

FORGIVENESS

Maine Fishermen Exhibit Spirit of Christian Forgiveness Toward Thief.

HIS DAUGHTER CRIPPLE

Village of Vinal Haven Unites to Help Unfortunate Parent Send Her to Hospital Where She Will Be Cured.

VINAL HAVEN, July 25.—The fishermen of this little hamlet off the coast of Maine are occupied just now holding a sewing bee for the sole interest in the making of clothes for a little hunchback girl named Jennie, now at the Maine General Hospital in Portland.

Along the Maine coast the story of how the little crooked-backed girl came to be sent to the hospital, where she might be made straight and well, has become the sole topic of interest.

Just as the news of the capture of the mysterious man who plundered the fishermen of Vinal Haven for two weeks went broadcast along the coast, these sturdy New Englanders watch over their fish pots like eagles hovering over their prey, and were to the man who dares to fish from their preserves.

Meantime there was one person in the village, little Jennie, known as the hunchback, who had suddenly dawned like the bursting of a beautiful flower, for her father had told her that she was soon to be sent to the great hospital in the city where she would be made straight and well again.

Little Jennie is motherless. Left alone with her father when she was an infant, she had never known what it was to run and play with the bare-legged, toothy, wiry little children of the hamlet.

Her round, blue eyes, sunny hair and the pathetic little smile that somehow always lingered about her lips, had endeared her to the fishermen of the village, who sometimes dropped in to see the little invalid, but the simple fisher folks, strong in their belief in the dispensation of God, had accepted her misfortune as a decree of heaven, and never dreamed that it was possible for the child to be cured.
