Splendid Paintings Are on Display

Correspondent Writes Appreciation of American Artist Who Is Well-Known in Portland.

ORTLAND, Aug. 1 .- (To the Editor.) | -It has been our good fortune in Portland to know one of the most ! eminent of living- American artists, not only in some of his best works, but in so many pictures of different periods as to filustrate the phases of his development and enable us to understand the underlying spirit of his art as isolated examples could hardly do.

George De Forest Brush was born in Shelbyville, Tenn., in 1855. He studied in Paris under Gerome, whose sound academic training and careful technique were at that time a valuable discipline for our young American student a discipline by young American student, a discipline by which none has profited more than Brush. It was in pictures of the American Indians, painted after his return to this country, that the young artist first won recognition. These were popular in subject and pleased even the unlearned by their careful finish and definition of detail, but they will not depend upon these qualities for their lasting value. There is truest poetry in such pictures as the early "Silence Broken," shown at the Lewis and Clark Fair, and in the "Florida Rice Fields," once lent by Mr. Fleischner. young American student, a discipline by Rice Fields," once lent by Mr. Fielschner, In the well-known "Sculptor and King," which won the first Haligarten prize in 1888, there is indeed the suggestion of a "story," but it is no trivial anecdote that holds us. It is the portrayal of tempera-ment, the contrast between the imaginament, the contrast between the imagina-tive creator and the man of affairs—the humble pride and sensitiveness of the ar-tist before the self-confident judgment of the worldling. There is fine painting in all these too, and keen perception of beauty. For some years past Mr. Brush has painted portraits only, chiefly portraits of his own family, the mather with her little boy in a green blouse and brown cap, with fair hair, sweet eyes and a captivating chin, is yet the farthest possible from being merely the pretty plo-ture of a pretty child. Though every out-ward beauty is recorded, we are led to dwell upon the spirit of childhood, its sweet gravity, its serious outlook on the world to which it is still a stranger.
