provide homes for aged municipal employes.

MORGAN BUYS TREASURE

Outbids Italian Government for Newly-Discovered Bas Relief.

PARIS, June 27.—(Special.)—Greatly to the disappointment of the art lovers of Italy, Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan has bought the beautiful Greek bas relief which was found buried in the Campagna, in spite of the fact that the Italian government was very anxious to acquire the treasure. An appropriation of 100,000 lire had been made and the government went the limit, but Morgan coolly offered 60,000 lire more and the relief was his. The only consolation is that the American Croesus cannot take it out of Italy.

CRAZY FROM HEAT

Torrid Weather Causes Carnival of Crime in Paris.

THREE MURDERS ONE DAY

Four Suicides and Numerous Shootings and Stabbing Affrays Add Spice to Life in the French Capital.

PARIS, June 27.—(Special.)—The unusual heat from which Paris has been suffering, is thought to be responsible for a veritable wave of crime which has inundated this city. In one day no less than 13 crimes of serious nature were reported, and the list known to the public is by no means complete. A wine merchant was almost cut to pieces by two customers in the small hours of this morning because they complained that his wine was sour. At about the same time a rickshawer went insane from the heat and almost killed a woman, whose brother shot him dead. A hotel servant was suddenly attacked by the occupant of a room which did not please him, and was killed by a blow from a chair.

Crowd Attempts Lynching.

A furious crowd attempted to lynch the father and mother of two little children, whom they accused of neglecting, and the father is now hovering between life and death as a result of the wounds he received before he was rescued by the police. When the police arrived and preceded the father to the hospital, the crowd attacked the policeman and wounded six of them in their efforts to get at the prisoners. A cab-driver was garroted and robbed in broad daylight by a customer and left for dead in a secluded street.

Four suicides were reported, all caused by the heat. The first was a young soldier who took his own life because his leave of absence expired this morning and he was afraid the military drill would make him insane. The second, a man of 35, strangled himself because he was unable to stand his work as clerk in a store. The third was the suicide of a young woman who shot herself dead in the courtyard of a fire station in Place Violet because a fireman to whom she was engaged broke off the engagement.

German Artist Suicide.

The fourth suicide was that of a young German painter named Wiegels. He tried to shoot himself a few days ago because it was too hot, but the revolver missed fire. Next he all but hanged himself in the quarter Latin, but was cut down by a friend and spent a happy evening in Montmartre distributing for luck the pieces of paper with which he had tried to hang himself. In the morning he hanged himself on the same nail he used the day before, and this time he succeeded.

Vainglorious Rooster Hero of Rostand's Strange New Play.

PARIS, June 27.—(Special.)—In about two months the world is to see another play by the famous author of "Cyrano" and "Aiglon," Edmond Rostand, for all arrangements have now been made to produce the much-advertised animal play, "Chanteclair," at the Theatre Porte Saint-Martin during the first week of August, and so well has the press agent worked that even now there is not a seat to be had for the first performance, when France's most famous actor, the great Coquelin, is to appear in the role of the vainglorious barnyard rooster, with his son Jean assisting him in the part of the farm dog. Altogether there are 90-odd animal parts in the play.

As to how the play will be received opinions greatly differ, but most people are prone to believe that it will be too eccentric to please Italians and very likely this is true, for parts of the play were written while Rostand was on the verge of insanity, if not really insane, and even today it is so nervous that were he an ordinary mortal he would undoubtedly be considered what Americans call "a little off."

LOSES VOICE; TAKES LIFE

Russian Nobleman Falls at Outset of Operatic Career.

MILAN, June 27.—(Special.)—Colonel Leonidas Maximoff, a young Russian nobleman, has committed suicide here under very pathetic circumstances. He came to Milan about ten years ago to study music, and as he had a very fine tenor voice, he desired to make a name for himself as an opera singer. When about to make his first appearance in public, about two months ago, he was taken ill with typhoid fever, and when he recovered, his voice was completely gone, and in a fit of despondency he took chloroform. He left a letter saying that neither his wealth or rank could make life endurable, as he could not follow his true vocation. His teachers here assert that the world has lost another Caruso in the unfortunate young man.

CONVERT HIM IN EFFIGY

Suffragettes Take Liberty With Wax Figure of Asquith.

LONDON, June 27.—(Special.)—Falling to convert the Prime Minister to the creed of votes for women the suffragettes have at least made him appear in public with one of their badges pinned on his coat. It was upon his wax effigy in Mrs. Tussaud's that this act of treason was committed. Visitors to the famous wax galleries yesterday were amazed to find that a group consisting of Mr. Asquith, John Burns and the newly created Lord Morley of Blackburn, each had a "Votes for Women" button securely fastened in his coat lapel.
