NEW ROAD INTO WHEAT COUNTRY

Hill Would Divert Eastern Washington Grain to Portland Docks.

SHUT OUT PUGET SOUND

Surveyors in Big Bend Seeking Route Through Adams County Toward Pasco—N. P. Officials Don't Deny Purpose.

SPOKANE, Wash., June 27.—(Special.)—To cross the trail of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and cut Seattle and Tacoma out as wheat shipping points from Central Washington fields are declared to be objects and results of the plans of James J. Hill to build another railroad extension to Eastern Washington.

It is asserted by people visiting Spokane from Adams County, and not denied by Northern Pacific officials, that a party of surveyors is at work locating a line from Adrian, Douglas County, the terminus of the Washington Central Branch of the Northern Pacific, to a connection with the Spokane, Portland & Seattle, at a point on the Snake River in Franklin County, possibly Pasco.

The line of survey crosses the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul at Othello, the division point on the Milwaukee extension in Adams County. The surveyors have staked out the line from Connell, through Othello and northwesterly to near Moses Lake, where they now have their camp.

Some locating work has been done out of Adrian, the stakes following a line to the west of Moses Lake, and the direction taken from Othello to the lake is said to indicate that the surveys will meet on the west shore.

The line would give a water-grade haul, and Great Northern officials here say it has long been contemplated.

LEAVES HUSBAND; IS SHOT

sister for several months, until he arrived.

Reconciliation Is Effected.

He came pleading and promising and by means of the little child a reconciliation was effected, and she returned to him. But their troubles were not ended. Dissensions soon arose again, and for the second time she deserted him, bringing the child with her to Portland. That was five weeks ago.

A few days later he followed, in the hope of again inducing her to return. But she was obdurate, vowing that never again would she live with him.

Desperate because of his love and her desertion, he is said to have threatened to mar the beauty of her face by throwing acid upon her, but he never carried out his threat. It was her face, her beauty, he constantly averred, that caused the trouble.

Two weeks ago he attempted suicide in his room at the hotel. No one but himself will ever know whether the attempt was made to excite her sympathy or whether he was really willing to start upon an instant journey to the grave. At any rate, the slight wound which he inflicted upon his wrist with a razor was not fatal, and under the care of attendants at a hospital he was discharged as cured last Friday.

Hovers Near Wife's Residence.

Since that time he has hovered about the Dawson home. Dawson is a conductor on a streetcar and is rarely at home during the day. Friday afternoon he called, and the wife and child were at home. Seeing him coming and fearing an attempt to take the child from her, the mother seized her and ran to the home of neighbors. He remained for a time, then departed. As soon as he was gone the child was spirited away and is now in the home of friends.

Yesterday afternoon he called again. It was 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and he evidently decided that he would brook no repulse, for he went boldly into the house. His wife was not there, being at work at the switchboard at the main office of the telephone company. Nor was the child at home, and he began to ask questions. Mrs. Dawson and her children talked with him until 6.

They were in the kitchen when Mrs. Halloway reached home at 6:30. Mrs. Dawson was preparing dinner, while her two children played upon the floor. Halloway talked with his wife, but constantly, it is said, kept his hands in his pockets. They quarreled for an hour or more before the man suddenly drew a revolver from his pocket. Little Herbert Dawson was standing on a chair near his aunt, the other child still upon the floor.

Fires Five Shots.

"I've come for you the last time," Halloway bitterly announced, "and now I'll spoil that pretty face of yours."

He fired five shots in rapid succession. At the first shot his wife staggered and fell, clutching at the chair upon which stood the boy. The chair was overturned as she fell and the child thrown violently to the floor, sustaining a severe injury to his arm.

Three of the shots took effect. One bullet struck her in the breast in the region of the heart, the other taking effect in her right arm and right shoulder. So close was the weapon when it was fired that it ignited her clothing, and only with great difficulty were the flames extinguished by Mrs. Dawson.

The wounded woman was removed in an ambulance to St. Vincent's Hospital, and the man handcuffed and hurried to the City Jail. He accuses her of infidelity, and her friends accuse him of unfounded jealousy.

Statement of Sister.

"It happened just as I have told you," said Mrs. Dawson last night. "He had been here most all the afternoon, and after Mattie came he began to upbraid her and demand that she return to him. She refused and finally he drew a revolver. I was not looking at the time, and it all happened so quickly that I cannot describe it. But I started to run for the police when I heard her call to me and ask me to put out the fire."

Dolph Huddleston, who resides next door, at 522 Roselawn, was at home when the shooting occurred. He heard the muffled reports of a revolver and went out to investigate. He had scarcely emerged from the door before he saw Halloway running rapidly from the Dawson residence.

"I knew something had happened, for Halloway had been trying to tell me his troubles," said Huddleston. "I ran after him and caught him just as a policeman caught hold of him. I don't know where the policeman came from, but he was there. Together we placed a pair of handcuffs on the man. He told us his gun was in his pocket and for us to take it. He had spoiled his wife's face, he said, and that was all the use he had for it. He made no resistance."

Halloway declares that his wife has recently made two attempts to end her own life, but her relatives deny his charges.

CALMLY TELLS OF HIS MOTIVES

Halloway Says He Pleaded With His Wife to Return.

Halloway was exceedingly cool and collected when he arrived at the police station in charge of Patrolman Drugg. Because his left arm was still in bandages from his attempt to sever the blood vessels made a short time ago at the Merchants Hotel the officer brought him in with but one handcuff. Halloway, while pale, was the least excited person in the police station. He admitted the shooting with calmness. Patrolman Drugg asked him why he ran.

"I was only trying to get away from the house. It was not my intention to evade the law. I merely wanted to get away from the scene of the affair. I had intended to go to the nearest telephone and notify the police and then give myself up."

Before he was locked up in a cell Halloway talked freely about his troubles with his wife. When questioned as to the causes which led up to last night's shooting he was visibly affected.

"The causes are well known to our friends and neighbors in Los Angeles and to our relatives here," said he. "Her actions have been of the vilest character. She ran away from me and lived with other men and I suffered the humiliation of being told of her loss of self-respect and virtue by our little 8-year-old daughter. That my child should have been present at her own mother's dishonor was more than I could stand.

"She began first to be wayward in Los Angeles. Although my pride was wounded to the quick I talked with her and tried to reason with her but to no avail. She left home first about three months ago and came up here to stay with her sister, I followed her and talked to her. She must have had some conscience left at that time because she attempted to take her life by swallowing poison and when that did not succeed she turned on the gas. She was foiled in this attempt too and after that she went home with me again.

"A few weeks ago while I was hard at work earning our living she sold out all the things we had in the house down to the bedclothes, and decamped. She came here to Portland. She took up with two different men. One of them is named Miller and the other is named Gay. Miller I understand is well-to-do, but Gay is a blacksmith who lives only four blocks away from the Roselawn-avenue house. She moved into a little place across the street from her sister with but one room and the things which my darling little daughter told me as to what happened in that room simply drove me wild.

"I thought there might still be hope for her and I sent her tickets and money to come home. It cost be about $300, but she would not come. Then I came on myself and did my best to persuade her to give up her infamous life. She was still my wife and the mother of my child. I could not bring her to give up her friends. She told me I was too old for her and that she was through with me. I felt so disconsolate that I cut myself in the arm here and tried to hide my shame in oblivion but even there fate seemed against me.

"Yesterday she took our little daughter over to Vancouver to place her in some school where I would not be able to see her. She was accompanied by one of her men friends. I watched them and saw the whole affair. Afterwards I went to the house and asked her to tell me where the little one was and she refused.

And still I had patience. I waited until tonight to make one last appeal to her to do what was right. She had a written statement signed by me at the time I tried to take my life and she flaunted this in my face and laughed at my own and my daughter's dishonor. She called me a coward for having tried to take my life and, working herself up into a frenzy of hatred, she called upon me to defend myself and rushed at me, trying to tear the bandages from this cut in my arm. Then I pulled my gun and shot her. She apparently had no heart or soul. I loved her better than I did my life, but I also loved our honor and our children's more. May God be with her."

ROBBED; THROWN IN RIVER

Greek Laborer Murdered by Unknown Thugs at Spokane.

SPOKANE, June 27.—The body of an unknown man, partly submerged in the water, was found on the north bank of the Spokane River, not far from the center of the city this afternoon.

On the bank, 30 feet above the body, was a big splotch of blood and from there to the river bank was a trail, showing where the body had been dragged.

The man, a Greek or Austrian, had been beaten to death, his head showing horrible gashes inflicted by a blunt instrument. His pockets were turned inside out and the murder had evidently been committed for the purpose of robbery.

SEA MONSTER BACK AGAIN

Crew of Bark Havila Tells of Thrilling Experience in Pacific.

PORT TOWNSEND, Wash., June 27.—(Special.)—Captain Durysen, master of the bark Havila which arrived in port today from the Gulf of California, is authority for a story that his ship had an encounter with a sea monster in the Gulf of California on its way here that came near ending disastrously for the ship and crew. The sea monster was plainly seen by every one aboard the vessel, and is described as at least 200 feet long and possessed of a dozen arms. In its movements and gyrations close to the ship, such a force of swell was sent forward that the vessel rocked, and it was feared the bark would be capsized.

Few Words From and to an Old Friend

PORTLAND, July 26.—(To the Editor.)—In today's Oregonian there is an account of the Harvard-Yale football game. At the bottom of the article, on the first page, it says "continued on page 11." If you turn to page 11 you will not find it. What is the matter? This happens very often. A person has to chase all over the paper to find these continuations.

SUBSCRIBER.

"Subscriber" doesn't give his name, but he might be informed that the error of which he complains was the result of a mental lapse on the part of the makeup man, precisely similar to the one on "subscriber's" part which led him to date his note "July 26" when he meant June 26, and to write Harvard-Yale "football game" when he meant boat race.

Only Drunk; Not Drowned.

ASTORIA, Or., June 27.—(Special.)—J. E. Ward, the fireman from the torpedo-boat Rowan, who was reported to have been drowned, was found last night at the hospital, where he had gone to recover from a spree. He was released in time to leave on the Rowan this morning.

MUDDLED ON RATES

Lumber Decisions Confound Railroads' Plans.

FULLY EXPECTED VICTORY

Roosevelt's Assurances Raised Hopes Which Interstate Commission Has Dashed—May Abandon Attempt at Advance.

CHICAGO, June 27.—(Special.)—Manufacturers and railroad magnates who heard the address of W. C. Brown, senior vice-president of the New York Central lines, in which he said that freight rates must increase or wages must decrease, resulting in a terrific war with union labor, are wondering if the big delegation which called on President Roosevelt could have misunderstood him.

The railway managers came away from that conference with the understanding that the President would not stand for any wage reduction, but that he would lend his moral support to a slight increase in freight rates. This word was passed around and the roads began to prepare their schedules for the increases. The general storm of protest caused them to employ more secrecy, but they felt sure of their position until the recent Interstate Commission order that they must restore the old rates on lumber.

This was a distinct shock, as they felt the lumber rates would be the easiest of all to defend and, if they will not stand, it is useless to attempt any increase along other lines.

SPENCER IN A TANGLE

PROSECUTION ON HAND BUT THE CAPTAIN IS NOT THERE.

City Attorney Thinks It Is up to Chief Gritzmacher to Explain Why Arrest Was Not Entered.

That Chief of Police Gritzmacher has involved himself in an unpleasant tangle, as a result of having released Captain E. W. Spencer, ex-Chief of Police, from custody without the proper authority to do so was uncomfortably brought to his attention when City License Inspector McEachern and Deputy City Attorney Tomlinson appeared yesterday morning in the Municipal Court ready to prosecute Captain Spencer. The Captain, as he had promised, did not make his appearance.

When it was learned that Captain Spencer had been lawfully placed under arrest by Patrolman Van Overn and had been taken from his home to the police station, and that notwithstanding the fact that the custody of his person was called for on a warrant issued from the Municipal Court, Chief Gritzmacher had released the prisoner and pigeonholed the warrant, great surprise was expressed. That this action on the part of Chief Gritzmacher nonplussed Inspector McEachern was very evident.

Captain Spencer had said, when in the police station on the night of his arrest, that he had been falsely arrested and that he would sue the city. In the face of this Inspector McEachern said:

"I swore to the complaint. I made a thorough investigation of the case before I submitted the facts to the City Attorney's office. The records of the books of the Banfield-Veasey Company, owners of the Washington-street dock, show that from March 10, 1907 to March 10, 1908, Captain Spencer leased the dock, or a greater portion of it from them and that he afterwards subleased it to two different firms. For that year he owes the city $40 as prescribed in the city laws. I cannot understand why he did not appear in court as the warrant was turned over in the regular order of procedure."

Seeing that they were in an embarrassing position and were called on for an explanation it was given out by the police that Captain Spencer had been released on his own recognizance, but investigation proved that this was not so, as there is no record of Captain Spencer's apprehension and release recorded on the police docket, where all arrests and releases are entered at the time they occur, according to law. If Captain Spencer was released on his own recognizance and failed to put in an appearance it is interpreted that he is then in contempt of court and the police will be required to explain why his arrest was not recorded on the docket as are all other cases. If, however, this interpretation of Captain Spencer's release is not accepted, then again Chief Gritzmacher faces the unpleasant appearance of having arrogated to himself some of the powers of the court. Up to a late hour last night Captain Spencer had not been arrested.

PACIFIC TORPEDO FLEET

Three Flotillas Organized Under Command of Gill.

WASHINGTON, June 27.—A Pacific torpedo fleet, to be in command of Commander William A. Gill, of the Solace, the torpedo supply ship of the fleet, has been organized on the Pacific Coast from the various torpedo vessels there. It is to be divided into three flotillas, made up as follows:

First—Whipple, Truxton, Hopkins and Hull.

Second—Paul Jones, Perry, Preble and Stewart.

Third—Lawrence, Farragut, Goldsborough, Rowan, Fox and Davis.

Temporarily the Farragut is assigned to the second flotilla until the Paul Jones is commissioned.

Anticipating the departure of the Atlantic battleship fleet on July 7, the Navy Department has ordered the departure of various auxiliaries, including supply and hospital ships, as follows: Ajax and Glacier, June 29; Panther and Yankton, June 30, and Culgoa and Relief, July 1.

MIRACLE IS ESTABLISHED

Catholic Church Says Hailstones Bore Image of Virgin.

REMIREMONT, France, June 27.—A diocesan commission has been conducting an investigation at Remiremont of an alleged miracle. Having heard 107 witnesses it today affirmed the reality of the supernatural event.

During a violent hail storm in the month of May hail stones were picked up, it is alleged, bearing images of the Virgin on their surface. Contact with the earth had split them in half and on the smooth inner surface were the miraculous pictures.

Local Catholics considered this phenomenon a divine act and a rebuke to the municipal council in vetoing a proposed procession in honor of the Virgin.

The secretary of the Academy of Sciences attributes the phenomenon to photo-fulgural or vaporo-graphic impressions of certain medals struck in honor of the Virgin.

MURDER IN SHEEP CAMP

James Moore Kills Allen Johnson, Negro, After Quarrel.

LA GRANDE, Or., June 27.—(Special.)—James Moore, the sheepherder, who killed Allen Johnson near Telocaset last night, was brought to La Grande tonight by Sheriff Childers. The killing took place early last evening on a sheep ranch about 40 miles from here, following an altercation between Johnson and Moore. Johnson made as if to draw his gun, according to an eye-witness, but his apparent purpose was frustrated by Moore getting his machine working first. Childers went to the scene last night and this morning brought the prisoner to Union, where he held him until tonight, when Moore was taken to the jail here. The victim is a negro and was about 20 years old. No step has been taken for trial as yet.
